Announcement by Treasury Department officials yesterday that a satisfacreement had been reached beween them and officials of the Na-ional Federation of Federal Employes wer alleged poor working conditions in the bureau of engraving and printing was confirmed last night by Luther C. iteward, president of the employes or-

Announcement followed a conference of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury D. S. Dewey, A. W. Hall, director of the bureau; Mr. Steward and Miss Gertrude M. McNally, secretary-treasurer of the amployes association. Treasury offintals said that questions of the amount of output and the general working conditions in the numbering division of the bureau were discussed and that adof output and the general working con-ditions in the numbering division of the bureau were discussed and that ad-ministrative officials of the bureau gave assurance that conclusions reached will be entirely satisfactory not only from the standpoint of the government, Assistant, Secretary Dewey explained last night that complaints regarding working conditions were largely the result of misunderstandings between employes and Treasury officials through no fault of the latter, and that they would be eliminated through a rearrangement of working hours and the supply of work and increase of working hifts, shortening and elimination of rest periods being the basis of complaints of the workers.

Silent on Charges.

In accordance with an agreement the Treasury officials that the recent icident had been satisfactorily closed, deration officials declined to discuss Incident had been satisfactorily closed, federation offisials declined to discuss the charges of "sweat shop" methods imployed in the direction of bureau work through J. F. Gunther, bureau of efficiency expert, with the cognizance of Director Hall, regarding which neither cared to comment under the present circumstances, they said, agreeing that all information concerning the bureau on Federal end of the matter should come from the Treasury. Treasury officials said the complaints were greatly exaggerated.

Statements attributed to bureau union officials alleged that Gunther had raised the standard output of the numbering division which stamps the purrency, gives it a final count and puts it in packages, and that he had stood, watch in hand, behind the most efficient girls in the division, timing them.

DEATH OF VANZETTI AND SACCO JULY 10 DECREED BY COURT

Each Condemned Man Makes Protest When Sentence Is Imposed.

JUDGE AND PROSECUTOR ARE CALLED UNFAIR

Jury Assailed as Being Prejudiced; Hysteria of War Blamed.

Dedham, Mass., April 9 (By A. P.) After seven years of waiting Nicola the sentence of death pronounced upon them today. In those seven years echoes of the case have been heard on several continents. In the same court where they were convicted of murder by a jury in 1921, they were condemned to day to be electrocuted at the State prison in the week of July 10. Sentence was imposed by Judge Webster Thayer, who presided at their trial.

Both men accepted the court's invita-tion to make statements before sention to make statements before sentence was pronounced. In dramatic addresses neither asked for mercy, but each protested his innocence of the crime of which they were found guilty—the murder of two pay roll guards in an attempted robbery at a South Baintree shoe factory, April -15, 1920—and accused Judge Thayer, the Jury which convicted them and the district attorney who prosecuted them, of prejudice.

Say Trial Was Unfair.

Say Trial Was Unfair.

They contended that they did not get a fair trial on account of their radicalism, a charge that has resulted in worldwide agitation by radical organizations for a new trial. Neither showed any change of emotion as he heard himself condemned to die, although both interrupted the sentence. Vanzetti to ask to speak to his counsel, and Sacco to cry out: "That is the same words you pronounced seven years ago. You condemn two innocent men."

Judge Thayer, before sentencing the two men, pointed out that the question of gulit was one for the jury, and he added: "The court has absolutely the people of our principles, against the foreigner. The latter course will be taken immediately, their counsel, William G. Thompson and Herbert G. Ehrmann, announced tonight.

In the absence of a statement from the governor, who was not at his home in Boston today, it was recalled he previously had stated that the evidence in the case had not been submitted to him and that consequently he had not formed any ophinon.

Special precautions had been taken to guard against violence or disorder in connection with the sentencing of the two men. There were no demonstrations.

Sacco First to Speak.

After Judge Thayer had opened court at 10:05, District Attorney Winfield M. Wilbar moved for sentence. The clerk of the court asked Sacco if he had "anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed."

"Yes, sir," Sacco replied, rising beside Vanzetti in the prisoner's cage. "I never know, never heard, even read in history, anything so cruel as this court. After seven years prosecuting they still consider us guilty."

He paused and then went on to out line his radical principles, setting the "oppressed class and the rich class"

In the event the State judge refused to stay execution they still would have open the possibility of obtaining such an order from one of the justices of the Supreme Court. No motion which they may file in the Supreme Court would of itself have the effect of staying execution.

The Silveira girl was arrested at her New Milford home yesterday, after the death of Smith in the Hackensack hospital, where he had been a patient since the shooting in front of the girl's home on the night of March 12. She was committed to jail, where Hoey has been after the shooting and claim Evelyn had given him the plstol which belonged to be faher, when she believed Smith planned a disturbance at the Silveira home, where Hoey was calling.

The girl told authorities that Smith had asked to call on her the night of the shooting, but she told him Hoey was coming. After hearing a disturbance at the rear door of her home shortly after Smith's car drove up to the house, the girl says she secured her father's revolver, loaded it and placed it on a couch. This, she says, was for protection.

Nor are these the only important unmover quantities. Republicans are wondering what will come of the Lowell boom, which within the week has merged from its native West to set to a branch headquarters in New York, the center of a district that in 1920 gave the former Illinois governors some of his most able support. If the Lowden candidacy proves a washout, six the politicians, will Vice President Dawes, also a McNary-Haugen supporter, step into the breach; and, again, if Coolidge steps out, will Secretary Hoover or some other wheelhorse of the administration fall her to his leadership? ome other wheelhorse of the ad-stration fall heir to his leadership?

Two Democratic Enigmas. On the Democratic side there are at two major enigmas-whether the tly in 1920 and 1924 will again go antly in 1920 and 1924 will again go nto action in 1928; and just what bresidential maneuvering may be expected from the resourceful Senator 'Jim' Reed. of Missouri. To complicate matters, the usual Democratic phalanx of favorite son candidates in ludes this year such unusual repeaters-in-office as Govs. Ritchle of Maryand and Donahey of Ohio.

In the end Washington' speculation in all of these subjects returns to the suestion of another nomination for Reaction Far Reaching.

The campaign to make Gov. Smith ne Democratic nominee likewise has eveloped reactions that are almost stionwide. Holding as much as pos-ble of the great bloc of strength that lade him so formidable a power in sible of the great bloc of strength that made him so formidable a power in the Madison Square Garden convention three years ago, his supporters have widened their activities constantly, particularly in the South.

The latest of the Southern leaders to publicly discuss his availability is Senator Glass, of Virginia, who said mith's membership in the Roman catholic Church would not alone make him unacceptable to Southern Democrats, but added that if the party undertook to follow the governor's anti-Volstead inclination, it would be uncone. As this discussion goes on, William G. McAdoo, who, as Smith's chief epponent at Madison Square Garden, drew a great part of his strength from the South, remains in the background. If the McAdoo people again are seeking delegates they are doing it without the customary brass band.

Few political developments in recent months have attracted so much attention in Washington as the prospect of a statement from Gov. Smith, dealing directly with the tenets of the church of which he is a member. Recently, in open letter published in the Atlantic Policy is Forecast.

There have been reports in Washington that Gov. Smith also might take becasion soon to outline the policy he would pursue toward prohibition if he at in the White House. Some political observers believe an enfort will be made to induce him to make such a statement in reply to Senator Glass.

Others, however, think he will do nothing just now to attract the prohibition spotlight away from the Republican troubles upon which it was sentered by last night's debate in Boston between Senator Borah, a dry, and Micholas Murray Butler, who wants a prohibition repeal plank in the 1928 Republican planterm. Bootleggers' Income Tax Returns Sought

(By the Associated Press.) Sootleggers must file income tax returns, the government contended in a brief filed yesterday in the Supreme Court in its appeal in a case from South Carolina against Manly S. Sullivan.

The circuit court of appeals de-cided against the government, hold-ing that while the revenue act seemingly taxed incomes derived from criminal transactions, it was unenforceable because Congress had not provided immunity from crim-inal prosecutions based on disclosures in tax returns. The constitu tional protection against self-in-crimination furnished a complete defense, the court held, for those who failed to file income tax returns on that ground.

In its brief, the government, how ever, declared a bootlegger in filing a tax return would be compelled to make no incriminating disclosure and further that protection against self-incrimination does not apply to tax returns, which are required by law, and must be made irrespective of any constitutional guarantee "Of course, our first choice in Mary-land is Gov. Albert C. Ritchle. We have elected him three times to the governorship, an office which no other man has held more than once. He is an outstanding and courageous opponent of prohibition and the leading advocate of a return to States' rights principles. The Maryland legislature has unanimously indorsed him for the Presidency. But if Ritchle can not be nominated, Maryland will give its heartlest support to Smith.

"Gov. Smith is admired and liked in Maryland. He would receive all the Democratic and many of the Republican votes. His religion would be no bar. Maryland has an ancient and powerful tradition of religious tolerance. We consider a man's religion to be cuite irrelevant in politics."

"Many of us in Maryland, indeed, consider the fact that Gov. Smith is a Catholic to be an advantage, because we believe that his nomination would clear the air once and for all of the religious issue and reestablish firmly the fundamental American principle of religious toleration."

Questioned about the Borah-Butler

Bruce said:

"The question was ably argued on both sides, but since I am so strongly opposed to prohibition the arguments of Dr. Butler appealed to me as the most convincing. But I agree with both speakers that prohibition must be faced as an outstanding issue of the next election. Neither party can afford to evade it."

The Democratic convention should include in the party platform, Senator Bruce said, a plank demanding the modification of both the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act.

"I do not favor the repeal of the eighteenth amendment," said Senator Bruce, "but its revision to provide for a system of government control along the lines of the Quebec law. The law should recognize, too, the fact of individual differences in the problems of the various States. Much of my effort in the Senate has been directed toward making prohibition an issue in the next election."

Both sides would welcome more light

Both sides would welcome more light on this subject, however, just as both of the opposing coalitions on the farm relief question would like to know more definitely what the folks back home are thinking about the McNary-Haugen bill passed by Congress with the support of Lowden and Dawn, and vetoed by Coolidge.

Very shortly President Coolidge's close friend, former Senator Butler, who is chairman of the Republican national committee, will make a trip across the McNary-Haugen country, and a little later the President himself plans to go West for his summer vacation. There is much speculation here as to whether these two developments may be expected to contribute in any way to Mr. Coolidge's decision regarding 1928. But he isn't saying.

OHIO REPUBLICANS

Confer on Possible Candidacy for Governor.

CONVENTION MAY NAME MAN BEFORE PRIMARY

Democrats to Win Many Elections in 20 Years.

Representative James T. Begg, of Ohio, may seek to reclaim the Ohio governorship for the Republican party. The State political situation and the possible candidacy of Mr. Begg were iscussed at a conference which the Ohio representative had yesterday with Ohio representative had yesterday with President Coolidge, but Mr. Begg said, following his visit to the White House, that he had not yet made up his mind on the proposal.

Ohio Republicans, who have been able to capture the governorship for only two terms in the last 20 years, despite the fact that they have elected Republican senators and carried the State for Republican presidential candidates on many occasions, are making plans for 1928 far in advance.

Several of the Ohio organization leaders have been visitors in Washington and to the White House in the last few weeks. Some of these must have placed the possibility of drafting Mr. Begg for the job at home before the chief executive, for it was the President who brought the subject up yesterday, Mr. Begg said.

Plans Are Disclosed Here.

Plans Are Disclosed Here.

Plans Are Disclosed Here.

The plans of the organization as disclosed here recently by Fred Warner, Republican State chalman, are to have the Republican party indorse a State ticket in 1928 prior to the primaries and adopt the platform at the same time. The leaders hope in this way to avoid the party split which has taken place each election year and enabled the Democrats to elect the governor in the majority of instances.

In the last primary, for instance, Mr. Warner said that the Republican party voted on 11 candidates for governor, while the Democrats put but two men in the field. The result was that after the primary politicians who had supported defeated candidates worked only half-heartedly for the primary winner, and Gov. Vic Donahey was elected for his third term by a greatly reduced majority. his third term by a greatly reduce his third term by a greatly reduced majority.

The benefit which the party leaders hope to gain by adopting the platform first is that it will be impossible then for the candidate to soft-pedal planks which he believes will create opposition, and the issue will, therefore, be fought out on straight party lines.

Representative Begg already has considerable support among the political leaders of the State. It is said that if the plan to indorse a slate prior to the primary goes through that either he or Ed C. Turner, of Columbus, will be chosen.

Begg Urged to Make Race.

Begg Urged to Make Race.

"I have received a great many letters from Ohio," said Mr. Begg yesterday, "urging me to make the race. The President asked me if I was going to run and I told him that I did not know. It is hard for me to make up my mind. I enjoy my work in the House and I don't know whether I am ready to leave it. I told the President that and he said that I must look out for my own welfare."

Another suggestion that has grown out of the many gatherings of Ohio politicians which have been held here in the past few weeks is that former Representative C. L. Knight, of Akron, may enter the senatorial primary in opposition to Senator Simeon D. Fess. Mr. Knight, too, it is said, has not Coolidge and Representative Reed of Pennsylvania and Keyes Oppose Decision of Vice President.

Heated Contests Permitted Both Sides Await Ruling of Court Which is Expected Next Week.

> By NORMAN W. BAXTER. Vice President Dawes, through I action in naming Senator Simeon ress, of Ohio, as a member of the Re "slush fund" committee to succeed Senator Guy D. Goff, of West Virginia

Senator Guy D. Goff, of West Virginia, has not convinced enemies of the inquisitorial body that it is alive after the failure of the Senate to extend its life.

Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, and Senator Henry W. Keyes, of New Hampshire, said yesterday that the action of the Senate's presiding officer had not changed their views relative to the life and power of the committee in the least. Both senators, prior to their statements, called at the White House and called upon the President, but said afterward that their visits had nothing to do with the Reed committee or its works.

Senator Reed in a formal statement said that he regarded the appointment of Senator Fees as "a nullity," and Senator Keyes declared that he had no more intention now than he had formerly of signing any vouchers authorizing the committee to draw on any of expired in the fillbuster which marked the close of the session.

Added to this was the suggestion that Senator Fess, at present out of the city, would have some difficulty in squaring his appointment on the committee with his statement made shortly after the adjournment of Congress that the special committee's existence had expired in the fillbuster which marked the close of the session.

As far as the present members of the Red committee are concerned, they intend, evidently, to await the action of the Federal court in Philadelphia next week. Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, said yesterday that he saw no point in any lengthy discussion of the committee's legality in view of the fact that the whole matter was before the court. He said that he knew of no meetourt. He said that he knew of no meet ing of the committee in the near future and that no further step would be taken until the court had acted on the suit filed by Jerry C. South, the committee's filed by Jerry C. South, the committee counsel.

Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, in his statement made the point that Mr. Dawes could not have been fully aware of the decision of the Supreme Court in the Daugherty case. The powers of the Senate to continue a committee under that decision, Senator Reed said, are unquestioned, but only as far as special committees are concerned where some affirmative action is taken.

Vice President Powerless.

Lacking this, Senator Reed insisted that the Vice President had no power to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Senator Goff, and that furthermore he had no authority to act in the interval between one Congress and the next in connection with any committee.

"The special committee of the Senate which has been investigating the campaign funds of Republican senators has, in my judgment, no authority whatever at the present time, said Senator Reed. "Eloquent arguments have been published to continue such committees through the recess. No one has doubted the existence of this power of the Senate has not exercised its power to continue this particular committee.

"The recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Daugherty case did not decide that that committee continued in power after the expiration of the Congress but merely decided that the Senate as a continuing body had power to continue its committees through the recess when it saw fit to do so. The court said:

"So far as we are advised the select committee having this investigation in charge has neither made a final report nor been discharged; nor has it been continued by an affirmative order. Apparently its activities have been suspended pending the decision of this case. But, be this as it may, it is certain that the committee may be continued or revived now by motion to that effect, and, if continued or revived, will have all its original powers."

"Apparently this language was not called to the attention of the Vice President.

It has been the practice of the Senate throughout its practice of the Senate throughout its existence to regard these special committees as dying with the Congress in which they were appointed, unless the Senate shall affirmatively provide otherwise. If this is not the rule, then hundreds of special committees appointed in the past are still in existence and our Vice Presidents have been remise in not keeping their membership filled. Although the Republicans have made no definite announcement that pro-hibition is not a party matter, as the Democratic senators did immediately after the adjournment of Congress, they have reached much the same conclu-

The tacticians of the majority party are said to be perfectly willing to let matters go along as they are and declare for law enforcement in the party platform just as they did in 1920 and 1924. They insist that there is nothing to be gained by precipitating the prohibition issue either into the campaign for delegates or onto the floor of the convention.

LURKING BEHIND TREES

Rome, April 9 (By A. P.).-Plainclothes detectives, stationed 10 feet apart on both sides of the streets, stand by when Premier Mussolini walks or rides through the public thoroughfares of the Eternal City. This is a noticeable aspect of the protective measure enforced on behalf of the premier.

enforced on behalf of the premier. They apparently have been strengthened during the past few months, although no official announcement has been made of the fact.

The streets are patrolled by a veritable army and grim agents of the law, who make their appearance at their stations long before the time of the premier's arrival. They permit the movement of traffic through the guarded thoroughfares, but they carefully scrutinize all passers-by, particularly those who bear the aspect of being foreigners.

Each time he was forced to show identification documents. Every doorway was occupied by plain-clothes men, and guardians of the law also lurked behind trees or walked up and down and guardina of the law and down lanes and alleys abutting on the main thoroughfares. At some places even windows had police watchers in them. It is noticeable that Musolini has greatly curtailed his program of appearing before the public.

Prospective Pupils Will Be Physically Examined to Remedy Defects.

COMMITTEE HAS MEETING

Initial steps in the round-up of children who will become of school age this summer were taken at the meeting of the special committee of the District Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations Friday in Franklin school

The meeting resulted in the indorse ment by the community chairmen, representing about 40 individual parenteacher groups, of the round-up plan presented by Mrs. Harold R. Smalley, teneral chairman of the preschool cound-up instituted by the local con-The plan is to have each preschool

The plan is to have each preschool child undergo a physical examination some time during next month and to set about immediately to remedy whatever defects are observed, so that the children will be physically fit when they enter school.

The local congress is much impressed with statements as to poor average health among the younger children, particularly such statements as that attributed to Dr. Joseph Murphy, chief medical inspector of schools that 75 per cent of the children on entering school have defective teeth.

The local round-up is part of a national program, begun by the national body, having the same end in view. The board of education, the health department and many organizations are supporting the movement.

The round-up will be accomplished by house-to-house canvassing, it is said, and by workers calling at the schools to obtain from the pupils names of London, April 9.—The announcement in London that France and Italy are joining Great Britain, Japan and the United States in presenting identical notes to the Cantonese government protesting against the Nanking raid and killings comes as a surprise, although it was known that diplomatic negotiations were going on with Rome and Paris.

with Rome and Paris.

It is understood that the adherence of France and Italy was largely dictated by the murders of French and Italian priests by the Cantonese.

The question of sanctions, it is learned, has been kept separate and no decision has been reached thereon between the powers, although otherwise the notes have been completed and the only detail that remains is how and to whom they will be delivered. The present draft is greatly modified from the original suggested by the diplomats in Peking.

Meanwhile, farewells were being paid today to the new British forces which are going to China next week, as well as the Shanghai defense force. Aldershot, the great British army center, wore a mobilization air today as the second Scots guards paraded in the rain before a large crowd of civillans. Farewell ceremonies were held for this unit, which leaves for China Monday, along with the second battalion of Weish guards and two companies of the first Northants battalion.

In addition, two other companies of the Northants will sail Wednesday with the first battalion of the queen's royal regiment, and April 22, two batteries of field artillery will leave while a second air squadron will leave Easter Sunday.

Competent observers here do not share the fears that as a result of the Chinese raids on the soviet embassy the soviets may attack northern China although many reports of heavy troop movements toward Siberia are reaching London and are being printed in the newspapers.

Mexico, the State Department, upon request yesterday, gave out a list of the embassy personnel as of April 1. The name of a man said to have been disciplined there recently was missing from the list. He was, it is said, a frequent companion of high officers of the Mexican army.

It was about a month ago that the United States government received its first definite information that many of its official records at Mexico, City had been pilfered. For some time previously, embassy officials had been disturbed about irregularities in the files of official correspondence, but had not been able to put their collective finger on any evidence of criminal wrongdoing in the office.

The only grain of official information given out on the subject was the War Department's confirmation yesterday that Lieut. Col. Edward Davis, the military attache of the embassy at Mexico City, has been asked to come to Washington to assist in the inquiry. Present indications are that he will be directly from the hands of President Calles that the American government, to whom they were given by Calles.

Such of them as were correct transcripts were, in most cases, documents of small consequence. In the opinion of investigators the only purpose of including them in the material surreptitiously forwarded to President Catles was to furnish a reliable background for about two dozen flagrantly false, infiammatory messages on official government stationery that were photostated and transmitted to him.

The exact time when the false system began can not be learned, but in reply to a query whether it went back more than a year an affirmative reply was received from an authentic source.

Mme. Suad, Once the Wife of John D. Spreckles, Is Now Visiting France.

TO IMMENSE FORTUNE

Ottoman Husbands Praised by American Woman, but She Admits Hazard.

(Special Cable Dispatch.) Nice, April 9.—Setting foot on west n European soil for the first time in five years, Princess Suad Bey, formerly live years, Princess Suad Bey, formerly wife of John D. Spreckles of California, whose matrimonial adventures in Turkey attracted world wide attention a couple of years ago, arrived in Nice yesterday from Constantinople with her Turkish husband and her young daughter, Geraldine, heiress to the Spreckels millions, preparatory to sailing for America in order to effect a financial settlement with the Spreckels family as a consequence of the death of Geraldine's grandfather.

"My marriage has been a great suc-aminy as a consequence of the death of Geraldine's grandfather.

"My marriage has been a great success." Princess Suad, blonde and beautiful as ever, declared. "I am going to tell the Americans the truth about Turkey and hope to convince them that the Turkish men are not brutal savages as they appear to imagine. Marriage between American women and Turks, of course, is a hazardous experiment, but, although my husband has little Turkish folbles, his mentality is not essentially different from that of any other cultured and well educated man. "I love Constantinople, but will be delighted to see America again, for although traveling with a Turkish passport. I am first and always a patriotic American."

method is believed too exponsive to be carried into practice to any great extent.

In retaliation, he said, the coast guard "spots" the rum ships without the limit, watching their movements. When a plane is seen to alight on the water beside them, a radio communication is sent immediately to the beach patrol, and airplanes are ready to follow and search the plane as it returns to shore. It is largely for this purpose, he said, that the coast guard keeps a squadron of planes at Cape May. Since rum running has taken to the air, it is necessary to combat planes with planes. Of course, this is not all the story. There are many times a thousand tricks in a trade like rum running, and the coast guard frequently is confronted with shrewd and cunning moves, modes and inventions, such as only proceed from adventurous minds. Not long ago it was observed that a certain resident along the New Jersey coast war sending a great many carrier pigeons out to sea. An investigation was made, and it developed that the pigeons were performing with remarkable preciseness the same messenger service that the planes were performing. Therefore, there is the barest possibility that the airplane, as a mercury of the air, may give over to the carrier pigeon so far as rum running goes.

Then the tricks of getting the liquor ashore are manifold. Efforts have been made to tow it in in underwater boats. One practice is to wait until dark and hall a fishing schooner that happens

TEARS LONGHORNS TO STAY, REALIZING DREAM OF COWBOY

Barnes, Assistant Forester, to Select Herd From Cattle Nearing Extinction.

FUND FROM CONGRESS WILL HELP HIS WORK

Westerner Gives Kendrick Credit for Helping His Idea of Preservation.

The old Texas Longhorn, king of cattle and especially of those with horns, will be preserved against threatening extinction with the establishment this summer of a permanent herd under government protection, by a former cowboy who long has cherished such an achievement as his fondest dream. This former cowpuncher is none other than Will C. Barnes, who at the age of 69 is assistant forester and chief age of 69 is assistant forester and chief of grazing of the forest service of the of grazing of the forest service of the Department of Agriculture. After a ten-year fight, Mr. Barnes obtained from Congress at the last session an appropriation of $3,000 to purchase a sufficient number of longhorn cattle to establish a permanent herd.

He will leave Washington about May 1 for a trip through the Southwest and on this trip will go into the "prickly pear country" of Texas to pick out the cattle. Then when the appropriation becomes available July 1 he will have the cattle already selected and ready to be shipped to the Wichita national forest in Oklahoma, where the herd will make its home.

forest in Oklahoma, where the nerd will make its home.

Mr. Barnes gives to Senator John B. Kendrick, of Wyoming, who visited Arizona and bought cattle from him back in the '80s, a' large part of the credit in putting through the appropriation. It was due to the senator's eloquence, he said. This eloquence of Senator Kendrick apparently was regnant in its power, considering that Mr. Barnes was only asking for $3,000.

Longhorns Neglected, He Says.

Longhorns Neglected, He Says.

Nevertheless, it is assured now that the longhorn will not be allowed to become extinct, and Mr. Barnes says that when he establishes this herd he doesn't care much whether any other achievements crown his life. He is particularly gratified with the thought that the famous cattle will be preserved through his endeavor. To be permitted to select the chosen cattle in that section of Texas where he knows the best specimens now may be found affords him the greatest pleasure.

Mr. Barnes said that it has been a matter of surprise to him to note how much the famous longhorn cattle have been neglected. This species of cattle, he pointed out, virtually made the Southwest, and with the Indian and buffalo gave to the Southwest most of its romance. Yet, although steps were taken to preserve the buffalo, he said, nething was done about the longhorn. In the Wichita National forest the famous cattle will have a proper setting, for surrounding them will be the Indian, just as in the old days, and adjoining their 10.000-acre pasture will be the pasture in which the buffaloherd which enjoys government protection is located.

Mr. Barnes was in the cattle business in Arizona and New Mexico during 25 years of the wildest and woolest days the West ever knew. In the West of this period he rose to a position of leadership. Yet to meet him now, and observe the unassuming, jovial manner that is blended with his robust appearance, makes one conclude that not all the real men of the old West were tough guys with fierce faces and plercing eyes.

Life Filled With Activity.

Life Filled With Activity.

His life, however, has been filled with several times the activity of most men. He was born in San Francisco in 1858, and moved to Virginia City, Nev., about 1862. About this time his father died, and following his death his mother for a time kept a boarding house. This is of note because one of her bearings was a young reporter for boarders was a young reporter for Virginia City Enterprise whose name was Samuel Langhorne Clemens, later Mark Twain. His mother describthe Virginia City Enterprise whose name was Samuel Langhorne Clemens, later Mark Twain. His mother described young Clemens as a "happy-golucky" sort of fellow who was also a little "quaint" in his ways.

He remembers when the news of Lincoln's assassination reached Virginia City. There was a great tumult. One fellow got drunk, he said, and declared that he was glad Lincoln had been assassinated. This so incensed the zealous cittizens of Virginia City that they tied the man to a wagon, lashed him with a blacksnake whip, rode him to the edge of town on a rail, and bade him leave the country, which, having sobered in the interim, he lost no time in doing.

In this year Mr. Barnes' mother came East, and he lived for several years in Ohio, Indiana, and later on a farm in the heart of what is now Minneapolis, Minn. Still later he returned to San Francisco, where he studied music, became expert at the pipe organ, clerked in a music store, and developed a desire to go to sea. He studied for entrance to the Naval Academy, obtained an appointment, and came to Washington to take the examination. However, he falled, just barely, but failed, despite his diligent studies. Having resolved not to return home, he enlisted in the signal corps of the army, which was then under the weather bureau. The corps school was then at Fort Myer, and there he studied meteorology and telegraphy. He became an expert telegrapher. One of the Instructors at the school was Lieut. Adolphus Washington Greety, who later became a major general and a famous arctic explorer.

Failed to Go to Arctic.

Failed to Go to Arctic.

After completing his studies here, he was ordered to San Francisco as telegrapher, afterward to Tucson, Ariz, and finally to Fort Apache, in Arizona While on his way to Fort Apache from Tucson, he had to change at a way station. Two hours after the stage in which he had traveled was jumped by Indians and every person on board killed.

He remained at Fort Apache the remander of his five-year enlistment, engaging in dozens of Indian skirmishes. As telegrapher it was his duty to repair the wires which the Indians constantly destroyed.

the wires which the Indians constantly destroyed.

It was about this time that Lieut. Greely organized his expedition to the arctic. A call for volunteers was sent out, Mr. Barnes volunteered, and was accepted. He awaited the call to Washington. However, the Apache Indians surrounded the fort, cut off all telegraphic communications, and continued a blockade for about three months. When the call finally came the expedition was already on the way to the arctic.

Mr. Barnes was awarded the Congressional medal of honor for meritorious conduct in the war vith the Apaches. The garrison was hard pressed and the commanding officer determined to send for help. Two menwere chosen for the task, and were given duplicate messages. It was regarded as almost ortain death, but something had to be done, and this was all that was left to do. There were two routes, but Owens, who was chosen with Mr. Barnes asked that he be allowed to take the road. Mr. Barnes then took the other route, a steep trail up a mountain side.

SAVES LONGHORNS

Lure of West Calls.

He swam a river, holding to the tail of the horse. But in the current the pieces of blanket washed off the horse's feet. He started on, but the noise of the rocks was more terrible than ever. Suddenly he was greeted by a volley of rifle bullets. The Apaches missed him, however. He managed to reach Camp Thomas, 90 miles away, and procured aid.

Thomas, 90 miles away, and procured aid.

After a few miles, the trail, which was a short cut, entered the road that Owens was to travel. But Owens' tracks, which should have appeared when he reached the road, were not visible. Two weeks later Owens' body was found almost within sight of the fort. He had stumbled into a party of Indians and had been shot from his horse.

Mr. Barnes entered the cattle business after being discharged. He came to be one of the leading cattle men of the section and was elected to the legislatures of both Arizona and New Mexico. He moved to New Mexico in 1900. In 1907 he sold out and entered the forest service.

means. He moved to kew makes in 1900. In 1907 he sold out and entered the forest service.

When he came to Washington twenty years ago he was to remain only three months. He would not live in the East, he said. At the end of three months, however, he had fallen in love with the city and determined to make it his home. However, the lure of the West still cails him. Once a year he goes West on an inspection trip. When he reaches the plain he makes the saddle his home once-more and the camp hit his equipage. Perhaps his particular business will be to settle some dispute among cattle men who use the government range and those who desire to use it. This is often done in the saddle, as he once did with his neighbors, in the quiet of the shade on the crest of some lofty hill.

P.).—Ramsey MacDonald, Great Britain's only labor prime minister, Britain's only labor prime minister, sailed for the United States on the Aquitania at noon today. With his daughter Ishbel he is to visit New York, Washington and other Eastern cities, leaving for home about April 27. He said he would try to forget British politics during the trip, which is in the nature of a vacation, but before the forgetting process began he told interviewers that the conservatives, the party now in power, was "the only revolutionary party in Great only revolutionary party in Great Britain at the present time." He also characterized the govern-ment's bill for regulation of the trade ment's bill for regulation of the trade unions as "simply deplorable," and added: "It is no use for capital and labor to try to work together while bills such as this are being formulated by the government. The bill will put passion into hearts which ought to possess good will for the good of the nation."

Mr. MacDonald does not expect to appear publicly in the United States and will make only a few speeches at dinners in his honor.

London, April 9 (By A. P.).—Behind the prosale news that Ramsey MacDonald is sailing for the United States today lies a love story which turns the voyage into a pilgrimage to the land he visited 30 years ago during the days of his greatest happiness.

the days of his greatest happiness. Since then honors of state have been heaped upon him. From the obloquy of the world war period when he was of the world war period when he was reviled as a traitor and was probably the worst hated man in all Britain, Mr MacDonald reentered public life, became prime minister, a confidant of King George V and one of the most powerful men of postwar Europe.

But through it all, he has been a lonely figure, for the one person above all others with whom this dour, but romantic Scotsman would have cared to share his honors passed from his presence fifteen years ago, but not from his life. Two rings that he wears on his left hand are the symbol of the lasting dedication of his devotion to a woman's memory.

It was during his first parliamentary battle in Southampton in 1895 that he received a contribution to his campaign fund from a stranger who signed an accompanying letter, "M. E. Gladstone." Soon the young candidate learned that "M. E." stood for Margaret Ethel, the daughter of a distinguished chemist and a niece of the famous Lord Kelvin. A swift courship followed and the couple were married in November, 1896.

Under the program contemplated by Representative Gibson all automobile owners will be required to show that they have paid their personal property taxes in full before they will be issued either new operating permits or license tags. This, he estilates, will add a considerable number of thousands of dollars which heretofore have escaped to the District revenues. It is estimated approximately 8 per cent of the automobile owners in the District evade the personal property tax on their cars. Chatham M. It was a wedding trip that first took the MacDonalds to the United States and it was a hostees in that country who gave such perfect courtesy to Mr. MacDonald and his bride that he has never forgotten it. It is to accept an invitation from this hostess of many years ago that Ramsay MacDonald is crossing the Atlantic again, this time a widower and with his daughter, Ishbel, to renew old memories.

Letter Led to Marriage.

Mr. MacDonald's love story is as romantic as his rise to political power from poverty and obscurity.

It was during his first parliament ary battle in Southampton in 1895 that he received a contribution to his campain fund from a stranger who signed an accompanying letter, "M. E. Gladstone." Gibson believes, too little relation between the tax assessor's and tax collector's offices, and there must be developed a better system of checking on the collection of taxes which are levied. Delinquent Taxes Growing.

Existing tax laws in the District are archaic, he said, as is evidenced by the fact that approximately $5,070,000 was due the District in delinquent personal taxes at the time the committee's survey of the situation was completed. The

FRANCE'S NAVAL PLAN IS NOT WELL RECEIVED

Uncertainty Concerning Building Program Not Removed, It Is Held.

Geneva, April 9 (By A. P.) .- The German and American delegates vainly battled for limitation of military equipment at today's session of the League of Nations commission which is seek-ing to draft a disarmament treaty. Hugh Gibson, United States, advo-cated direct limitation of the military armament used by troops with the colors as well as material held in re-serve, both for the active army and for reservists.

serve, both for the active army and for reservists.

Count Bernstorff, Germany, wanted a clause written into the treaty limiting the amount of war supplies actually held by the governments, including rifles, guns and tanks. He said he hoped by such limitation to secure some reduction of the stocks left over from the world war.

The delegates were unable to agree, however, on the suggestion, and Count Bernstorff dropped it, but said he would bring it up later.

The French delegation today informally distributed among the other delegates to the preliminary arms conference their plan for limitation of navies, which it is understood is now formally backed by the French govern-cerning the exact nature of naval building programs.

The French propose establishing three columns of figures, the first giving the total tonnage necessary for a given country's security; the second the total tonnage which the country expects to reach or to build during the period of the limitation treaty, and the third division of the total tonnage into categories of warships.

These categories would be (a) battleships, (b) aircraft carriers, (c) surface craft not exceeding 10,000 tons, and including cruisers and torpedobats, and (d) submarines.

The proposal further specifies that each country may modify the allocations of its total tonnage at any time, provided it notifies the league of navigure and tons of its total tonnage at any time, provided it notifies the league of navigure and tons on the surface of the surf provided it notifies the league of na-tions one year previous to laying down the keels of warships whose construc-tion would involve shifting from the general program originally announced.

For Theater Service

The Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Washington, and Bishop William F. McDowell, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will deliver Holy week addresses at the noonday services in Keith's theater during the first four days of this week. In other years Bishop Freeman has been the only speaker at these services, but at the suggestion of the bommittee on religious work of the Washington Federation of Churches, which is cooperating with the Episcopal Laymen's Service association in managing the services, it was decided not to confine the week to Episcopalians.

Bishop McDowell will speak tomorrow and Tuesday and Bishop Freeman on Wednesday and Thursday. There will be no services on Friday. The services will conclude the ninth consecutive series of Lenten services by the Laymen's Service association.

ARLINGTON COUNTY INCORPORATION HELI SETBACK FOR YEARS

STATE HIGHWAY WORK CALLED BIG OBSTACLE

Solution of the Governmental Problem Predicted in Ratification of Constitution.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) Richmond, Va., April 9.—Fallure of the general assembly to pass the bill sponsored by Senator Frank L. Ball, providing for an election in Arlington county at some indeterminate date on the question of whether the county should incorporate, is believed here to have precluded any possibility of the county incorporating for several years to come, at least. Measures incorporating cities and towns have in the past been considered strictly as local measures and treated as such, being measures and treated as such, being passed if the assembly delegation ap-passed if the assembly delegation approved of them.

But opponents of Arlington county incorporation argued and were upheld by the committee, headed by Delegate C. A. Sinclair, of Prince William county, that these incorporation measures are not local in application, but have interest to the entire State. The fact that Arlington county has miles of State aid roads, and that the State is obligated to build a modern road to connect with the Arlington Memorial bridge, now that it has been submitted to the assembly as a whole, will prevent any successful attempt at incorporation in the near future, it is said.

Both Senator Ball and Delegate C. enator Ball and Delegate C.

T. Jesse, however, see in the new con-T. Jesse, however, see in the new constitution, which must be ratified by the next session of the assembly and then by the people, a solution of the county's governmental problems. The new constitution provides that a county have any government it chooses embraces the county

At present the county has sort of a county manager, as Mr. Jesse sees it, in that the commissioner of public highways seeks to carry out the directions of the board of supervisors. Admittedly, however, there is considerable dissatisfaction with present conditions. Mr. Jesse believes that by increasing the board of supervisors to five and then giving them an agent, call him whatever you like, to have the work done which they prescribe, a satisfactory condition would be brought about. There is authority now in the county for a county manager in name as well There is authority now in the county for a county manager in name as well as action, for that matter, it is pointed out, but the condition of his appointment is said to be unsatisfactory. Senator Ball had a bill passed at the last session authorizing employment of a county manager and overtures were made to one. The conditions surrounding appointment under the Ball bill, however, are said not to be satisfactory. ver, are said not to be satisfactory None of the spokesmen on either should be an election of whether there should be an election to determine the matter of incorporation contended that there is any appreciable sentiment for incorporation at this time. The election was sought, it seemed, to serve as a block against any move by Alexandria to annex a portion of Alexandria to annex a portion of the county.

Mr. Jesse believes that the cure in this case would be worse than the disease. Under no circumstances does he want incorporation to come about. While he is against any annexation by Alexandria, even this would be better than incorporation, he says. By annexation the county would lose, as he sees it. Potomac yards, the largest taxpaying unit. But losses that would come from incorporation, such as the come from incorporation, such as the loss of State funds for roads and the like, would be much greater, he says.

Mr. Jesse has been giving considerable thought to the plan of increasing the board of supervisors from three to five, and then the employment of a county manager. He is not in favor of the manager having full reign over the county, but would make him simply an agent to carry out the orders of the supervisors.

Would Increase Supervisors.

At present the county has sort of a county manager, as Mr. Jesse sees it, in that the commissioner of public highways seeks to carry out the directions of the board of supervisors. Admittedly, however, there is considerable dissatisfaction with present conditions, Mr. Jesse believes that by increasing the board of supervisors to five and then giving them an agent, call him then giving them an agent, call him. GOLDEN RULE IS URGED FOR RACE RELATIONS

Louis G. Gregory Addresses Second Session of Conference Here.

HEAR RABBI SIMON TODAY

To promote peace and good will between white and colored people of America, the second session of the convention for interracial amity was held last night at the Mount Pleasant Congregational church under auspices of the national interracial committee of the Bahais of the United States and Canada. Allen B. McDaniel, presiding, explained the need for interracial understanding at the pivotal point of America—its National Capital.

Dr. Samuel C. Mitchell, president of the University of Richmond, spoke on "Faith in Friendliness," a spirit which, he said, is essential in treatment of interracial, industrial and international affairs. Illustrations were drawn principally from the suggestion of tional anairs. Indistrations were drawn principally from the suggestion of John G. Jackson, of Virginia, whereby today are found no forts nor fleets on the longest international border line—that between the United States and Canada. Louis G. Gregory, speaking on international amity and world peace, said:

ing on international amity and world peace, said:

"Unity, happiness and freedom have ever exalted nations. Decline has always appeared through forces of inharmony. America, by a stand which enables all races within its borders to dwell in peace and understanding, will maintain not only its own high standing, but also inspire by its noble example all other peoples of earth. There is no greater menace to the perpetuity of the nation than internal dissensions on which foes, if foes there be, always concentrate their attacks.

Children's Rayon Vests and Bloomers

Rayon Vests,

Bloomers, 4 to 16

Lovely and practical Easter gifts—these lustrous rayon undergarments—so fine, so soft, so delicate in weave that they have much of the appeal of heavy glove silk. The soft colors are peach or pink and the gar-ments are beautifully made with carefully woven seams, and the vests have sturdy shoulder straps. Both bloomers and vests are in sizes 4 to 16.

Studebaker Big Six

now outsells the combined total of all the other cars in the world of equal or greater rated horsepower

It is smashing records of speed, records of hill climbing, records of sales.

No sedan with horsepower equal to that of the Big Six, according to the ratings of the Society of Automotive Engineers and of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, sells for less than $4000. To get Big Six power you must pay more than double Big Six prices.

As a result of this big value in power, the Big Six has outsold all these other high-powered cars—eights as well as sixes. Today, as a result of the astounding performance of the New Commander models, sales of the Big Six are far in excess of the combined totals of all other cars (those manufactured in the United States and also those built abroad) which equal it in rated horsepower.

Command a Commander

No words, but only your own hand on the steering wheel, your own foot on the throttle, can tell you why men are trading in cars that cost twice as much, to secure the superior power and performance of The Commander.

'Phone us and we will give you an opportunity to drive The Commander yourself—to appreciate why it has been called "the greatest post-war engineering feat"—why Studebaker salesmen have nicknamed it "the Ball of Fire."

EIGHT ARMY POSTS WILL TRAIN YOUTHS FROM THIS DISTRICT

Held Most Attractive Places in Service From Health Standpoint.

4,865 SLATED TO TAKE COURSE IN SUMMER

Forts Famous in History of Country Will Be Assigned Students.

Eight of the healthlest army posts in the United States will be open to Washington youths and those of Virginis, Maryland and Pennsylvania, when the Third corps citizens military training camps are held from July 7 to August 5. They are Forts Eustis Monroe, Myer and Humphreys, Va.; Forts Hoyle, Washington, and Howard, Md., and Fort Monmouth, N. J., situated in beautiful localities and amid historic surroundings.

Md. and Fort Monmouth, N. J., stuated in beautiful localities and amid historic surroundings.

The 4,865 students from this area, who will attend this year's camps are grouped in two sections, "basics" and "advanced," the latter being classified as "red, white and blue" students according to their progress.

The basic course is for beginners or first year men with no previous military training and provides for elementary military instruction, athletics and physical development, rifle marksmanship, military courtesy, personal hygiene, first aid, sanitation and studies in citizenship. Applicants must be able to read and write English and no further military obligation is involved. The red, white and blue courses are for former C, M. T. C. graduates or those who have had previous military training who choose to advance progressively through the courses leading up to final graduation from the blue course which conveys eligibility for edmmission in the officers' reserve of the army.

May Select Camps.

White and blue candidates in 1927 may elect to be sent to any camp in the corps area where training in their same branch of service is given, but they will be required to pay the additional cost of transportation when the camp selected is at greater distance than the camp allocated to their home territory.

than the camp allocated to their Rolle territory.

Red candidates may choose their branch, but if they desire to attend an infantry camp which is more distaint than the one allocated to their home sections they must pay the additional cost of transportation involved. All advanced infantry candidates are encouraged to attend the same camp where basic applicants are assigned.

Under these conditions Forts Wash-inston and Howard are open to District men in Infantry courses. Fort Eastis, principal camp of the District, is opened for basic and infantry courses for Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia and certain counties of Pennsylvania. Fort Hoyle is for field artillery only, training reds, whites and blues of the entire corps area. The same conditions apply to Fort Monroe and Fort Myer, coast artillery and cavalry training camps respectively. Fort Humphreys is for blue course engineers alone. There will be basics in field artillery from the corps area at Fort Hoyle. Specially qualified basics will be accepted at Fort Monmouth, which is for signal corps reds, whites and blues exclusively, and the course will be held from August 5 to September 3.

The camp quotas are the following:

will be held from August 5 to Septemoer 3.

The camp quotas are the following: Fort Washington, 550; Fort Howard, 550; Fort Eustis, 1,540; Fort Hoyle, 700; Fort Menrouth, 200.
A second camp for basic and infantry students from Pennsylvania counties will be held at Fort Washington from August 9 to September 7. Its quota is 550, and it is believed applicants from the entire area will be accepted up to this limit.

Fort Howard, first of the camps which well provide a month of health, education and patriotism for boys at the expense of the government, is 17 miles southeast of Baltimore, on North point, almost entirely surrounded by the waters of Chesapeake bay and the Patapsco river.

Fort Hoyle, Md., is 22 miles northeist of Baltimore, on a point between Ginpowder and Bush rivers. It is adjacent to Edgewood arsenal, largest chemical warfare station of the army, and was originally a part of the arsenal established during the world war.

Will Use Forts Near Here.

Fort Washington is 12 miles below this city, on the Potomac river, and a mile and a half across the river is Mount Vernon, home of George Washing. It has ample facilities for rowing, swimming and fishing.

Fort Myer, permanent cavalry post, 4 miles southeast of Washington, on the Potomac river, is the home of trick riders, the Capital's army post, and residence of Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff.

Fort Humphreys, 15 miles southwest of Washington, is just south of Mount Vernon, and Fort Eustis was selected in the world war as the artillery practice and training station for troops to be sent abroad for heavy mobile and railway artillery duties.

There are big 14 and 16 inch railway guns at this fort, named in honor of Gen. Abraham Eustis, leader in the war of 1812. Civil war fortifications can be traced through the post, which is on the peninsula between the James and York rivers, 18 miles from Newport News, on the James, and 9 miles from Yorktown, on the York.

It was at Yorktown where the British general, Cornwallis, surrendered to Washington, and the revolutionary war earthworks still may be seen. Jamestown was the first settlement in Virginia.

Fort Monroe is on the Chesapeake

Fort Monroe is on the Chesapeake bay and commands the entrance to Hampton Roads. Old Point Comfort, named by the English in 1607, for its safe anchorage, is there. The fort was named after President Monroe, and during the civil war was garrisoned by a regiment of heavy artillery which took part in the celebrated Monitor and Merrimac naval fight. It is an old world type of military fort, built in hexagonal shape and surrounded by a most, and is the most beautiful army post in the United States.

BACK to Mrs. Woods! Fortunately my room had been vacant. Sanctuary. Even the blank brick wall of the apartment house seemed to be protection. Enfolding me. I shuddered as I thought of the previous evening; the night I swallowed a sob as I saw the room, Bob's roses. In the boy's buttonholes, behind the girl's cars. Fioor strewn with petals. Roses drooping in their holders because of the rank air and cheap cigarette smoke.

As I unpacked I looked with dismay the rank air and cheap cigarette smoke.

As I unpacked I looked with dismay at my clothes. They too had revolted against the rough dancing, etc. Rumpled, torn, all their freshness gone. Only my coming-out dress had escaped. That I never had worn save the once when Bob took me to the Ritz.

I had forgotten everything, even Bob. In my haste to get away. Would he telephone me? I must get in touch with him; let him know I was back with Mrs. Woods. Matt, too. Dear old Matt, who had looked so serious when meeting him in the street, I had told him I was living with Peg.

"I'm sorry you left your rooming house, Bab" he had said. "It was a nice quiet place."

house, Bab." he had said. "It was a nice quiet place."
"Too quiet." I had replied. "A regular old ladies' home."
He had said no more, but the serious look remained. He would be pleased to know I was back.
I was tired. Dreadfully. Working hard at the theater, then the late hours; the constant excitement had worn me out. There were dark shadows under my eyes. My face was colorless.

hardly knew what to say. Knowing how Irene was living, I didn't want to hurt her.

"If you're going to be squeamish, you'll get no fun out of life. A girl in New York without friends and a little fun might as well be dead."

"I think I'd rather be dead than to live as—I have been doing," I declared, unable to keep the disgust I felt out of my voice. Disgust with myself.

"You're a queer one," Irene said.

As I sat at the piano, mechanically playing, I felt ill, confused. Was I queer? Was it strange that I had revolted? I had no wonderful ideals. Driven from the place where I had always lived, unfitted to cope with the world, my only wish to earn enough to support myself. I had read of girls with great ambitions who endured everything to realize them. Girls with talent. But never had I read of a girl like myself. What did I expect of life? I tried to answer that question. What? Surely I wanted more than just

CHILDREN WILL GIVE TO JEFFERSON FUND

Rule Against Solicitation in Schools Waived for Wednesday Contributions.

nesday Contributions.

Children in the public schools, through a special order of the board of education waiving the rule against solicitation of money in classrooms, may contribute Wednesday, in observance of Jeferson day, to the general fund being raised throughout the country for the preservation of Thomas Jeferson's home, Monticello.

The purpose of the movement, as stated by Superintendent Frank W. Ballou in a circular to teachers, is not only to raise the money necessary for preservation of Monticello, but also to stir the patriotism of boys and girls in the schools through their study of the conspicuous part played by Jeferson and his compatriots in laying the foundation of this government.

Dr. Ballou directed that exercises be held Wednesday in assemblies or classrooms, with formal programs of not less than half an hour's duration. He further suggested that no general solicitation of funds be made by officers and teachers, but that pupils be advised that voluntary contributions will be received. Ervelopes to be used in collection of the funds have been donated by the Riggs National bank. ows under my eyes. My face was colorless.

"It didn't pay," I muttered as I looked into the mirror. Yet I knew I would again be lonely. I would miss Pag's gay talk, her companionship. Pershaps I would miss the parties—other things. But I wouldn't think of it now, shuddering as I thought of myself cowering in the areaway.

Strange Bob never had let me know where he lived. Where his studio was. The last time I saw him he told me Miss Van Dorn's portrait was nearly finished. Perhaps he had gone away to have a good time, I thought, remembering what he had told me.

At the theater Irene asked me why I had left Peg Andrews.

"I thought you liked Peg. She lelephoned me you had gone back to your old place."

"I do like Peg. She was always so merry. But I couldn't stand it, Irene. The late parties and—everything." I haven't been used to such a life. I hardly knew what to say. Knowing how Irene was living, I didn't want to hurt her.

RULE AGAIN ON TRIAL TOMORROW IN FATI SHOOTING OF BARBEE

Defendant Convicted of Manslaughter Following Row on Halloween Night.

FIRST JURY INFLUENCED BY PLEA FOR "EXAMPLE"

Repetition of Difficulty in Obtaining Panel Forecast; 75 Names Selected.

Richard Henry Rule, 22 years old Richard Henry Rule, 22 years old, will go on trial again tomorrow in cricuit court at Rockville, Md., for the fatal shooting of William J. Barbee, jr., son of a retired Washington detective, last Halloween night. Rule was convicted of manslaughter at his first trial in December, but was granted a new trial when his attorneys presented a writ of error naming fourteen counts. The case will be heard before the same three judges who presided at the first trial.

three judges who presided at the first trial.

The shooting took place in a small shack near Burnt Mills, Md., which had been fitted out as a club by Rule and several of his associates. Barbee and a group of friends had lost their way to the Indian Springs Golf club, where they expected to attend a fraternity dance.

According to testimony at the first trial, Barbee and several of his companions went up to the porch of Rule's shack and asked their way to the dance. Both the defense and the prosecution agreed on that much. The defense held that Barbee's group were "Eighteenth and Columbia road gangsters," bent on disturbing the allegedly innocent Halloween party at the Rule shack. The prosecution declared that Rule was the aggressor and that the shooting was unwarranted.

Scout Affiliation Stressed.

Scout Affiliation Stressed.

Scout Affiliation Stressed.

The defense took great pains to establish Rule's character as a Boy Scout leader and to accentuate the alleged boisterousness of Barbee's group.

Young Barbee, who also had been a Boy Scout, was a student at Devitt Preparatory school, where he was studying to take the examination for the West Point Military Academy. He was the descendant of a long line of military men. He was a corporal in the Kensington, Md., howitzer company of the First Maryland infantry, National Guard, where he had won promotion rapidly, according to Capt. Clarence V. Sayer, his commanding officer.

Tributes from his commanding officer and from the heads of the school which he attended and from L. E. Kidwell, leader of the Boys' Independent band, of which he was a member, and several other organizations and schools which he attended, have been received by his family. He was a great-grandson of Col. Barbee, an American Revolution officer, and of Capt. Barbee, of the war of 1812. He was a grandson of Robert A. Barbee, who served in the Confederate army and is burled at the Arlington National cemetery. He was 19 years old.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE SHOWS LOSSES IN 1926

Eighteen Leading Countries Report Aggregate Decrease of 5 Per Cent From 1925.

of 5 Per Cent From 1925.

The international trade of eighteen of the leading commercial countries of the world showed a decrease during 1926 of nearly 5 per cent from the high mark of 1926, according to a report by the division of statistical research of the Department of Commerce.

Of all the countries the United Kingdom, owing to the coal strike, showed the greatest loss in trade. The greatest gains were made by Canada and Japan. Only two countries, the United Kingdom and France, showed losses in both exports and imports. However, every European country, except Sweden and Finland, showed a decline in total trade. The British foreign trade declined more than $1,000,000,000.

The decrease in the value of world commerce was largely due to a decline in prices of a number of important commodities, including cotton, sugar, wheat and silk. The decline in value therefore did not necessarily mean a decline in bulk. Although 1926 trade values showed a considerable increase over 1924. The world prices for 1925 averaged greater than for either of these years.

The total trade of the eighteen countries during 1926 was $43,431,200,000, as compared with $45,591,200,000 in 1925. The total trade of the United States decreased a fraction of 1 per cent during 1926. Exports decreased over $100,000,000, while imports increased $74,000,000. He declared that he heard a shout and turned around to discover Rule and Sam Perkins, of Mount Rainier, Md., one of the Barbee group, rolling on the ground. Dalby said he saw no one strike Rule except Perkins.

Slapped on Bare Leg.

Later testimony showed that Perkins, a short youth, had slapped Rule, who was clad in a Scotch "kiltie" costume, on the bare leg, and had shouted, "What ho! The jolly Scotchman." Rule was said to have jumped from the porch and struck Perkins.

Barbee, it appears, was attempting to act as peacemaker. He pushed Perkins to the rear and asked Rule why he picked on such a little fellow. Rule, Dalby testified, then declared that he would thrash any fellow in the crowd. Barbee took half a step forward when Rule pulled a pistol from his pocket and fred.

Cissel was assisted by State's Attorney-elect Robert B. Peter, jr., son of Judge Peter, who will prosecute the case this time.

It is believed that the jury was greatly swayed by Cissel's closing argument in which he arraigned the youth of today and charged the jury with a duty to "show the youth of today that it must bow to authority and law and that if it takes a life it must pay the price." Great difficulty was experienced at the first trial in obtaining a jury, 75 talesmen having been called before the jury was completed. The same difficulty is expected at this trial. A list of 75 prospective jurors has been prepared.

Bill in Congress Seeks to Ameliorate Conditions Held Intolerable.

An army tradition tells of a fussy adjutant at a review of troops who, as adjutant at a review of troops who, as the band passed by, noticing the trombonists' lack of uniformity in manipulating their slides, bawled fiercely: "Come out together there, men!"

As this not wholly improbable story suggests, the military mind encounters difficulty at times in grasping the artistic point of view. Many years have passed since the trombone was adopted by our army bands. Yet, while other service branches have undergone radical and startling developments, the service branches have undergone radi-cal and startling developments, the army band is in some respects not so far advanced as it was prior to the war with Spain, even in the days of black powder and jaunty forage caps. Its artistically pitiable state has, in fact, aroused musical America to its defense. But Congress moves slowly. And a bill designed to get contented music from contented musicians died

And a bill designed to get contented music from contented musicians died in the House committee on military affairs in the session just ended.

The bill, as amended and passed by the Senate, would have given little comfort to the bandsmen had it gone through the House in that shape. Its main features were cut out by the economical and suspicious upper chamber, so that it would merely have relieved the musicians from certain menial duties. A futile attempt was made in the House committee to restore these features.

House committee to restore these features.

The original measure, so eloquently advocated in the committee room by Dr. Walter Damrosch and Commander John Philip Sousa, would put the pay of army bandsmen on a parity with the pay of navy bandsmen, commission band leaders, and create a separate music bureau, with a chief of musicians. This is the bill for which another fight will be made when Congress comes together next December.

Practical Uses for Music. The broad question is whether the army band is anything more than a mere frill, comparable to gold braid on a dress uniform. Is the Army band, being engaged in a materialistic and at times depressing business, under any obligation whatsoever to support the fine arts? Recently a proposal was made in the British army to abolish all except field music of drums, pipes and trumpets, as a matter of national economy. Musicians, on the other hand, regard music as all important in upholding the morale, and agree with Dr. Damrosch, who told the House committee that our military music is in quality "below the standards of the smallest and poorest of nations."

Certain it is that the bill has failed to win the sympathy of the great majority of our professional military men A more liberal spirit exists among the guardsmen, whose bands also would profit by its terms. The professional soldier's view is well expressed by a colonel on duty with the War Department, speaking with soldierly vigor and directness to a civilian interviewer:

"This bill, in my view, is obviously the work of a musical nut. It will certainly find few friends in the services capable of performing this work with any degree of success, Mr.

"This bill, in my view, is obviously the work of a musical nut. It will certainly find few friends in the service. The increased pay feature is a minor one to me. I remember very well when a bandsman got $9 a month and made no kick, because he liked soldiering. If Congress has he money to give away all right. What I object to is the plan of reorganization, the placing of bands under their own head.
"Musicians are hard enough to get along with at best. Their artistic temperaments are always being rubbed the wrong way. So to set up a music bureau under a chief with a head full of art and symphonic ambition, with band

It is all very well to have a big band of symphonic size at Washington, representing each branch of service. The Marine and Army and Navy bands, led by captains, are needed for big ceremonials and are needed for big ceremonials and White House functions. And let West Point and Annapolis have their special bands. I am talking about the bands of the line regiments, who follow the army around the United States and its possessions. We don't want any art bands, answerable to a chief musician at Washington. I wouldn't give hell to an outfit of this sort in a regi-

Except in active campaigns, its members led a pleasant life. They had, of course, to look after their own equipment, police their own quarters and perhaps assist their own cook. Otherwise, they practiced, rehearsed, played at ceremonies, gave concerts for the men and did a little soldiering in the form of setting-up exercise and ambulance drill. Such was their status until the army was reorganized after the world war, when all branches of service were placed on a peace time basis except the poor, friendless band.

Bands Are Improvised.

Bands Are Improvised.

As a curious sidelight on the military and the congressional mind, it is interesting to find that even when the regular army had but 25,000 men there was no provision made for musicians. So the army had to provide its own music. This was done by enlisting two bandsmen in each company and detaching them for special duty. To attract player recruits the bands were parmitted to play for hire. Just after the Spinish-American war bands were officially recognized. Musicians were enlisted as such and wore insignia. The band continued to enjoy a separate existence and devoted itself to music. Some years later a law was passed at the instance of the music sample and to play in competition with civilian bands, but a small raise in pay was given in recompense.

Then the European war brought recombe and the forms of composition, poorly done at that. As soon as a player become a proficient he leaves. And to produce a good band a leader must

Better and More Permanent Building at a Big Saving

In the construction of "Honor Bilt" Homes, as in the building of skyscrapers, every modern means of rigid, permanent construction is employed; every method to eliminate waste, to save material time and labor is strictly enforced. The steel beams of skyscrapers swing into place. They are "cut-to-fit" the same as the framing lumber in our "Honor Bilt" Homes.

Solid Construction With Less Labor

The "Honor Bilt" System assures solid construction with less labor, and enables you to build at the lowest possible price. The highest principles of building construction, as recommended by the United States Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C., are rigidly followed.

37,500 "Honor Bilt" Homes Built

More than 37,500 "Honor Bilt" homes have been built. 25,400 have been erected by customers themselves. "Honor Bilt" homes are easy to build. Every piece of lumber is marked to correspond with numbers shown on the plans, which we furnish free: the smallest pieces are bundled and marked so as to save time in locating. With each house we furnish a booklet which explains and illustrates the simple directions. We ship you all material, for a complete house, including lumber, millwork, roofing, building paper, paint and varnish, hardware; also, plumbing, heating and lighting fixtures. One order brings it all. Material we furnish is shipped to arrive at the job when that particular material will be needed. We do not furnish masonry materials.

The Best Easy Payment Plan -Low Interest Charge

All you require is a Building Lot and a little money to help pay some of the labor. You may only need a building lot if you or your friends can do some of the work. Sears, Roebuck and Co. will sell you on easy payments all materials, and advance cash to pay for most of the labor, and give you a long time to pay. A small payment each month as you would pay rent makes you the owner of a good substantial modern home in a few years. Your interest becomes less each time you make a payment. Our EASY PAY-MENT plan has enabled thousands of families to get out of the renter's class and own their own home in a short time.

Highest Quality Material

The lumber furnished for "Honor Bilt" homes is bright and new, fine, dry No. 1 framing, clear Cypress for outside finish, and clear siding. Expert mechanics, modern machinery and good materials insure perfectly made millwork. GIRL SCOUTS

The meeting of Troop 15 was opened with the singing of several songs. During the opening ceremonies with the horseshoe formation, the color guard was formed by Betty Rodier, Mary Folmer and Mildred Bowman. The third patrol will be known as the Fox patrol. The troop will take a hike to Chain bridge during the Easter holidays. A baseball game was played after the meeting.—Scribe Hilda Zwillinger.

The scouts of Troop 17 met Wednesday at the Bethesda school. The tenderfoots learned first aid and bedmaking. The second class girls worked on their tests. They played games, had patrol corners and formation, and then good-night circle.

Troop 53, Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller, captain, held its weekly meeting at the Potomac gymnasium Saturday. Three games of dodge ball were played following inspection. The second class patrols played a signaling game in which the Tinkerbell patrol won.

Troop 58, of Lyon Park, met at the James Monroe school. Capt. Clark made the cocoa and supper was served. Some of the girls played games and others washed dishes. Lieut. Swartz gave instructions in first aid.—Marie Smith, scribe.

Pocahontas Troop 63 opened its meeting with the arroy formation. Sones The meeting of Troop 15 was opened

Although no definite decision has n reached, it is probable that the board convened annually to recomm officers for promotion to the grades of in the line of the navy will meet this sideration now is being given in the board, and it is likely that some officers of the battle fleet will e on the board.

It appears now that as many as ten aptains will have to be selected for advancement to rear admiral. Although the exact number of officers the board be directed to recommend is not rminable at this time, a fairly accurate estimate of the numbers to Se advanced upon redistribution of numbers in grades as a result of accre-tion to the line of midshipmen gradu-ating from the Naval Academy in June is as follows:

of commander and captain in each of the staff corps whose running mates may be selected for promotion, excluding the number of such officers that heretofore have been eligible.

At this time, it appears that there will be no promotions to the rank of commander in any staff corps, since it is not probable that the line selections for that rank will extend to such position on the lineal list as to provide for the eligibility for selection of any staff officer that heretofore has not been eligible for selection. As for the rank of captain, possibly boards will be convened for recommendation of six promotions in the medical corps, two in the construction corps, and one in the civil engineer corps.

German engineer.

Sborowitz declares it is folly to have a red light on the rear of an automobile without a similar contrivance on the radiator cap.

His device for meeting the situation consists of a dozen standard vari-colored electric lights arranged as a radiator ornament, a different light flashing for each increase of 10 miles in the speed of the car from 15 to 60 miles when a red light glows as a warning signal. Some have suggested that the red light ought to register the legal speed limit. So far the police have not taken action to make installations of the device obligatory on automobiles.

The somewhat widespread agitation isn't all due to the promise of an exciting tussle for positions or the novelty of the situation that finds neither of the present champions, the Cardinals and Yankees, regarded as favorites in the preseason "dope."

Most of the nation's fandom is whooping it up as seldom before because it is keenly interested in whether Ty Cobb, aided by Eddie Collins and Zach Wheat, will ignite the Athletics' pennant fire again; whether Tris Speaker, sharing with Cobb the urge for a "campaign of redemption," will make a contender out of Washington again; whether Bill Carrigan can revive Red Sox spirit after a 10-year lay off; what the Giants will accomplish with Rogers Hornsby as captain and Eddie Roush added to the outfield; how eight managers will fare, especially Donie Bush with the Pirates, and Bob O'Farreil with the World's champion Cardinals, and whether Babe Ruth will prove he is worth the $210,000 that the Yankees have agreed to pay him for the next three years.

They will have a big send-off on Tuesday, the opening day, when the Athletics start their quest to fulfill Connie Mack's pennant dream by battling Ruth and the other Ruppert rifles at the Yankee stadium.

So far as the pennant races go, they will develop contests in which the two Pennsylvania entries, the Athletics and Pirates, will meet their stilfest opposition from the two Metropolitan contenders, Yankees and Giants, in the opinions of more than two score basicall writers who contributed their views for the first time to a consensus complied by the Associated Press.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

THE Seagram stable's Gaffsman, carrying top weight and installed favorite, splashed his way down the Bowie stretch yesterday to win the Prince Georges handicap, $5.000 added, from a field of seven. It was the first Eastern start of the year for the son of Jim Gaffney-Flants, and the cold proved that he had lost none of his mud-running ability on the trip from Tia Juana, where he ran in the Coffroth handicap a few weeks back.

Despite the fact that racing conditions were at their worst, the crowd reached average proportions for the meeting. Likewise, the water and mud covering the track did not seem to affect the racing. For the most part favorites scored.

Sharing honors with Gaffsman in winning the feature race was Jockey O. Bourassa, who timed his mount perfectly.

Starter James Milton caught the field in a walking start, from which Today's shift puts it up to Myer to deliver the godos at short or to make way for some one else who can. Just who this some one is is not hard to guess, for Bob Reeves, although no demon hitter, has proven himself a great fielder and, unless Myer shows rapid improvement, he is likely to find himself on the bench before long watching the former Georgia Tech captain covering the territory between second and third.

There was some surprise occasioned this year when it was learned that the Washington team was to open the season at home, the schedule usually calling for turn and turn about and the Nats started the 1926 season on their home heath.

This will be a permanent arrange-

Starter James Milton caught the field in a walking start, from which the Flamingo farm's Contemplate fairly jumped into the lead, with Stirrup Cup., from the Greentree stables, just behind, and the rest of the field strung out like a ribbon as it took the clubhouse turn. Gaffsman, tightly held by Bourassa, was running fourth. Bluege, however, has become so used to playing third that he did not take kindly to the change, while Myer has not shown any particular class as a third baseman. The change apparently weakened two positions instead of one and today saw the pair doing business at their old stands.

There was virtually no change in the order of the contestants until the far turn when Gaffsman began to move up determinedly. Contemplate, still ahead, was having his troubles with Stirrup Cup.

Once straightened out in the stretch, Gaffsman came up on the outside, fought a momentary duei with Stirrup Cup, sped past the tiring Contemplate and, with Jockey Bourassa, all arms and legs, and the pair hardly recognizable for their mud coating, won going away. Stirrup Cup was second, more than two lengths behind, while Contemplate managed to stagger into the third honors.

The time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:53, considered good for the condition of the track.

The public confidence in D. L. Richards' Tillie was rewarded in the opener when the little filly came from the mud-flying regions in the rear of the field to score over the group of platers essaying to capture the 61/2-furlong dash.

The veteran Muskallonge set all of the early pace with Candy Maker and Poxmore nearest to the leader. Bourassa was able to keep Candy Maker in stride the last sixteenth, but Muskallonge and Foxmore had dropped out of the pic-ture. Jockey McCrossen found an open-ing pear the center of the track and ing near the center of the track and guided Tille through a length ahead of Regret bore the silks of Harry Payne Whitney, who bred her in Jersey, to victory in 1915, the forty-first Derby, James Rowe, the developer of Regret, believed six years later he was sending a better miss to the post in Prudery, daughter of Peter Pan and Polly Flinders, but Prudery succumbed to the Probably none of the score of filies recently named for the fifty-third derby will get much consideration in the betting futures between this and May 14. Still it is easily possible that one of them may win. The 2-year-old racing of last season was not characterized by the development of an outstanding star.

There was no Max. o' War, no Tryster, no Morvich, no Pompey.
Chance Shot, Scapa Flow, Valorous, Draconis, Osmand, and several of the other successful colts appeared to be pretty close together. If they and the others had been handicapped for a race of one mile at the end of the year. Chance Shot, probably, would have had the call, but Scapa Flow, Valorous, Osmand and Draconis would have been weighted close up to him.
There were, however, some exceptionally good fillies, notably, Fair Star, Bonnie Maginn. Candy Queen, Termagant, and Lodina, which acquitted themselves with high credit in the best company. Bit o' White and Painted Lady were, their handlers thought, better than they showed. No 3-year-old filly can properly be considered a good betting proposition in spring. Nevertheless, now and again, a Beldame, an Arful, a Flying Fairy, a Regret or a Cleopatra appears. It is never wise, therefore, to discount brashly the chances of such as the better filly nominations for the impending derby. chances of such as the better filly sominations for the impending derby.

James Rowe declared last spring when Pandora, Pantella and Bonnie Pennant were beating smart colts on the Long island courses that racing had not seen his best filly. Termagant was the miss he had in mind. He neld that daughter of Whisk Broom and Mrs. Trubbell back until the horses got to Saratoga and, although Termagant didn't win one of the big stakes revived there or succeed at Belmont park later on, she ran some astonishingly good races.

After defeating a bunch of youngsters of her own sex at 5½ furlongs and trimming some brisk colts at 6, she lost the $65,000 Hopeful by the narrowest of margins to Lord Chaucer.

That Termagant would have won the Ropeful if Pony McAtee, her rider, had attended strictly to the business of gating her down in front was the opinion of a crowd of 20,000. McAtee felt it his duty to hamper Scapa Flow as much as possible. While he was shouldering that smart son of Man of War out at the turn for home and through the last quarter, Lord Chaucer slipped up on the rail to nose Termagant out. Kiev, Chance Shot, Bois nagant out. Kiev, Chance Shot, Bois fe Rose and some other good colts rought up behind Termagant. The daughter of Whisk Broom had cant chance in the ensuing Belmont ark futurity. She was knocked siderays at the start. She made a gallant id after McAtee righted her, but she ad lost too much ground to catch capa Flow. Candy Queen, Valorous, dios and Gun Royal. It was significant that McAtee, the first jockey of the stable of Harry Payne Whitney, referred Termagant to Valorous as a sturity mount.

It may be worth remembering that Rowe has named her for the derby in preference to Pandora, Pantella, Bonnie Pennant, Overture and Maid of the Mist. Termagant is bred on the female side like Upset, he the only horse that ever beat Man o' War and a Latonia derby winner.

Fair Star, a daughter of Wrack and toile Flianta, she a daughter of Fair lay, was last season's biggest 2-year-d winner, a distinction she owed to er victories in the Semima stakes, injural at Laurel and the Pimlico furity renewal.

Bred to stay, Fair Star proved one of the hardiest of last season's camaigners. The deal under which Hornsby came to the Glants last December in exchange for Infielder Frank Frisch and Pitcher Jimmy Ring was precipitated by differences between the player and Breadon over salary and club management. YANKS THE PENNANT HAZARD IN AMERICAN LEAGUE

Nationals in Running

Pirates, Cardinals and Giants Favorites in Old Circuit.

Athletics Are Respect ed: Cleveland a Possibility.

Manager, New York Giants.

New YORK, April 9.—With what looks like the biggest baseball season only a few days away, and siter observing the work of the various clubs in Florida for nearly two months, I am pretty well convinced that three clubs will be hooked up all summer in the National league, and to win the American league pennant any club will have to beat the Yanks.

There is no denying that the Athletics have a wonderful chance and that Washington, Detroit and Cleveland will be strong contenders. Still, the Yanks are champions and must be recognized as such. They have shown already what the other clubs are trying to show. The White Sox also will be up there in the fight if Johnny Mostil comes back to his usual form. In the National league, we are bound to have the hottest and closest race we have had in years. More clubs are actually even up in the run for the pennant. Manager, New York Glants.

Picking out one club as a win-ner, after all, is sort of a guess. So many things may crop up to offset a man's judgment. Incl-dentally, that is what makes base-ball such a popular national sport.

It is, of what Robbie will be able to do with his new Brooklyn club and what McInnis can accomplish with the Phillies. It is pretty certain that Robbie will show up with a strong pitching starf and will cause a lot or trouble. Still, his club down to seem solid enough yet to be ranked higher than a place in the second division.

The Jewish Community Center baseball team will hold its initial practice of the year this after on. The players will report at the Jewish Community center at 2 o'clock. Manager Goldberg is arranging an attractive schedule, which includes games with teams of Norfolk, Richmond, Philadelphia, Baltimore and centers of other Eastern cities.

The following players are requested to report in uniform: Ellis Goodman, Gilly Attenberg, Is Heller, Ben Sauber, Wolfe, Walt r

They all rate strong; all have punch and speed and pretty well-constructed defense.

Then we can't deny the Reds a chance. They proved their fighting qualities last year. At the same time I figure that the Reds and the Cubs and—yes, I'll put in the Braves—will be fighting it out for one of the four places in the first division.

The weak clubs in the two leagues right now appear to be the Red Sox, the Robins and the Phillies. It is, of course, a matter of speculation as to what Robbie will be able to do with his new Brooklyn club and what McInnis else knows. He will simply have to show what he can do. They say that Cobb wouldn't get the work out of his men. I am not so sure of that, either.

things. Always, though, you will find one club falling to pleces after having made a good showing. It seems inevitable.

It does not stand to reason that a lot of good ball player—wouldn't work will have that bad luck this coming season, but you may be sure it will happen to somebody.

The spring work of the Cardinals has shown conclusively that they still have the championship spirit. They are just as strong as last year and with much more confidence and assurance. It is problematical as to how Bob O'Farrell will succeed as a leader. That is one thing nobody can count on in advance A man may be the best ball player in the world and not develop that odd quality that can be discovered only by actual experience.

It does not stand to reason that a lot of good ball player—wouldn't work man as another. After all, it is for their own benefit that they are working. So the effect of new management is invariably a matter of speculation. The Athletics look very good to me in the American league. They have a lot of brains and punch. Then, Connie in the American league. They have a lot of brains and punch. Then, Connie fense, it is pretty hard to beat a pitching staff like Groves, Rommeli, Gray, Wahlberg, Pate and Quinn. My best impression of the Athletics is what I get from Connie himself.

"Yes," he said. "I have such good pitching that I am satisfied with it."

The Nationals also have brains and punch, plus a wonderful outfield. Washington's main problem is the infield, and Harris has again shown himself an astute manager by trying the shift of Buddy Myer to third and Bluege to short.

Though a good young ball player, uddy Myer did not show strong as a igh-class shortstop. At third he may e much better.
Cleveland was up there last year and he club fs just as strong. McAllister is getting a lot of work out of that lub.

is getting a lot of work out of that club.

Dan Howley is also instilling a lively, fighting spirit into the Browns. He will get the best out of them, you may count on that. The success of the club really depends on Howley's leadership.

Our club, the Giants, is undoubtedly better this year. The loss of Ross Young and the temporary loss of Jackson will cripple us to a certain extent, but the club as a whole is strong. Our pitching staff is strong. Barnes, McQuillan, Grimes, Fitzsimmons and others are in fine physical shape. We will also get quite a lot of help from Dutch Henry, formerly of the Brooklyn club. I am quite satisfied with my catching staff—DeVormer, Cummings and Hamby.

With Hornsby at second we feel

With Hornsby at second we feel rengthened, especially in the making f double plays. I needn't mention hat Hornsby's hitting will mean to us. We are very hopeful this year, but I now that the Giants, or any other tub. is going to have a tough Job beating those Cardinals and Pirates.

appearance on the home field in Potomac park, May 1, according to an announcement of the president, Miss Lydia Archbold. The Washington club will play in Baltimore the following week, and the third match will be played on the field of the team holding high score in the first two games.

Eight of the players turned out for practice Friday morning and another workout will be held tomorrow morning on the cinder road in Potomac park. It was originally announced that the polo field would be opened shortly, but the recent bad weather has postponed the date.

Kenilworth and Curtis-Hyde schools won victories yesterday in the Elemen tary School Schlag Ball league which is in progress in all public schools of the city.

With Kenilworth and Blow locked in a tie at the last inning the Kenilworth players brought in three runs for a 9 to 6 victory in the Rosedale division schedule.

The winning players were: Helen Hayes, manager; Hilds Fischer, manager; Helen Roloff, Marie McClain, Anita Warzin, Nettie Martin, Lillian Adair, Edith Mortseld, Ritta Armstrong, Leona Leslie, Genevieve Flynn and Josephine Owens.

in a singles and doubles duckpin event at Convention hall next Saturday, hoth afternoon and night, it will bring together the greatest aggregation of pin artists that have ever competed for small ball honors.

Total pinfail for the ten games will doubles teams competing in five games in the matinee program with the concluding five, booked for the night match.

singles also will be bowled in fternoon and night with Paul John Rupple. Barney Spinella lenn Wolstenholme booked as the ners for the night's match.

Much speculation prevails among the local fans as to the winner of the doubles and singles, but most of the fans are backing the hometown entry for both matches. Both Wolstenholme and Campbell have gained honors in both singles and doubles events, the former never losing in the singles, while as a pair they have challenged any two-man team in the country at the small ball game.

Intercity companies took by a margin of 46 pins, largely through winning the first game by 55 points.

This event, however, will be rolled under slower conditions, four men rolling in each pair of alleys. This is expected to be of a great advantage to Barney, as well as to Paul Pohler, the New England entry. Pohler, who comes leve halled as the champion of the lew England States, is an ardent stunt of the game. He proved this bend doubt when he competed here twinter, and impressed fans with close attention he gave every turn be ball.

However, it must be considered that big handleaps were awarded the three shead of him in the first block, while no handleaps are allowed in this block. The scores of the leading ten follow! Volmer. 639: King. 633; Eschoff. 616: Goodall, 610: Roberts, 608: Dern. 599: Etringer. 599: Gooding, 589; Balley. 573, and Cole. 568.

Gillespie, who was scheduled to pitch yesterday's game for Georgetown university against Dartmouth, which was rained out, will probably start tomorrow against Yale.

In addition to the Yale game, Georgetown will also play Lafayette and Roly Cross in home games this week, the first on Thursday and the latter contest Saturday. If Gillespie is successful tomorrow he will probably start against the Worcester collegians. If not, Coach Egan will give some of his rockie mound material a tryout.

I can't play golf on Tuesdays, E'en though the skies be blue

It happens that on Wednesdays I have no chance to play;
While Thursdays find me at my desl;
I can not get away.

On Fridays and on Saturdays
The story is the same; So only upon Sundays Can I get in a game.

And yet, Oh, golfers, weep with me! The one sad fact remains
That when at last the Sundays come
It almost always rains.

An employe of the bureau of engraving and printing and not born with a silver spoon in his mouth, Voigt was compelled, when he took up golf as a recreation, to resort to the public links. It was not long before he became the star player of the East Potomae park course and was regarded as an unbeatable opnoment.

He had just begun to take the game seriously when in 1923 he won two public links tournaments and in 1924 easily won the title of District public links champion. He then joined the Bannockburn club, of which organization he is still a member, and as his record shows, has marched steadily forward from victory to victory until now he holds or has held all the championship titles in this section.

Voigt's success as a golfer is due, first of all, to his consistency. He is always in the low 70's. Some golfers are 68 today and 82 tomorrow, but Voigt does not belong to that category. The secret of his low scoring lies in his long and straight drives, the masterly

The press dispatches from Pine-hurst stated that in his round on the third course Voigt was on every green in 2. Those who have watched Voigt play can readily understand how this feature of his work would impress even the most casual ob-server. With the green for a target he plays a buil's-eye shot. The pin may be 175 yards distant, but none the less the ball files like a bullet, straight for its destination.

and copying great players, but he rivals "Chiek" Evans, one of the greatest iron players of his time, in the accuracy with which he can reach the green from any distance. He hits the ball with confidence, strength and judgment, putting a crispness into the shot that is a joy to behold.

Outside of his technical skill. Voigt's greatest asset is his ideal guiding temperament. It would a no exaggeration to say that when no exaggeration to say that when he plays he seems utterly devoid of nerves. Phicgmatic to a marked degree. andisturbed by anything his opponent may do, he plays his round with the apparent unconcern of a marble statue. He is concentration personlified.

Bannockburn members were thrilled last Sunday morning when a visiting woman golfer, playing with Miss Alice E. Short, stepped up to the tenth tee, adjoining the clubhouse, and slammed out a 200-yard carry to the high grade on this new hole—a feat which the men golfers are proud to accomplish. The visitor was Mrs. Louis Von Schmelker, of Los Angoles, Calif.

When you are playing cumulative syndicates and the halved holes have been piling up, and you pitch a ball into the cup on the sixteenth green from the side of the creek for a birdle 2, as G. H. Chasmar did last week on the columbia course, ain't it a g-r-r-and and gi-l-orious feeling?

The fact that he is a long driver goes without saying, for all good golfers, as Jim Barnes insists, must hit a long ball from the tee, but few golfers are as consistently straight as Voigt. He has a full swing and brings the club head against the ball with terrific impact. Tall, compactly built, without an ounce of superfluous flesh, he coordinates all his well-trained muscles in his driving with tremendous effect.

It is as an iron player, however, that

On the sixth hole his drive carried to the side of the hill near the, fairway trap, while on the seventh hole his ball stopped only a few feet short of the trap in front of the green. He had no trouble in driving over the green on the seventeenth hole, a carry of over 250 yards.

If Gienn Spencer, of Green Spring Valley, was as good in all the features of the golfing game as he is in his drives, he would be a wonder. When he played in the Middle Atlantic professional tournament last week on the Columbia course he gave everybody a thrill when he hit a bell off the tee. For instance, on the first hole, he did not aim up the fairway but deliberately played over the trees toward the green and the ball carried over the sand trap guarding the green. He played the fifth hole, which is over the sand trap guarding the green. He played the fifth hole, which is over with a drive and a mashle niblick, his drive coming to rest in the rough beside the big traps.

On the sixth hole his drive carried to the side of the hill near the fairway trap, while on the seventh hole his ball stopped only a few feet short of the trap in front of the green. He had no to touble in driving over the green on the seventeenth hole, a carry of over 250 yards.

Delay in Seeding in Northwest Operates to Maintain Wheat Generally Steady.

SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE SHIPMENTS SHOW GAIN

Cash Corn Advances at Some Points; Oats, Rye and Barley Higher.

Fair domestic demand and export inquiry, together with delay in seeding in the Northwest, held wheat prices in this country generally steady for the week, offsetting liberal market arrivals and the good condition of the domestic winter wheat crop, states the weekly grain review of the United States Department of Agriculture. Moderate receipts of corn helped the market for this grain while maiting harley at Milwaukee reached a new high point for the crop. Oats made fractional advances at some markets while rey and flax were practically unchanged.

Wheat: Winter wheat condition on April 1 is reported by the department at 84.5 per cent of normal, the highest for that date since 1921. A year ago the figure was 84.1. All important winter wheat States in the eastern, central and north central sections show an improvement in condition since December 1. In the western part of Kansas, and Oklahoma, however, it has been too dry for wheat and the condition in these States and Texas is lower than a year ago. On the other hand trade reports state that cold, wet weather has delayed seeding in the Northwest and is delaying plowing in the Pacific Northwest.

World wheat markets were practically unchanged. Shipments from the Southern hemisphere were about 1,700,000 bushels larger than for the previous week but European demand continued active and Liverpool May futures closed April 8 at a slight advance. Trade reports, indicate that European crop conditions are somewhat better than a year ago.

Mill Demand Active.

Mill Demand Active.

Mill demand for wheat was moderately active in Southwestern markets. Northern mills were good buyers at Wichita while outside mills, exporters and local elevators furnished the principal outlet at Kansas City where fair amounts of the lower grades were moving to the gulf. Export bids at the gulf averaged 10 cents over the Chicago May for No. 1, hard winter. No. 2, hard winter 12 per cent protein sold at Kansas City at 2½ to 3 cents over the May option, 12½ per cent 3 to 4 cents over and 13 per cent 4 to 5 cents over. Light receipts at Minneapolis forced mills to draw a large proportion of their requirements of high grade wheat from elevator stocks. No. 1 dark northern 12 per cent protein at Minneapolis sold at 2 to 6 cents over the May future, which closed April 8 at $1.32%; 12½ per cent sold at 3 to 7 cents over and 13 per cent 4 to 8 cents over. Mill demand at Duluth was chiefly for high protein Montana wheat and ordinary offerings went to the elevators.

Demand for durum was quiet and premiums held barely steady athough offerings of good milling quality were light. Fair export sales were reported. About 16,200,000 bushels of durum wheat have been accounted for this season to date, in inspections for export at United States wheat, compared with around 14,360,000 bushels a year ago. No. 1 amber durum sold at Minneapolis 5-16 cent over the Duluth May future, which closed April 8 at $1.45%.

Soft wheat advanced a cent at St. Louis, where light receipts offset limited mill requirements. Additional wheat was sold for export although high water was interfering with loading of barges. Demand was improved at Cincinnati, where milling was more active. Southern feed manufacturers Demand was improved at Cincinnati, where milling was more at Cincinnati, where milling was more active. Southern feed manufacturers were inquiring for low grades. Wheat markets in the Pacific Northwest were dull and sales of new crop wheat were larger than those of the old crop. Dealers expected financial conditions in Japan to restrict wheat imports there. Hard white wheat was quoted at around $1.38 and soft and Western white wheat at $1.32.

Corn Prices Advance.

CORN—Corn prices advanced at some markets, largely because of local demand but inquiry in general held about steady. Receipts in Texas fell off and prices there worked sharply higher. Cash corn advanced 2 to 3 cents per bushel at St. Louis, where wet weather reduced market arrivals. Buyers at Cincinnati were forced to secure most of their supplies from elevator stocks. Sales from Omaha to the Pacific coast were limited and inquiry was only were limited and inquiry was only moderate at Chicago.
Oats and rye—Oats prices were steady to higher. Prices were generally unchanged at Chicago and the Northwest, changed at Chicago and the Northwest, and demand slackened at Omaha, but quotations were higher in Texas. Limited offerings and more active demand forced an advance at St. Louis and Cincinnati. The rye market held steady in sympathy with wheat with good export inquiry imparting a firm tone. Mills were active buyers of the best grades. Barley-Barley markets were firm and higher. Receipts continued light at central Western points. Best grades soid at Milwaukee at 86½ cents a bushel on April 8, and a scarcity of maiting barley at that point was forcing brewers to take some of the ordinary grades. Quotations at Chicago averaged a cent higher at 65 84 cents and at Minneapolis prices ranged 59 77 cents.

On the Pacific coast light offerings and at Minneapolis prices ranged 59@77 cents.

On the Pacific coast light offerings at San Francisco held prices firm, but demand was reported dull in spite of more active barley markets in England. Shipping barley was quoted up to $1.75 per 100 pounds with feed barley at about $1.50. Local demand firmed the barley market at Portland with quotations about $32.25 a ton. Demand for barley in English markets was much improved, and continental inquiry was also more active. California superior barley was not quoted at the end of the week, but English best malting was selling at $3.05@83.25 with good quality selling at $2.72@82.99. American malted at $2.02 with California and Plate barley, $2.07, while Australian chevaller affoat was quoted at $2.57

Operation Is Found Helpful When Utilized as Cooperative Unit.

MARKET HAS LIGHT DAY

By F. W. PATTERSON.

The use of trucks and motor buses by railroads is continually being extended. At the beginning of 1926 there were nine railroads having an annual operating revenue of more than $1,000,000 and designated as class 1 roads, operating buses. Now there are 23 class 1 railroads with bus service. During the year the number of buses in railroad such as a service. During the year the number of buses in railroad operation trebled and the number of trucks doubled, while independent bus and truck operation showed a similar expansion.

In May of last year the Interstate Commerce Commission began a nation-wide investigation into motor bus and motor truck operation, the first official effort to collect information concerning this new factor in transportation. It was discovered that the steam railroads, including all three classes, were operating. 1,300 motor buses with a route of mileage of 5,332. In addition, independent companies were operating, in competition with railroad service, 19,683 buses, covering routes of 343,864 miles, and 43,852 trucks, covering routes of 715,057 miles.

"These figures indicate that motor transportation as a supplement to the railroad systems is only a small pro-portion of the traffic handled by indeportion of the traffic handled by inde-pendent and competitive motor com-panies," say Dominick & Dominick. In New England the survey develops that only one motor truck with a route of 6 miles is running in conjunction with a railroad, but 3.92 motor trucks, with a route of 84,346 miles, are running in competition with the railroads. While not all of the railroads reported to the commission, it is safe to say that there has been no decrease as motor transhas been no decrease as motor trans-portation has continued to expand, and the use of motor trucks and buses has become an important part of freight and passenger transportation.

Used on Cooperative Basis. Hitherto, the independent motor transport companies have developed their lines more thoroughly than the railroads, because the loss in railway traffic has not been sufficiently im-portant to demand that the railroads should compete through extensive motor operations of their own. Gradually the railroads are developing the motor motor operations of their own. Gradually the railroads are developing the motor truck and bus as a cooperative instead of a competitive unit by supplementing the railroad service with motor transportation. The overhead and cost of construction is much less for a short bus or truck line than for a railroad spur, and the motor transport routes can be altered to meet the needs of the population, while a railroad route is fixed.

The production of trucks and buses has shown a steady increase as follows:
In 1922 they numbered 252,668, and increased in all years except 1924 until at the end of 1926 there were 530,000

"The problem of the saturation point has not come up for consideration at all," says the Dominick & Dominick reviewer. Both in independent and in railroad operations the demand for motor trucks and buses will continue to

The Force-Adams P.-T. A. held its regular monthly meeting Sunday. A meeting of the grade mothers preceded and arrangements were made for continuance of candy sales on Tuesday at Adams school on Tuesdays until Easter and after. Sales are to be held at the Force on Thursdays.

Minutes were read and approved. The roll call showed Miss Gibb's class again winner of the attendance prize.

The following announcements were made: Electric lights installed in lunch room at Force; Dr. Tilley appointed chairman of legislative committee; Mrs. Chambers, vice president, to attend meeting of school board, April 4, at Franklin school to represent Force-Adams P.-T. A.; candy sales a success at Adams and $42 cleared, most of which was to be used to purchase dishes and other necessities for Adams school. Force School orchestra furnished the entertainment followed by a talk by Mrs. Ward, musical director, who made a plea to the association to buy one or more of the expensive musical instruments for use of talented pupils unable to buy them.

The Thomson P.-T. A. will meet Tuesand the finding at 8 o'clock. The speaker will be Dr. M. P. Eslin, of the District Dental society. A play, "The Golden Goblin," will be given by the sixth grade in charge of Miss Bachelor.

Arthur D. Call, superintendent of the American Peace society, and editor of the Advocate of Peace, in an address before the Peabody-Hilton Parent-Teacher association Tuesday afternoon, declared that the three Rs, known as reading, writing and arithmetic, has been changed to rah, rah, rah. After 30 years' experience in school work and as superintendent of schools at Hartford, Conn., Mr. Call said he discovered that the majority of the people have a disease known as "autoitis." They have become extravgant and confused. He spoke on "Is Going to College a Serious Sacrifice?" He believes that the future welfare of the people is in the hands of the college trained, and "that education is what is left after we have forgotten what we have learned." He said the common prince in the modern college seems to be. "attaboy."

Mr. Claus J. Schwartz announced the opening of the Stuart Junior High school to be not later than May 1.

Mrs. Harry N. Stull spoke on the summer round-up and told of the mother's building committee in the summer round-up and told of the hysical examinations to be held in April and May of the children who intend to enter school this fall.

The organization indorsed the Central High resolution on the, student body governing plan.

Children of the first, second, third, fourth and eighth grades gave several plays, readings and songs. The attendance banner was won by the fourth grade, Miss Patterson, teacher. Flowers were sent to Miss M. G. Young, principal of the school, who is on the sick list. Following chalirmen made reports: Mrs. G. W. Lady on preschool work. The Joseph R. Keene Parent-Teacher association will hold its regular monthly meeting at the school Tuesday, at 8 p. m.

A special program has been prepared. Speakers will be S. E. Kramer, assistant superintendent of public schools, and Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter.

A meeting of the Carbery P. T. A. was held in the kindergarten room of the school Thursday. Mr. S. E. Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools and Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter, president of the District Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations, spoke.

A play was presented by the sixth grade pupils, entitled "On Board the S. S. Health."

With the advent of Holy week and a consequent slackening of many activities, a large attendance is expected at the April meeting of the James F. Oyster P.-T. A. The meeting will take place in the auditorium of the school at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

All members, guests, and friends are urged to be present to hear Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter, president of the District congress, talk on the parent-teacher association. It is expected she will give an interesting and enlightening address on the scope and activities of the organization. Mrs. Rudolph T. Harrell, president of the school P.-T. A., is entertaining the children at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Joseph E. McCombs presented an

Mrs. Joseph E. McCombs presented an interesting and comprehensive paper on "Food for the Runabout Child" before the preschool study group of the H. D. Cooke school at the last meeting.

One of the novel and entertaining sevents of the chess season at the local club will occur Wednesday evening at a c'clock when the Masked Marvel will appear. A distinguished international player will meet all comers in simultaneous play. The single player's identity will remain a mystery to all those present with the exception of a few of the club officials. Concealed in his entirety behind cloak and mask the master player should furnish no end of amusement and interest.

All those desiring to play are requested to bring both board and chessimen. One of the largest turnouts of local fans in recent years is expected. The club has thrown open its quarters to the public for the evening and there will be no fee of any nature, either for spectators or those desiring to participate in the actual play.

For the edification of the public in general we might state that the visiting master is one of world-wide renown, and the local club may indeed consider itself fortunate in obtaining his exhibition at a minimum of cost. As a competitor in several international master tournaments, and of important American tournaments, he has proved his capabilities. As an analyst of the opening play he has few peers. We will give just a small hint as to his identity by stating that he numbers among his victories the carrying off of first honors in a noted American tournament of 1904. It is possible that the local club will offer a prize to the first spectator or player who correctly surmises the Masked Marvel's identity. A book prize may also be given to the first spectator or player who correctly surmises the Masked Marvel's identity. A book prize may also be given to the first player to win his game from the competing master.

On the following evening, Thursday, the incognito of the visiting master will be removed when he will meet three local players, consulting, in a single exhibition game. The local trio is expected to consist of Club Champion N. S. Perkins, N. T. Whitaker and W. H. Mutchler.

Local fans h More than 100 parents were present.

Miss Catharine Watkins, supervisor of kindergartens for the District, in her address on "Obedience," before the John Eaton's Mothers club on Monday, stressed the importance of the parents knowing what they are trying to accomplish by obedience. Miss Watkins said "obedience is not an end in itself; it is a means to an end, and that end is character development."

Three third grade teachers gave short talks and the rest of the meeting was taken up with election of officers.

The following were elected: President, Mrs. J. N. Saunders; first vice president, Mrs. Franklin Jones; second vice president, Mrs. Franklin Jones; second vice president, Miss Josephine Burke; treasurer, Mrs. L. W. Stephenson; recording secretary, Mrs. A. T. Fowler; corresponding secretary, Mrs. F. A. Caskey.

Nimzowitsch Gives Exhibition.

Mrs. William M. Collins, treasurer of the Langdon-Woodridge Parent-Teacher association, and chairman of the mother's building committee in the congress, has been elected a delegate to the council meeting of the General Federation of Women's clubs, at Grand Rapids, Mich., May 30 to June 4.

Aron Nimzowitsch, Danish representheled at New York, appeared at Chicago on April 4 and gave an exhibition of this skill in simultaneous play. The foreign master encountered 22 players, and finished with a score of 16 wins, 3 draws and 3 losses.

N. S. Perkins clinched first honors in the club championship tournament.

to the council meeting of the General Federation of Women's clubs, at Grand Rapids, Mich., May 30 to June 4.

The April meeting of the Langdon-Woodridge association will feature a talk to parents on dental health. Many of the members of this association are planning to attend the lecture by Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools of Atlanta. Ga., in the National Museum on April 19.

Langdon-Woodridge P. T. A. will be represented at the State convention in the Raleigh hotel, by the president, Mrs. J. H. Garman, and 36 delegates.

Dean Reudiger, of the George Washington university, will speak on "Extra Curricular Activities" at the next meeting of the Central High School Parent Teacher association Wednesday at colorlock.

The nominating committee composed of Mr. Robert Maurer, Mrs. Edwin Reed, Mrs. Andrew Stewart, Mrs. R. J. Joroleman, Miss Mary Crans, and Mrs. L. B. Castell, will present its slate.

The District chairman of the summer round-up chairman for her association and send the name and address to the office, 800 Eighteenth street northwest, apartment 31.

The following chairmen have been appointed and the names sent to the office: Mrs. M. R. Coe, Langdon-Woodridge; Mrs. Rand, Filimore; Mrs. W. C. Gannaway, Mount Vernon Church School; Mrs. L. HOW TO KEEP WELL -By DR. W. A. EVANS-

VACCINES FOR COLDS PROVE OF VALUE.

The proof that vaccination against colds is of some value continues to pile up. Here is a report by Drs.
Repplier and Leamon of their experience in a manufacturing plant. The employes were given an opportunity to be vaccinated free of charge at the beginning of the season of colds. There was no compulsion. One hundred and twenty-five were vaccinated. Of these, one-third went through the season without having any colds. A little more than one-half of the total number has cold records which were a marked improvement over those of previous years. One-sixth of the number vaccinated were not benefited.

The employers kept a record of all resulted in early recessions almost the session progressed new buying appeared which resulted in crossing off many of the early losses and the establishment of many net gains, many in new high territory. The carriers, especially, were strong in the last hour, with Kansas City Southern among the leaders, swinging up to 62½, a net gain of 2 points and a new high.

United States Steel and General Motors scored fractional gains on the cay, but did not figure very prominently in public interest. Nevertheless the latter at one time touched a record high at 185½, and finally closed at 185, half a point over the previous top price. American Smelting gained 4½ points net under active and aggressive buying. Associated Dry Goods was in firm demand throughout the setsion, closing within a fraction of ts previous high and with a net gain of 2 points.

STIFFER MONEY RATES RESTRICT BOND BUYING

U.S. LIST IS IRREGULAR

New York, April 9 (By the Associated Press.).—Although several railroad liens were marked up to new record high levels, trading in today's bond market was quiet, with prices holding fairly steady. Stiffening money rates toward the close of the week and the prospect of another large volume of financing next week tended to restrict buying operations in listed issues.

Foreign bonds moved within extreme-the exception of Mexican irrigation 4s, which moved up over 2 points to a new high record at 36%. Rotterdam 6s and Swiss government 5½s also reached a new high ground, but the gains were small.

new high ground, but the gains were small.

Firmness of the railroad liens reflected the publication of a compliation of February carnings of class 1 roads showing aggregate net income of $70,-045,386, an increase of $6,667,625 over the corresponding month last year. New peak prices for the year, or longer, were attained by Canadian National 4½s of 1954. Central Pacific Short Line 4s, Chesapeake & Ohio 5s, St. Paul 4s of 1925, Chicago, Terre Haute & Southeastern income 5s, Denver, Rio Grande & Western general 5s, Illinois Central 4s, Market Street Railway 7s, Oregon Short Line Consolidated 5s and Southern Pacific Collateral Trust 4s, Erie convertible 4s, series D, were again active, but closed fractionally lower. Missouri Facific first 6s dropped 1½s, and Texas, New Orleans 1½ on one sale each, the latter touching a new 1927 low.

A point gain in Punta Alegre Sugar 7s and the establishment of a new high by American Telephone 5s were the outstanding individual developments in the industrial and public utility sections. Oil liens were heavy on expectations of poor first quarter earnings tions. Oil liens were heavy on expec-tations of poor first quarter earnings by most companies.

U. S. government issues were ir-with quotations holding around the year's high levels, the tone in the other groups-turned irregular in today's short session on the curb market.

Several 5-point swings were noted early in the higher priced issues. Ford Motor of Canada ranged from 425 to 439, Tubize Artificial Silk improved 5 points and Safeway Stores declined 5 points. Goodyear Tire was in supply at the start and suffered a loss of 1% points. Johns Manville also yielded more than a point. American Hawaiial Steumship rose to a new high, while Servel Corporation dropped to a low at 6% Trading in the last hour broadened considerably, and new high records were reached in the industrials. Among these were American Cellulose, Hollander & Son, Insurance Co. of America and Dere & Co. The last-named opened up 7% points and later reacted to the previous close.

In the public utility division Penn Ohio Edison attained a new beak; and American Gas made a further gain selling to 791%.

Oil shares lacked feature and were somewhat easier as a result of the announcement that record production again was reached in the Seminole pool.

Frenchmen to Link Morocco, Cape Verde Isle and Rio.

Two giant air line projects, inaugurating a carrying traffic by airplane nd dirigible that will cover more than 10,000 miles of air lanes crossing vast expanses of water and skirting several continents, are reported by American povernment trade agents to be under way in Europe. One is a French and the other a Spanish project, and the terminal of both lines is to be Buenos Aires, Argentina.

H. Bentley MacKenzie, the assistant attache of the United States Department of Commerce at the American embassy at Buenos Aires, has reported that under a contract rehas reported that under a contract recently signed between the French Compania de Transportes Aereos Latecoere and the Argentine director general of mails and telegraphs an air mail service between Tolosa, France, and Buenos Aires will be inaugurated next September 1. A large fieet of airplanes and seaplanes will carry the mail by relays via Africa and the Cape Yerde Islands.

From Madrid Charles H. Cunningham, the American commercial attache, likewise reports plans are under way to inaugurate a monthly airahip service between Seville, Spain, and Buenos Aires, with dirigibles that can carry 40 passengers and ten tons of general cargo. This project contemplates flights via the Canary Islands.

French Air Mail Route.

French Air Mail Route.

French Air Mail Route.

The French air mail project involves the following route and plan of flight, according to Mr. MacKenzie's report: Toloes to Casablanca, Morocco, by airplane, 1,850 kilometers, estimated to be covered in 13 hours; Casablanca to St. Louis del Senegal, by plane, 2,850 kilometers, 1½ days; St. Louis to Cape Verde Island, by plane, 800 kilometers, 5½ hours; Cape Verde Island to Fernando de Norenh island, by special fast steamers, 2,200 kilometers, 3 days; Noronlina Island to Fernambuco, Brazil, by plane, 650 kilometers, 3 days; Noronlina island to Pernambuco, Brazil, by plane, 650 kilometers, 5 hours; Pernambuco to Rio de Janiero, by plane, 1,950 kilometers, 14 hours; Rio de Janiero to Buenos Aires, by plane, 2,100 kilometers, 15 hours. Thus a through service of 7½ days over a total distance of 12,400 kilometers is projected. "It is claimed," Mr. MacKenzie reported, "that more rapid service will later be given with the inauguration of night flying and the substitution of planes for steamers in the Cape Verde to Noronha Island stage. A weekly service each way is stipulated in the contract. "The Companio de Transportes Aereos service each way is stipulated in the contract.

"The Companio de Transportes Aereos Lateccere is reported to have a subsidy of 36,650,000 francs for its total operation the first year on several lines which it plans to establish. No subsidy has been requested from the Argentine government.

"The French company claims to have ready for use in this service 200 airplanes, with a speed of 22 knots an hour and 156 trained pilots. It is assumed that this refers to the entire organization of the company, which is operating, or planning to operate, elseating, or planning to operate, else

Spain-Argentina Plan.

Mr. Cunningham's report is less detailed. It states that the Sociedad Colon Trasserea Espanol plans to use a number of dirigibles in a passenger and freight carrying trade between Spain and Argentina for which a royal decree authorizing exclusive right of aerial communication has been obtained from the Spanish government.

The 40-passenger dirigibles will have a semioficial carrying traffic, for an each trip space for two passengers and 500 kilograms of cargo will be reserved each trip space for two passengers and 500 kilograms of cargo will be reserved for governmental travelers. Eventually, a subsidiary service of at least weekly communications between Seville and Canaries with smaller dirigibles carrying sixteen passengers and one ton of carge is contempted.

The route from Seville to the Argentine capital presumably will be a beeline, carrying the airships along the coast of Spain, Africa and South America. The royal decree requires the company must establish within four years airports, hangars, shops and radio stations, while its budgets must be approved by the Spanish ministry of labor, commerce and industry.

THE DEMANDS UPON CHINA.

It is now fairly well understood that the United States government will present a note to the Cantonese government practically identical in terms with the notes to be presented at the same time by Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan. The notes will be presented by the envoys of the powers at Peking. A dispatch from London intimates that some delay has been caused on account of the "unwillingness of the United States government to consent to sanctions favored by the British." The British government is now said to be "quite content to let the question of sanctions rest until it is certain that the Cantonese will force a decision by refusing the demand made in the notes."

Until and unless events prove otherwise, The Post will believe that the United States government has refused to commit itself to any "sanctions" whatever in case the Cantonese reject the demands made by this government. "Sanctions" is merely a diplomatic disguise of the uglier but more accurate word "reprisals.

The United States is in duty bound to demand of the Cantonese that they shall make amends for the outrages committed. by them against Americans at Nanking, and that guarantees shall be given against future outrages. But the United States is not bound to add a threat of reprisals to its demand, which would commit it to military action against the Cantonese. Americans are opposed to the bombardment of Nanking or any other place in retaliation for the outrages committed. It is well recognized that the confusion resulting from the clash of two armies at Nanking made conditions dangerous for all foreigners. There are conflicting reports as to the identity of the individuals who attacked the Americans. But even if it should be proved that the Cantonese are guilty, public sentiment in the United States would not support a punitive expedition, singly or in concert with British, French, Italian and Japanese forces. The public is particularly opposed to any joint action involving the United States in a struggle in China.

The attitude of the Cantonese government, so-called, has been friendly toward the United States. Neither the commander in chief, Chang Kai-Shek, nor the foreign minister, Eugene Chen, has uttered a word or performed an act that is inimical to Americans. The use of American military and naval forces at Nanking to compel compliance with demands made simultaneously by the foreign powers would inevitably draw the United States into a course of joint action in case the attempt to enforce "sanctions" should develop into hostilities between the Cantonese and the foreigners.

For these reasons it may be assumed that the United States government will not indulge in any threats when it forwards its demand upon the Cantonese government. If this government should make the fact clear that it is acting independently of the other powers the public would be well pleased."

"WHAT IS A HEARSE?"

Judge William Seeley, of Westchester county, N. Y., is confronted with a delicate problem. He must decide whether a hearse is a pleasure vehicle, within the meaning of the park ordinance, or a commercial truck. If the learned jurist reaches the conclusion, after a thorough search of the statutes and the precedents, that a hearse is a truck he will uphold the action of a ser-of a hearse who, in the opinion of the officer, violated the ordinance that limits the use of the roads through the parks of White Plains to pleasure vehicles.

The driver was engaged in piloting the hearse through the park toward Kemisco cemetery when summoned to court for the automobiles that carried the rest of the funeral party were not arrested, presumably because the sergeant decided that the vehicles in which they rode were 'pleasure cars."

So far as The Post has been able to scertain, Judge Seeley has only one precedent to guide him in rendering judgment in this important and apparently unique case. That is afforded by the traditions of the Indian bureau in regard to one of the chiefs of the Rosebud agency. Coming into a considerable sum of money, the old chief decided to "put on dog" by driving his entire family around the reservation in a great family carriage. The only vehicle that appeared to answer his requirements was a secondhand hearse. The hearse was bought, and day by day was hitched to a pair of cayuses and driven by the owner among the teepees of his less wealthy neighbors and associates. The chief always rode on the driver's seat, the squaw and all the papooses being packed in the place intended for the casket.

In the celebrated Rosebud agency case the hearse was unquestionably a pleasure vehicle, equally for the driver and the occupants. But for the fact that the Indian agent frowned upon the proposition of the agency trader, every secondhand hearse in the Sioux country would have been purchased for the account of social climbers who sought to emulate the old chieftain's pomp.

The Rosebud case is cited in the hope that it may guide Judge Seeley in reaching a just decision in the momentous question pending in his court.

THE WET AND DRY QUESTION.

Public interest in the Borah-Butler debate emphasizes the fact that the prohibition question is a fundamental "issue." It will become more and more prominent in party conventions, despite the efforts of politicians to rule it out or to "straddle" in their platforms. But it is not an issue upon which the Republican and Democratic parties can or will willingly take opposing sides. Therefore the solution of the prohibition problem is not to be found at present in an effort to array the two great parties for and against it. It is conceivable that the question will reach such overshadowing importance as to compel the two parties to make it an issue between them; but that time has not arrived, and will not arrive by 1928.

In the opinion of many students of American institutions the prohibition question will ultimately be solved, not by a decisive contest between the Repubcan and Democratic parties, but by struggle between two new parties, one of them standing for States' rights and the other for assertion of the Federal power.

The eighteenth amendment is undeniably an extension of the police power to the Federal government at the expense of the States. In this respect it is inconsistent with the general spirit of the Constitution. The framers of this government intended to leave the police power to the States and to the people. Some of the authorities, discussing the limitations upon the treaty-making power, have held that it could not encroach upon the police power of the States; and yet the treaty-making power is one of the broadest powers granted to the Federal government. The Supreme Court has been unable to assist the people materially in pursuing a clearly defined path between the Federal and State powers. The Supreme Court can not question the wisdom of a constitutional amendment. It must accept the amendment as part of the Constitution, and must reconcile it with the other provisions of that instrument. It must construe the laws in the light of the fact that the eighteenth amendment is as binding as the provisions which create Congress or the Supreme Court itself. Accordingly it sustained the Volstead act, although doubtless every justice would admit that the Volstead act intrudes upon the powers that were formerly possessed by the States, before the adoption of the eighteenth amendment.

The people adopted the eighteenth amendment. Only the people can repeal it. The exchange of invective and the display of anger and excitement over this question contribute more to confusion of thought than to enlightenment. The citizens who believe that the geant of police in arresting the driver eighteenth amendment should be repealed are free to go ahead and ask for its repeal. If they are supported by the people of three-fourths of the States the amendment will be repealed. If they can win a majority in Congress they can obtain a vote by conventions of the people instead of by the legislatures; provided. violating the ordinance. The drivers of of course, that Congress by a two-thirds vote shall propose the amendment to repeal.

The experiment which places police powers in the hands of the Federal government, thereby weakening the States, has not proved successful. Senator Borah thinks it will be successful after 25 years' trial. President Butler thinks it is already a demonstrated failure. Any citizen is as competent as either Mr. Borah or Mr. Butler to pass upon this question. The issue will not be decided by any man or party, but by the "common people."

THE REED COMMITTEE.

An important paragraph of the Supreme Court's opinion in the Mal Daugherty case appears to have been overlooked by Vice President Dawes in rendering his opinion that the Reed "slush fund" committee is in existence, notwithstanding the termination of the Sixty-ninth Congress. After stating that the Brookhart committee had been authorized by "a later and amendatory resolution to sit at such times and places as it might deem advisable or necessary," thus enabling it to sit after the expiration of Congress, the Supreme

So far as we are advised the select committee having this investigation in charge has neither made a final report nor been discharged; nor has it been continued by an affirmative order. Apparently its activities have been suspended pending the decision of this case. But, be this as it may, it is certain that the committee may be continued or revived now by motion to that effect, and, if continued or revived, will have all its original powers.

The Reed "slush fund" committee is select committee. It has neither made final report nor been discharged; nor has it been continued by an affirmative order. What the Supreme Court says regarding the Brookhart committee may be applied to the Reed committee: "It is certain that the committee may be continued or revived now by motion to that effect." But unless continued or revived by the Senate, it does not appear to be a part of the Senate.

Senator Keyes, of New Hampshire, chairman of the committee on contingent expenses, has pointed out that select committees of the Senate are not continued beyond the expiration of a Congress except by express order. In this respect they differ from standing committees, which since 1921 have been 'continued until the next regular session of Congress, or until their successors are elected." Senator Keyes added:

I believe there was about $40,000 left of the $65,000 appropriated for the use of the Reed comr Reed committee ceased to exist under the rules of the Senate March 4 last. It will stay in the strong box where it belongs.

Thus, while Vice President Dawes may appoint successors to members of the Reed committee as fast as they resign, the committee will not have any funds at its disposal, and the doubt as to its being a valid part of the Senate will remain until the Senate decides the question.

ANOTHER COUP D'ETAT.

Recent events of a revolutionary character in Chile may raise the question of recognition by the United States of the new government set up by the head of the military junta, Gen. Ibanez. During the last two weeks Gen. Ibanez has not only dismissed several members of the supreme court, including the brother of the President of Chile, but has actually deposed President Figueroa and taken the presidency himself. The change purports to be merely temporary, President Figueroa having granted himself a leave of absence for two months. Surrounding incidents, however, indicate clearly that Ibanez has taken over autocratic powers and is a full-fledged Mussolini, supported by the same compact military group that threw President Alessandri out of office several years ago.

Ibanez has made no secret of the fact that communistic intrigue had made inroads in the Chilean army and navy. He also charged that conditions in the judiciary called for a thorough house-cleaning, which he proceeded to undertake.

The United States has adopted the rule that it will not extend recognition to governments in Central America which are the outcome of a revolution or a coup d'etat. It refused to recognize Gen. plements, machinery, crops, buildings and do well to copy the plan.

Chamorro, of Nicaragua, who obtained the resignation of President Solorzano by the same method, apparently, as that exercised by Gen. Ibanez in inducing President Figueroa to absent himself. The new government of Chile is unquestionably the outcome of a coup d'etat. Whether the United States will apply to Chile the rule that is applied to Central America remains to be seen.

Final reports of the Tacna-Arica plebiscitary and boundary commissions are about to be submitted to President Coolidge, the arbitrator of the dispute. The plebiscitary commission adopted a resolution severely criticising Chile for frustrating the plebiscite. Since that time the commission has been inactive, and the United States has been using its good offices in an effort to bring about an agreement between Peru and Chile. No doubt dissensions over Chile's Tacna-Arica policy have had something to do with the political disturbances at Santiago. Apparently Chile and Peru are as far apart as ever on the question of disposing of Tacna and Arica. The neutralization of the port of Arica and an equitable division of the hinterland has been recently suggested as a possible solution of the problem. But it is not probable that any agreement will be reached while Chile's domestic affairs are in turmoil.

THE TWO GREAT INDUSTRIES.

The total value of the products of American factories for 1925 was $62,705,-714,000, and the total value of farm crops for the same year was $13,031, 000,000.

In studying the relative value of manufactures and farm crops it is seen that during the last ten years the United States has developed more rapidly as a manufacturing country than as an agricultural country. Perhaps more public money has been spent to develop and promote agriculture than to develop and promote manufactures, but manufactures have outstripped agriculture.

Census figures show that between 1904 and 1912 the value of farm crops and animals increased 175 per cent, while manufactured products increased only 98 per cent. Between 1912 and 1922 agricultural products increased 4.3 per cent in value, while the value of manufactured goods increased 93.4 per cent. Between 1922 and 1925 the same relative increase in value continued.

Natural causes, not legislation or lack of legislation, account for this situation. The United States has been developing into an industrial country for more than 60 years. Today the total wealth of the nation is estimated at more than $360,-000,000,000. Farm wealth, including im-animals, totals only about 8 per cent, while the manufacturing establishments, tools and products total more than 12 per cent of the national wealth. In all probability the percentage of manufacturing wealth will increase.

It is significant that while the value of manufactures increases the number of employes does not increase in the same proportion, because of improved machinery and greater efficiency. The industrial population, the wage earners, form the best market for the farmers. This market prevents the total collapse of the American farm industry and arrests a ruinous decline in value of farm Agriculturists are not alone in depending upon this domestic market for the sale of a very large portion of their products. American manufacturers depend upon the domestic market likewise.

Of the $13,000,000,000 worth of farm crops in 1925 only about $2,000,000,000 was exported. Of the $62,000,000,000 of manufactured goods produced in 1925, only about $2,500,000,000 was exported.

These figures demonstrate the comparative worth of the domestic and foreign markets for both agriculturists and manufacturers. The "surplus" sent to foreign markets is small compared with the great bulk sold in the home market.

ADOPTING A WAR CHILD.

Sergt. Jasper unit of the American Legion auxiliary of the District is looking for a war daughter, or even a war son, to adopt. At a recent meeting it was decided that as part of the organization's welfare work a girl of tender years, whose father was killed or disabled in the world war, should be sought. When found, Sergt. Jasper unit intends to adopt the child according to law, and care for her until she becomes of self-supporting age. If a girl can not be found, the same provision will be made for a war

There must be thousands of children throughout the country who are in want because of the consequences of the war. Prior to 1917 they were part of a happy family, the head of which earned a satisfactory income. To all appearances their future was secure. Then the father marched off to war, leaving, perhaps, accumulated funds sufficient to last four or five years, believing that he had left his family well provided for until his return. Ten years have elapsed, and still he has not returned. The happy future for these children is a dream of the past.

It is a worthy work that Sergt. Jasper unit proposes. Other organizations would

"BIRTH OF A STATE."

There is nothing sensational in the news paragraph telegraphed from Guthrie, Okla., in which the world is advised that the last of the land offices in that State will be permanently closed on June 30. Behind that brief paragraph, however, is the history of the creation of an American commonwealth, which for rapidity of growth in population and business is without equal in the annals of the world.

Within the State of Oklahoma are 45,424,960 acres of land and 643 square miles of water. Until 1889, aside from a few soldiers and agents of the Federal government, there was not a white tian lawfully within the entire 70,000 square miles. In that year the domain, tnen known as the Indian Territory, was thrown open to settlement by the whites, with certain lands reserved for the us and benefit of the Indians whose title had been confirmed through various acts of Congress. Also in that year the land office at Guthrie was established to aid settlers in their quest for homesteads. During the next few years the work of the general land office had grown to such proportions within the territory, which was formally organized May 4, 1890, that eight other offices were established, all of which have since been closed as the public lands were transferred to private ownership.

Today there remain within the State of Oklahoma, which was admitted to the sisterhood less than twenty years ago, or on November 15, 1907, only 27,000 acres of public lands, two-thirds of which are included in the salt plains of the northwestern counties. Most of the remaining 9,000 acres are undesirable for purposes other than grazing.

It will be 37 years on May 4 since the settlers in the old Indian Territory were authorized to form a territorial government. That Territory was privileged to send one delegate to Congress. He had scarcely warmed his seat when he began to urge that the Territory be converted into a State. Sixteen years, however, elapsed before the consent of Congress was obtained.

Under the last apportionment Oklahoma is allowed eight members in the House of Representatives, based upon the census of 1920, which reported a population of 2,028,283. The census office estimates that the number of people today living within the State is 2,384,000.

That is the basis of the assertion that no territory on the face of mother earth of equal size can show such a develop-ment in population and material wearth as is exhibited in Oklahoma.

Anyway, the great powers are getting a lot of practice in the art of evacuation.

What is the use of straining the few new teachers that enter the schools for ultrasuperior equipment when the greater bulk of the teaching force, made up of irresponsible married women, veterans' bureau and other government department castoffs, teachers who are holding certificates they have had at least 25 years and those who were taken in during lax wartime regulations.

and those who were taken in during lax wardime regulations.

It is not fair for the teachers—perhaps half of those in the system who have given the profession their best and who are holding it at its present standard in spite of the cheap politics, unfair discriminations and deplorable unfitness that characterizes a part of the teaching force. It will take at least 50 years for the work of the present well-selected personnel to begin to make any show with the system.

In an executive order the President ordered that employment be given Mrs. Bessie H. The Treasury department had favored this action, but the civil service commission did not concur. The order was signed as fol-perienced in handling horses at very tender years. The junior events are certain to elicit much attention from fond relatives and friends, as well as the general public.

Unique features of the polo ball will be the appearance of polo players in costume and the foreign military and naval attaches of embassies and legations assisting Col. Nelson E. Margetts, chairman of the polo ball floor committee, in their uniforms. This touch of color will be carried out in the decorations. Virtually all the boxes have been taken for the ball and among the box holders will be the Ambassador of Italy, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, Senator Lawrence C. Phipps, Assistant Secretary of War F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Douglas Robinson, Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, Brig. Gen. Samuel D. Rockenbach, Countess Szechenyi, Mrs. John R. Williams, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Mrs. Charles Boughton Wood, Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. James Couzens, Col. Robert M. Thompson, Maj. Raymond Lee, Mrs. George Mesta and Miss Martha Codman.

M ANY changes are in progress in the personnel of the diplomatic corps. They are not unusual, however, as this contingent always is shifting back and forth between this country and Europe. Washington has become one of the favored diplomatic posts of the world and there is much eagerness in foreign offices to receive the assignment here. This gives great variety to diplomatic life in this world capital even if it does bring about many regretful partings.

This week sees the departure of a diplomat who won much praise for his tactful handling of difficult situations during the visit of Queen Marie of Roumania last fall. M. Radu T. Djuvara, counselor of the Roumanian legation, has been rewarded for his faithfulness to his sovereign by appointment as director of the division of international jurisprudence of the ministry of foreign affairs at Bucharest. M. Djuvara will have a short holiday in Paris before going on to Bucharest.

Another envoy well liked here also will see done is of the most informal nature.

Happily, out of Holy week springs the glorious promise and joy of Easter and with it the beginning of the little season here, in many respects the gayest and most enjoyable of all the social periods of the Capital.

the solemn services. What entertaining is PRESIDENT and Mrs. Coolidge will spend their Easter in Washington this year and most of the cabinet will follow suit in this regard. Because of the early school and college vacations this spring the junior members of official households will not be with their parents for the holidays. In this connection it is interesting to note that the Easter junior holiday dance scheduled for April 22 at the Chevy Chase club has been called off. A committee consisting of Mme. Bostrom, Mrs. William Jardine, Mrs. Joseph C. Grew, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mme. Ekengren and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman had been arranging the dance.

Mr. John C. Coolidge, son of the President and Mrs. Coolidge, who passed his holidays with his parents, has returned to Amherst and the grind of scholastic duties in preparation to his promotion to the rank of senior in June. While no announcement has been made as yet it is most probable that he will be with his parents this summer "somewhere in the West."

By the way, the anxious West is on the tip toes of expectation awaiting the news of just where that summer White House is to be. It is safe to venture that wherever it be, it will be the most popular resort west of the Mississippi.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge will find much of their Easter happiness in the smiling faces of their youthful guests who will flock by the hundreds to the White House gardens on Easter Monday to hold the annual egg rolling party there. The children of the city regard this as their special time of the year and it is. The happy children with their gay baskets dot the White House lawns like human flowers and both the chief executive and the First Lady of the/Land always take some time from official duties to watch the children at play.

It was thought for a time that this gracious custom would have to be set aside this year because of the repairs now in progress at the executive mansion. But President Coolidge investigated the situation, aided by the keen desire of Mrs. Coolidge to entertain the children in this time-honored way, and it was found that the Easter egg rolling party was feasible in spite of the work.

ASTER week will be signalized not only by the usual polo ball Tuesday, April 19, one of the most picturesque and attractive dancing functions of the year, but by the horse show as well when the equestrian group of the Capital will come into its own. The horse show will be held this year on April 21, 22 and 23 and will be given under auspices of the Washington Riding and Hunt club, with which the old National Capital Horse Show association has been merged.

Although the horse show this year will be an inside affair, yet there is keen interest taken in it and the many notable entries. The convenient location will probably do much to augment the attendance and the novelty of the inside show also will be an added attraction.

service next at Bucharest. This is the retiring charge d'affaires of Egypt, Ismail Kamel Bey, who will become charge d'affaires of the Egyptian legation in that capital.

THE prospect of 100,000 visitors in Washington during the Easter season means more entertaining for sightseers, and tourists always manage to find friends among the residents, permanent or temporary, in the National Capital.

There is not much prospect of White House garden parties this year, even the customary one for the world war veterans, yet there are advance signs of other al fresco events elsewhere in Washington, either for private enjoyment or for charity's sweet sake, which is never so attractive as when clothed in the pretty form of a garden party or a lawn fete.

Naturally house parties and entertainments for the strangers within our gates will occupy a goodly portion of the interest of Washington hostesses this spring. It is at this time that old friends may come for a real visit unhampered by the many calls of the formal season, and yet with enough social activity to get a general insight into the workings of Washington society.

ANY attractive homes will be opened next week for the delegates and officials of the thirty-sixth continental congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Many entertainments will be given in honor of Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general of the organization. High administrative officers of the D. A. R. will give her a dinner next Sunday at the Willard hotel at which 70 guests will be present. On Saturday the 21 vice presidents general of the D. A. R. will give a luncheon in her honor in Memorial Containental hall, to which the membership of the national board of management will be invited.

The evening sessions of the congress in the new Auditorium will be brilliant socially as well as patriotically. Diplomats, officials and resident society will occupy the boxes and seats upstairs to watch the proceedings of the congress in progress. It has been noted that the men and women of the diplomatic corps

Engagements and Weddings of Interest

Apparently Mrs. Coolidge is having a delightful time since the close of the official and formal season, for she has recently accepted several invitations to luncheons and has had groups of friends in for tea and to enjoy a cozy touch of home life in the temporary white House on Dupont circle, which lends itself charmingly to this type of informal function.

The popularity of the First Lady of the Land with other official women is well known. She takes such cheery and personal interest in their problems and the incidents of their social and home lives which they relate to many of them.

Their friends in Washington, where they have been prominent in the serv-ice set since Dr. Rixey was personal physician to President Roosevelt, will attend the golden wedding reception to be given by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Pressley M. Rixey at their country home, Rixey, near Rosslyn, on April 25.

Saturday there will be a wedding which will attract the notice of political and educational, as well as social and feminist society, when Mrs. Izetta Jewell Brown, one time candidate for senator from West Virginia and prominent in Democratic work, becomes the bride of Mr. Hugh Miller, formerly of George Washington university. The wedding will take place at the Georgetown home of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin H. Dodd.

Much interest was expressed in the younger set in the announcement of the recent marriage in Tulsa, Okla., of Mrs. Margaret Denys Wolcott, daughter of the Rev. F. Ward Denys, of Washington, to Mr. Charles M. Sheldon, ir. Mrs. Sheldon was a member of the Junior league in Washington and, with her sister, Mrs. William A. GUDE'S Annual Easter Flower Show— See 50.000 Lilies Under One Roof!

Sunday, April 10th, 1 to 5 P.M.

Gude's Mammoth Greenhouses— Bladensburg Road and Mt. Olivet

Last year thousands of flower lovers visited our greenhouses. We have made preparations this year for a still greater number.

You can't imagine this glorious carnival of color and fragrance—you must see the gorgeous exhibition of magnificent Spring flowers developed by Gude.

You will see more than 50,000 Easter lilies under one roof—thousands of rambler roses of rare colorings, smiling sweet peas, striking snapdragons, beautiful carnations, azaleas, orchids, hydrangeas, hyacinths, tulips, jonquils, etc., that go to make up a fairyland of flowers that is indeed entrancing.

Take 15th and H Sts. N.E. car and transfer to Washington Railway and Electric Bus direct to Greenhouses.

So morning insects that in muck begun
Shine, buzz and fly blow in the setting

The women of fashion nowadays are The women of fashion nowadays are as particular about their morning clothes as they are with their evening toilets. Whether in the morning hours they receive a few contemporaries in their boudoirs or go about household tasks or engage in the beauty treatments so in vogue in this year of grace, a part and parcel of the daily ritual to the goddess of beauty, they are meticulously garbed and look as if they had literally stepped out of band boxes.

The fascinating array of boudoir garments, morning coats and pajama sets of satins, silks and chiffon and metal cloths elaborately embroidered are a great incentive toward putting the best appearance possible to greet the morning sun. Even the modern woman who breakfasts alone insists on the daintiness of breakfast coats in keeping with the many individual and attractive sets with which every wellestablished home abounds.

So entrancing are the boudoir gowns and smoking sets that many women have adopted the most glorified and formal versions for the tea hour, if the tea hour is an informal one. There is no doubt but that the modern woman when she goes cross-country walking, fishing or golf playing will fit into the picture this spring, for she will wear in many instances a rabbit-skin jacket or one made of calf-skin.

Vogue for Rabbit Skin.

Some of the pretitest of the domestic and imported sports Jackets, made on the lines of the lumberjacks of suede or rabbit of which we have become rather tired, are of calf or rabbit skin. The smartest of these, made along the lines of the popular cardigan jackets, have many patch pockets.

Here and there in the inevitable array of jackets to go with the various formal gowns of the spring it has been discovered that black and white calf may be utilized with very good effect. These formal little coats look very little like the sports coats, but are made with Eton or Russian blouse effect, lined with black sath with embroidery or applique to simulate the markings on the skin itself.

Worn with a white satin spring dress made in two-piece simple effect, was one of these little coats lined with white satin and striped in black. The lat was of white satin with a band of the calfskin held in place by a black and white rose.

Now that fashion has discovered the use of calf it will be interesting to watch how this fad will affect the milk supply of the future. For it stands to reason that if calves are slaughtered in still greater quantities to supply the demand for calfskin for milady's tollectic that in the long run it will be the milk supply of the nation which will suffer.

Necessity, therefore, may be counted upon to make the calfskin fashion of the calfskin fashion of

But rabbit skins. The enormous supply possible from these animals will probably make the fad endure for many seasons. Economy enters more into fashion schemes than usually believed and often economic pressure ends a vogue which the mere fact of its being not becoming to many women could not alter.

Ensemble Still Favorite.

The gods of fashion have a most amusing way of tantilizing women by beating a retreat for a favorite fashion, and yet all the time in their secret retreats fashioning new and alluring versions to tempt the feminine factor.

fancy.
This is particularly true of the ensemble, which has become such a favorite with all women that at the loud periodical heralding of its end real tears of regret have been shed.

This spring the ensemble is with us in as important a place as it was when it first made its debut three or four stacks on ago. It can be seen on every side in silk and satin and chiffon, tail orded and severe in outline, or feminine and unusual, but in every case original.
Even in the ensemble the double data is apparent, and the shops abound with this type. Many smart women with his type. Many smart women are already begun to wear arresting ensembles of a frock or dress of crepe de chine with a long coat of chiffon of matching or contrasting color and outer long coat of crepe de chine with plaited frills coming from a collar effect about the cutaway hem, given in the plaited frills coming from a collar effect about the cutaway hem, given in the plaited frills coming from a collar effect about the cutaway hem, given in the dress, Sometimes this rule is reversed, and the undercoat is of crepe de chine and the outer one of chiffon. Blue is elbowing the omnipresent smart black out of the foreground of the spring costumes.

In this day of a coat or wrap for every occasion, it is not surprising that the top coat, made of the material of the suit, should be much in vogue. In fact, for the traveler the tailored suit and top coat is indispensable from the viewpoint of smartness. Some of the very latest of these complete traveling outfits have shoes, handbags, and even the hats made of exactly the same materials as the suit and the top coat. This is an occasional happening, however, as most women like the contrasting accessories rather than the same as suits and the details of the costume being all alike.

Silk and satin are to have a good turn on the field of style this summer. Certainly these materials lend themselves to the fashion of the moment, which demands simplicity of cut but elegance of aspect.

From an economical viewpoint, wash silks and satins solve many a spring and summer problem for the woman with the maid and for the noble army of smartly dressed women who act as their own maids, as the freshly turned out appearance possible to obtain with these up-to-date fabrics, beautiful, durable and washable, has a great appeal.

ROCK SPRINGS, WYO.,

Mining Town's Polyglot Population Is Busily Learning English.

NIGHT SCHOOL PROVES REAL MELTING POT

Aided by Legislature in the Work of Paving Way to Citizenship.

Special to The Washington Post.
Rock Springs, Wyo., April 9.—This city of 10,000 inhabitants in the southestern part of the State vies with the metropolitan cities of the United States crown of being the most polyglot community of America. Springs is one of the largest coal camps of the Rocky mountain region, and of the Rocky mountain region, and among the miners employed are found representatives of almost every nation of the globe. Fifty-three languages are spoken by the residents of the city, and many years ago it became apparent that strenuous efforts were in order to cause Rock Springs to become an integral part of the "melting pot" and not remain a hodge-podge of clannishness and factionalism.

Seven years ago the State of Wyom-not remain a hodge-podge of clannishness and factionalism.

Seven years ago the State of Wyoming and the school authorities of Rock Springs founded a night school course for the foreigners employed in the mines, and it was impressed on the miners that it would be to their advantage to become pupils in this school. That the advice was heeded is attested by the fact that to date more than 900 men and women have been graduated and have become fluent speakers and readers of the English language, and the element which once made the city a veritable babel of tongues has in great measure been eliminated.

Anxious for Citizenship.

Anxlous for Citizenship

Most of the patrons of the school make a rush for their first citizenship papers as soon as they arrive from other shores, and for that reason civics is the principal study taken, but English also is one of the main features of the preparatory course. Many of the students take English for two or three years after being admitted to citizenship.

A moderate fee is charged by the three years after being admitted to citizenship.

A moderate fee is charged by the school, and the State of Wyoming defrays the balance of the expense required to maintain the school. The legislature at its recent session granted $5,000 more for the coming two years than was appropriated for any similar period previously. This is eloquent evidence that the State considers money invested in the school a paying enterprise.

The semester of the winter months closed on March 25 with 135 graduates. Of this number 50 are ready to be admitted to citizenship at the April term of the district court, and 45 more will be ready when the November term of the court convenes.

Orientals Also Pupils.

Orientals Also Pupils.

Many Japanese and Chinese, races not admitted to citizenship in the United States, are among the pupils. The Asiatics devote their efforts prin-cipally to the study of civics and Eng-

The Asiatics devote their efforts principally to the study of civics and English, the latter study being prized most highly. Japanese particularly are among the most earnest students of the Americanization school, and one of these, a young man, when queried why he was so assiduous in learning the language of the country that declined to grant him the privilege of becoming one of its citizens replied:

"Your country has decided that I may not become a citizen, and that is your government's business; I have decided to gain a full knowledge of your language so that I may study your Constitution, and that is my business."

This was not said in aerimonious manner, but simply was a terse answer to a direct question. In the home of this young Japanese no language but English is spoken. The wife, a native of Japan, as is her husband, and the three sons, natives of Rock Springs, never converse in the language of the island empire across the Pacific. The father, on another occasion, said that when his sons grow to manhood they will become citizens of the United States, being native born, and that he wanted them to be prepared in every manner to be entitled to citizenship.

Bar and Church Aid.

Bar and Church Aid.

The Rock Springs school is actively supervised by E. M. Thompson, supertendent of the city schools, assisted by a staff of other teachers from the city's schools. Father Anton Shiffeer. pastor of a Catholic church, is unremitting in his work of persuading members of the numerous foreign races to attend the school regularly, and frequently he actively assists in conducting classes. Fred W. Johnson, an attorney, likewise is supporting the school actively, giving freely his time and knowledge in solving problems brought to him by the students.

The closing of the winter semester of the school was attended by a banquet and general meeting of all citizens of the city, and the governor of Wyoming was the principal speaker. He lauded the work accomplished and promised his continued support of the institution. At this meeting brief speeches were made in each of the 53 languages spoken in the city, and then each of the speakers translated his effort into English.

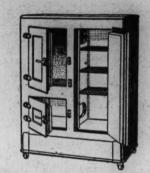

Exhibit in Spain Open To All Departments

The congressional resolution providing for exhibits by government departments at the international exposition at Seville, Spain, permits other departments than the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce and the Interior, specifically named in the resolution, to make exhibits, Comptroller General McCarl ruled yesterday.

The decision was made in reply to a letter from Thomas E. Campbell, commissioner general of the commission of the United States, which is preparing for the exposition. The resolution, the comptroller said, in specifically naming the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce and the Interior, did not excude other departments that might wish to prepare exhibits, provided such exhibits were satisfactory to the commission.

Madge Bellamy in "Ankles Preferred." -Metropolitan.

"Love Is Like That," a modern romantic comedy by S. N. Behrman and Kenyon Nicholson, comes to the Belasco tonight for a week's engagement prior to its opening at the Cort theater in New York on April 18. Basil Rathbone, the young English actor who gave such distinguished performances in "The Swan" and "The Captive," is featured in a company which includes Ann Davis, Lucile Watson, Charles Richman, Edward Wever, Catherine Willard, John T. Doyle, Barbara Bulgakov and Minna Phillips. The play has been staged by Dudley Digges, of the Theater guild, and is presented by A. L. Jones and Morris Green.

The central figure in the play is a handsome but poverty stricken and exiled Russian prince who stows away aboard ship bound for America in thope that he may redeem his lost fortunes. Repelled by the grime and dirt of his hiding place he is about to leap overboard when he is rescued by a young American girl returning from abroad, where she has sought to forget an unfortunate love affair. The girl facilitates the prince's entry into America and introduces him to her family and friends. They immediately propose that the prince take the short cut to affluence and make a wealthy marriage. He agrees, only to find that on the eve of this union his heart is with his benefactress, and that the proposed marriage, however much it would relieve his penury, would be intolerable.

of this union his heart is with his benefactress, and that the proposed marriage, however much it would relieve his penury, would be intolerable.

To escape from this dilemma he announces that he is not a prince, but a valet who has adopted the name of the master whom he once served in Russia. The complications which ensue are written with uncommon skill and sophistication, delicately satirizing many of our social strategies.

Behrman and Nicholson, the authors, are both much in the public eye. Nicholson's first produced play, "The Barker," is one of the outstanding hits in New York, while Behrman's first work, "The Second Man," was presented in New RETURNS TO

RETURNS TO NATIONAL

With its slave galleys, its desperat sea battle and its big charlot race "Ben-Hur" will return to the National theater tonight for a limited engagement. There will be two performances daily after the opening tonight and all seats will be reserved and sold in advance for all performances.

IS FEATURED AT COLUMBIA

John Barrymore in "The Beloved Rogue," his first United Artists Picture, will be seen at Loew's Columbia theater this week, starting this afternoon.

As Francois Villon, the immortal French beggar-poet, Barrymore loves 'em and leaves 'em in fifteenth century Paris; he plays pranks on the king and the Duke of Burgundy, leads his beggar band in routs and jousts, composes undying roundels in hovels while carousing inhabitants jostle each other; he loves and loses Charlotte de Vaux-celles, and wins her at the end.

Barrymore is Villon, the heart and fall-breaking idol of the underworld of Paris, the crackling personality that inspired the pens of Swinburne and Robert Louis Stevenson. Conrad Veidt, the great German character actor, is King Louis XI—his first role in an American production. Marceline Day in Charlotte. The film was directed by Alan Grosland from Paul Bern's script based on the life and loves of the high-living Francois. "The Beloved Rogue" was produced at the Pickford-Fairbanks Studio, Hollywood.

Just before her death this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The printhe popular authoress completed the story which later proved to be her greatest. It was also by a tragic coincidence to be her final work. This remarkable book has been transferred to the screen and is the feature at the Rialto this week.

In this, her last story, Gene Stratton-Porter has told of the romance of a boy and girl who meet by accident in a beautiful garden, and of the love which comes to them and changes the course of their lives. The boy develops into a musical genius, and the girl, unwilling to stand in his light, bravely encourages him to go abroad for many years of study. What transpires during their separation, and their final enthralling reunion, is told amid scenes of magnificent beauty on the screen. The picture was made under the direction of J. Leo Meehan, who has to his credit the filming of several other of the suthoress books.

The stage presentation will introduce Pranklin Ricord and Bunny Caverly in "Tuneful Tunes" with plano and harmony singing, solos and duets, interspersed with personality comedy. Among their routine of songs are "Let's Get Together," "Song of Songs," and "Lay Me Down to Sleep in Carolina."

The Rialto orchestra, Rox Rommell, conducting, will play "Light Cavalry Overture," von Suppe.

OW come the seven worst days in the theater—Holy week. From time immemorable Lent has been a season of devastation in theaterdom. In the past few years people paid little or no attention to the lenten season, save in rare instances. Strange as it may seem, the one field that feels Lent more than any other is burlesque. In a canvass of local theaters only one manager had a complaint against the season. Mr. Ira La Motte, manager of the Gayety, on Ninth street, will welcome Eastertide.

Although official investigators were unable to get accurate figures on the Mutual, the playhouse whose clientele comes from readers of billboards and posters, it is known that the Pennsylvania avenue patrons of the higher arts abstained from the festive board during the past seven or eight weeks of solemnity.

During this same period the National theater, with a top price of $4.40 a seat, broke one of the records for attendance. The Belasco on three separate and distinct occasions brought in more money over the box-office tiles than Mr. Stoddard Taylor, the manager, has seen in many years' management. Although Poli's failed to be what the race horse touts call "in the money," so far as breaking records is concerned, Mr. Theodore Barter, stylistic manager of that emporium, reports an unvisual enthusiasm among all audiences that attended revivals of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas-"lolanthe" and "The Prisoners of Pen-

STRANGE thing about these revivals of Gilbert and Sullivan. Their sponsors did not revert to the old methods of clowning and bufforery as exemplified in the De Wolffe Hopper school of projection. On the contrary, they went along without any perceptible play of comedian and comedienne. Students of the Savoy operas claim that this is the proper spirit in which these gems of light comedy should be played. To those carping critics who take Winthrop Ames and his cohorts to task for failure to sanction rough-neck methods, this instance is pointed out: When the opera "Pinafore," or perhaps it was "The Prisoners of Penzance." or some other one-it makes no difference-was in rehearsal. one of the low-comedy fellows of the time began romping and raving all over the stage in an effort to pull down the galleries with his comedy. W. S. Gilbert took him to task—"If my lines aren't funny in themselves, there is no need for you to try to make them funny." That is the sum and substance of the whole thing. Gilbert's lines are as funny today as they were in the period they were first written, and quite as timely, too—even for America—when some of the suggestions are substituted for situations seen on Capitol Hill in Washington.

All of which shows that the best humor of today is no better than the old-time drollery; that, in fact, there really is nothing new under the sun. W. S. Gilbert took him to task-"If my lines aren't funny in themselves.

THE Winthrop Ames Comic Opera Co., which will feature next year I two more of these celebrated works, starts out on a career that has unlimited possibilities—an organization built somewhat along the lines of the National Theater Players, which Steve Cochran has built up here in Washington.

Just when the producers and actors and other folk connected with the theater are complaining that the American public has flocked completely to the movies, along comes a group, such as the Winthrop Ames Opera Co. with the Gilbert and Sullivan operas; Mr. George C. Tyler with an all-star cast reviving an old Pinero comedy, "Trelawney of the Wells:" Frank C. Reilly putting on a play built out of the haphazard Pickwick Papers, and all starting a stampede and rush toward the box office Some of them begin on Broadway and later work out toward "the sticks." Some start in the sticks and never see Broadway: but all make money. Which proves, or seems to, that the American people when they have a chance to see something that appeals either to their intellect or their emotions, and does this in a soul-satisfying way, are neither reluctant to visit the ticket agencies nor hesitant to tell their friends of bargains to be found in the realm of the footlights. George C. Tyler is an old hand in the theater. When the world, or at least that part of the world known as America, turned "thumbs down" on the theater and all its works and arts, he went back into the books and dragged out a couple of the old Sheridan comedies. With these, he trooped across the country; all-star casts were sent up and down the breadth of the land and although some of the individuals received unheard-of salaries, nevertheless, the ledger showed profit. 'Why," asks one interested in the welfare of the theater, "do not the men on Broadway responsible for failure after failure take note of what is going on throughout the country, in cities like Washington, and Baltimore, and Philadelphia, and put on wares that will attract the eye of the American public, a potential purchasing power willing to pay for what it wants?

done, Mrs. Fiske and Margaret Anglin have now organized what is called "a National theater." While this theater will not be established in the National Capital, as so many projects for national theaters stipulate, it will pay a visit here every so often, as it will go to other cities throughout the land. In fact, this particular theater will be a roaming one in that Mrs. Fiske and Miss Anglin will take the troupe for 30 weeks out of every year on an extended tour of the provinces. to the American people samples of old-time theater. They intend to begin in New York city. There, in an appropriate theater, they will first put on an established play of some sort, either a comedy or a tragedy. The theatrical profession will be combed for appropriate talent, securing the best men and women for selected roles. Mrs. Fiske and Miss Anglin are going to adopt the method used in the musical world, whereby guest conductors take over symphony orchestras. They are going to bring in the guest actor. When they put on "The Merry Wives of Windsor" they will have Otis Skinner play Sir John Faistaff and, if the prospectus tells the truth, Mrs. Fiske and Miss Anglin will not always occupy coveted feminine roles, but will step down to minor ones when occasion demands, playing such parts as may be suited to their particular temperament and style. The idea is a good one. Mrs. Fiske, who spent two years playing Mrs. Malaprop to her own personal advantage and family fortunes, couples forces with Miss Anglin in a knowledge that the American people are ripe now for such a venture.

Glancing over the horizon, organization seems to be the order of the year in the theater. On every hand, the theater is being organized. When a play makes a hit, immediately there is organization behind it; a sending on the road of replica companies. The vogue in this sphere was started by the "Abie's Irish Rose" and the "White Cargo" companies. Second, third, fourth and fifth, and even tenth, eleventh and twelfth troupes have played in all parts of the country at one and the same time. It is, in a word, a syndication of theater material—a style taken from the newspapers. It is in keeping with the mode of living of the American people, who have their autos, their clothing and other necessaries and luxuries of life distributed on the grand scale-almost everything alike, catalogued and classified. The theater seems to be coming rapidly around to the modus operandi that is distinctly American—everything done according to Hoyle and economics.

R ETURN of the Metropolitan Opera company to Washington, after an absence of seventeen years, follows out tradition of the present season. The most successful enterprises of the year have been revivals. The Metropolitan attempts no innovations here this season. The operas to be presented are established favorites. The list includes "La Traviata," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "La Boheme" and "Il Trovatore." The roster of stars is of imposing character. Chief among the singers are Galli-Curei, foremost of coloratura sopranos (and incidentally the highest salaried feminine operatic star in the world); Lucresia Bori, Rosa Ponselle, Florence Easton, Martinelli, Lawrence Tibbett, Beniamino Gigli, Edward Johnson and Armand Tokatyan.

Of late much interest has been aroused in the relative merits of the world's great tenors. John McCormack recently declared that Johnson was the finest tenor in the world. Gigli and Martinelli are advocated by their followers. All three will appear here with the Metropolitan, a gift in itself.

Ramon Novarro, who plays the title role of "Ben-Hur," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer mammoth story adapted to the screen from Gen. Lew Wallace's famous novel and stage play at the National theater, was born in Mexico in 1898 of Spanish-Astee descent. He made his stage debut at the age of 19 in "The Willow Tree," and played the part of a Japañese birdseller. His first screen role was the son of Omar in "The Rubaiyst." His next work was Rupert of Hentzau in "The Prisoner of Zenda." He also appeared in "Where the Pavement Ends," "Scaramouche," "The Arab," "The Red Lilliy," "Trilling Women" and "Thy Name is Woman." He was educated in the schools of Durengo, Mexico, and at a college in Mexico City. Novarro is a musician of rare accomplishment as well as magnetic and poetic actor. His father, a doctor, intended him to be a medical man. But his genius for the arts asserted itself, and he made his own way to Los Angeles, first as a planist and then in histrionic roles.

A very interesting coincidence oc-curred during the filming of "The Magic Garden," the feature picture now show-ing at the Rialto. The leading masculine role is that of John Guido, a violinist whose genius is acknowledged by the world of music. This part was given to Raymond Keane because of his ability as an actor and bis theorypethy symbaas an actor and his thoroughly sympa-thetic understanding of the character When the time came for him to play rector and the cast by playing in a most enthralling fashion. the last great book antedating the typewriter era.

Tradition says that Gen. Wallace conceived the idea of writing "Ben-Hur" after a talk with "Bob" Ingersoil. "Is there a God?" asked Lew. "I don't know, do you?" 'Is there a future life?" again asked Wallace. "I don't know, do you?" again replied Ingersoil. "Was Christ divine?" persisted the general. "I don't know, do you?" shot back Bob. And then Col. Robert G. Ingersoil gave his friend a three-hour blast on this subject.

He went home and studied and finally decided to write the high theme and became neither skeptic nor indifferentist but a convinced believer.

After a year spent on the story of the Wise Men. there came to him the main story of Ben-Hur twixt the birth and death of Jesus. Under a wide-spreading beech tree at Crawfordsville, Ind., the main part of "Ben-Hur" was penned. The last book was written in a big adobe room of the governor's palace in Santa Fe, N. Mex. MOVIE GRAPHS

HERE is going to be a new kind of motion picture in town from now on. The Little theater of the cinema world opened formally last Wednesday night with "The Armored Cruiser Potemkin," called by Douglas Fairbanks "the greatest motion picture ever made." It was eagerly attended by those who have been distressed by the elements of "medium" and "tedium" in a good many movies these days. Washington now shares with New York a stimulating interest in a new type of picture, which has, as yet, not succeeded in interesting the big producers, but which is on the road to very sensational recognition, if we are to believe the sights and signs around us. Last week John Flaherty, producer of "Nanook of the North" and "Moana of the South Seas," recently gave an interview to a New York paper, in which he stated that government backing should be enlisted in behalf of the cirrectors who are interested in the higher type of motion pictures. The Little theater in New York, according to Mr. Flaherty's observation, has made very decided strides in the last months-and yet, and yet-

But almost the same moment that Mr. Flaherty shook an unsatisfied head. The Motion Picture Distributors of America gave a large banquet in New York to the Ambassadors, Ministers and representatives of Latin America. Herbert Hoover gave an address in which he called BEAUTY SPOT SNOW AIDS motion pictures "the most penetrating and persuasive of all methods of world communication." He went on to say that "despite the invaluable services of press associations no one will say that true international acquaintance and respect could be builded solely upon what we in North America carry as first page news."

"I sometimes think," continued Mr. Hoover, "that all this relation ship between methods, especially when they are separated by langauge, is comparable to our relation to a strange family in a neighboring house. We get our chief impressions from the disturbing noises, the dog fights and the baby's cries, but we don't understand the finer qualities of the next-door neighbors until we see their family album. So with nationswe know them when we see their motion pictures.'

While all of the distinguished Latin-American diplomats present at the dinner agreed with Secretary Hoover that as a means of international friendship you couldn't beat the movies, they did not all agree that the all possible care is given them to fos-ter their preservation and further their movies were doing a good job of it. No sooner had Mr. Hoover taken his seat than the distinguished Ambassador from Chile, Dr. Cruchaga, arose and made some very pointed remarks about "Hollywoodisms."

"The movie thriller which the United States sends to Latin America, he said, "the wild West serials with flashing steeds, knightly cowboys always ready to shoot and who seem protected by an invisible armor against bullets, railroad crashes, savage Indians, thieves, gamblers and detectives-all these give our people such an impression of your land that they would express earnest disappointment in seeing any of you gentlemen without a ten-gallon sombrero, and chaps, and two doublebarreled guns vomiting steel and fire at the slightest provocation."

Ambassador Cruchaga also seemed to think that American movie producers make frequent faux pas in portraying the life of Latin America, and he expressed himself quite forcefully on the subject as follows:

"The myth of Spanish-American lovers serenading their ladies under iron-grilled balconies bathed by romantic moonlight, the injustice of portraying all those who hail from south of the Rio Grande as born villains to be conquered by the mighty iron-fisted, two-gunned vigilante; and such absurdities as picturing an Argentine gentleman on his wedding day with the brilliant dress of a bull-fighter when the colorful Spanish entertainment is forbidden in that progressive republic are Spanish entertainment is forbidden in that progressive republic are things that we call, with a friendly smile of forbearance, 'Hollywoodisms.'"

"It is said," continued the Chilean Ambassador, "that artists are the best diplomats because they carry messages which are spoken in the universal language of the spirit. Moving pictures are an artistic vehicle for international understanding. Why not formulate a foreign policy to be carried on wherever moving pictures are being produced and exhibited?"

Secretary Hoover and Ambassador Cruchaga both hit the nail on the head. Mr. Hoover has made a great reputation at getting coordination between business men for better automobile tires, standard saws and uniform electric light bulbs. Perhaps now that he is rumored as the next Secretary of State, he will turn his attention to the most important purveyors of international friendship—the movies—and adopt Mr. Flaherty's idea of boosting the standard of the movie in conjunction with the government.

The nearest and dearest relatives of the picture stars don't gain very much by so being. Movie celebrities who have sisters and brothers, big or little, can do nothing much about getting them up the stellar ladder. On a pay roll of a producing corporation it was found that, doing extrabits for that organization in the past few months were Hal Dix, brother of Richard Dix, extra; Henry Menjou, brother of Adolphe Menjou, bits; King Meighan, brother of Thomas Meighan, bits Buddy de le Mittel Linguigh and the producing corporation it was found that, doing extrabits and restful. And there you are

Will Rogers is to do a picture entitled "A Texas Steer." The story is about a cowboy who is elected to Congress from Texas, and who goes to Washington to run affairs.

Somebody ought to start a revival of "Dr Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." John Barrymore's greatest, though-alas-not his latest. The last few productions which have starred him depended more and more upon such reliable props as Miss Astor, Miss Costello, Miss Taylor and the Vitaphone, to say nothing of Mr. Barrymore's own shapely legs moving through a Warner Brothers setting clad in slim, white satin. Already New York, which totters with signs advertising "Don Juan," is getting fretful. The New York World, in a list of short criticisms, states "Don Juan" as "A John Barrymore picture stolen by Estelle Taylor." Mr. Barrymore has been playing hockey from his own genius. He's going to get what's coming to him in the woodshed, and if he doesn't, he ought to.

Miss Elinor Patterson, one of the stars of Morris Guest's "Miracle" which had such a sensational run in New York and which has since toured the country, has gone into pictures. Among the rank and file of society girls who enter pictures, or who go on the stage, Miss Patterson has the distinction of being hard working.

The screen version of "Rose Marie" will be played with Renee Adoree in the lead.

. One of the items that might be entered under a column entitled "They Tell Us" is that Rod la Rocque and Vilma Banky are engaged. Mr. la Rocque is seen dancing with Miss Banky. He is seen dining with her. They are reported engaged. So it goes with the "celebs." (It would be a joke on us if they were.)

Last week, when "The General" was playing at the Palace theater, we happened to sit next to three young boys of the prep school age. The long, lanky blonde young gentleman, who wore a red sweater and who sat right next to us, was overcome with mirth at the delightful antics of Mr. Keaton. He and his friends exchanged remarks: "Gee, now he's going to get into trouble-oh, look."

"Gosh, that girl hasn't got a grain of sense. She's running the locomotive backwards."

"Now how'd you suppose he's going to get out of that?"

There are times when all of us are annoyed at the whispers, snuffles or rustles of our neighbors when we are trying to lose ourselves in some film. But in this case we were delighted. The whole-hearted enjoyment of these boys made the picture almost real. And it made us envy the already enviable Mr. Keaton for invoking so many sincere young giggles all over the land. (And the giggles aren't limited to the children at

It is (this modern school) to represent in terms of represend emotion all that is terrible in one's life. To concentrate in your body a bitter, mute violence. To get the effect by the negative; to speak by keep-ing silent; to move us terribly by what you do not do. What you do best so far is the backwash of violent passion, the gray despair of that which is past but remains as a darker, inverted, inarticulate tragedy. You, mademoiselle, in your best moments can be like bitter tears long since dried, but more bitter than ever; your art can be like a brittle, junned, dumb echo of some former wrong done to your soul."

The excepts, I have given, were written by Stark Young several years ago, yet they express with a vividness as I surely can not, the art of Miss Lord, which she is just now giving us in her latest play "Mariners," at the Plymouth theater. As she sits sewing her black widow's garments, which we know somehow will never be worn, she expresses a futility, a hopeless, bitter despair, such as perhaps has never been expressed on the stage before. Among the great things of the world, that moment stands.

actual writing Lilly is is hard to say. Could any other player, we wonder, make us see in this wretched woman what it was that had held the Rev. Mr. Cobb to her for so many years? Yet even in her rages, as Pauline Lord plays her, we understand somehow the charm which he could see and which was so dear to him, but which was hidden from the eyes of all other people.

T is rather hard for me to get started today. Maybe partly that I am silttle negligent, partly that I am tired having been working lately somewhat more strenuously than usual but principally. I believe, because I feel myself confronted by something big, know I can not cope with the and am sahamed. You see, I want to tell you today about Pauline Lord, and carifer this season I had occasion to speak of her when reviewing "Sandarwood" for the "Echoes," a play which you may remember failed, but in which the setress shown mobly. In that review I fell indo condescending sometimes and unvitalized phrase as, "Miss Lord is one of the finest actresses of our age," which is about as expressive as saying that Henry Wadsworth Long-fellow was quite a tall man!

I am furthermore embarrassed by the fact that Stark Young in his book "Glamour" has said some illuminating things about Miss Lord which are a temptation to paraphrase. But rather than do that let me quote a little. In the chapter on Pauline Lord Mr. Toung asks us to imagine that we are reading a letter from Rachel, the great Predge of Amoles. The letter begins: "Mademotive and the present one." Am office of the present one." Am office of the present one of the finest actress of Prance, you ask the best actress in America for a certain kind of tragic realism," and after briefly telling the estory of Rachel's early life, of how when she was 4 'pears old she and her slater left neighbour and took Paris, and from Paris spread her glory over the world.

"Phedre" admits in this imagined letter that the age in which she lived to Paris at 9, sang lustily in the streets, then worked her way up so that she great classical actress of France, you ask the best actress of America for a certain kind of tragic realism," and after briefly telling the estory of great art and would ave also the condition of acting, would have called in flat without the essential romance and poetry of great art and would have also the condition of the present of the condition of the present of the presen

TWO YOUNG

In 1920 two young men. S. N. Behrman and Kenyon Nicholson, were living in a two by four room six flights up in West Thirty-Sixth street, New York. Both were aflame with the literary urge. Behrman had just been graduated from Prof. Baker's English 47 lectures at Harvard, while Nicholson was fresh from Wabash university. As a release for their rhetorical impulses they undertook to immortalize the other inmates of the house by embodying the many types in short stories which they sent to H. L. Mencken and George Jean Nathan, editors of "The Smart Set." Not only did they send them to the leonoclasts, but they sold them.

After this start, Behrman and Nicholson turned their hands to playwriting. The first of their joint dramatic productions is "Love Is Like That," under the title of "The Prince," was written in 1923, but the authors of the play were inexperienced in merchandising their wares, and it was not until the play was given a tryout in Cincinnati last summer by Stuart Walker that it excited the attention of the New York managers. The week of its presentation the young men received no less than six offers for the play.

Behrman and Nicholson have collaborated on some seven plays, but "Love Is Like That" is their first effort to bask in the sun of production. Nicholson came into fame single-barred this fell when his "The Bretzer." man and Kenyon Nicholson, were living in a two by four room six flights up in

He was for a time book reviewer on the New York Times. Nichcison, to, has practiced as a purveyor of publicity. He wrote laudable accounts of the activities of Stuart Walker as early as 1919.

William Grant, who has scored several successes with the revuettee he is putting on as the new production director at the Strand theater, has had a wide experience in staging some of the biggest Broadway musical shows. This experience has been reflected in his work with the Strand cast and it is said that he has already lined up the shows for the next four weeks and from the production and ensemble number standpoint, he promises Strand patrons big and better entertainment and of character which will merit their patronage.

IMAGINATION OF PENNELL VISUALIZED

By ADA RAINEY.

By ADA RAINEY.

U Pon careful examination of the Pennell etchings and lithographs in the present exhibition in the present exhibition in the present exhibition in the present exhibition in the present anew with the tremendous versatility of the man and with his great imagination. His versatility lay in the graphic arts and his search for newer and better modes of expression rather than in many different media, but his imagination was gigantic, although in the matter of the size of depicting his subjects his plates were merely the very large lithographic plates. But they served to convey great ideas to the world which were seen by the power of a constructive and progressive imagination.

His series of lithographs from the beginning of those made in 1912 of the Panama canal and the construction of the great locks, one of the greatest feats of modern engineering, he has grasped the drama of the wondrous work that was going on there and has told the story of the gigantic achievement. When these were exhibited in New York, they seemed to open up a new era in the graphic arts as regards what could be done with lithography in an artistic way.

No one since 1850 has used such large plates for artistic lithography as Penucil used in this series of the Panama canal plates. They began that epic on work which can be followed up in the other series of "War Work in America," "War Work in England" and the great "Industries" series. The Gatun lock lithographs, "The Cut Looking Toward Culebra," "The Cranes; Miraflores Lock," "The Gates of Pedor Miguel" are records of the achievements of the great engineers told in a dramatic manner.

Had Special Privileges.

Pennell was allowed special privileges in inspecting the work of building the great ships and in making munitions in England and America and the result is seen in these marvelous prints. In the series of "Industries" he touches modern life in a way all his own. Work appealed to his imagination, he saw the drama of it and portrayed this in simplified essentials which stir in us the same power of imagination to evoke the scenes portrayed. "Building Locomotives, Baldwins." "Copper, Butte," "Furnaces, Gary," "The Mill at Gary," "Coal Scrape, Sheriandoah," are some of the outstanding prints and show as well the varied aspects from which he saw the work going on.

the varied aspects from which he saw the work going on. Pennell has been able to "get over" his idea in regard to the picturesque quality of industrial workers perhaps more effectively than any other artist who works in the graphic arts. It will remain a great memorial to the artist. He studies carefully the details of building as well as the details of building as well as the details of the great cathedrals which he sketched in Europe. The engineers said of his drawings that "they worked." The skilled engineer realized that they were technically correct. This was true in everything that he did. It was not only artistically conceived, it was true and exact, a combination not always associated. He always did his drawing on the spot and did not finish his work in the studio afterward.

The Greek temples attracted his interest because he was keen to compare the work of the ancients with that of the moderns. Mrs. Pennell says in a memorial written and printed especially for this exhibition in the Library of Congress: "As he drew them it seems as if the columns of the Temple of Jupiter' could not have told so well, had not Greeks placed them just where they stand in ruined majesty, nor Delphi anywhere save on its slopes, nor any of the other temples that proved to him, had he needed proof, the greatness of the Greeks as artists."

take the English views from those of Italy, because they are infused with that subtle something, the brooding feeling of the country. His water colors are delightful impressions of the poetry and power of New York. He loved the view of the river from his Brooklyn studio and thought it the most beautiful view in the world. Although connoisseurs believe that Pennell did his best work before 1900, especially in etching, yet there is a bigness and a power of imagination in much of his later work that is particularly appealing.

The present exhibition is memorable in many ways, for it is the work of a man who was prominent in the best period of American illustrating and is foremost in writing of the graphic arts with the authority that comes from years of experimenting in his chosen medium and because he has depicted graphically the "apotheosis of the wonder of work" as no other artist in this century has done. The exhibition will be on view for some months as most of the collection belongs to the Library of Congress. Many restrikes of the plates will later on be obtainable for distribution.

The boldest and freest of his works are of Rainier National park. These have the fine free perspective and feeling of the great spaces and mountain heights. There is something especially fine in them. There is a feeling in them of that quality "which breathes above ambition." The great peaks of the mountains where the pine trees are rugged with their fierce struggle for existence, twisted and gnarled, have a wonder of the power of nature which the artist has caught with tremendous effect. "Great Open Spaces," "Lone Tree. Paradise Valley." and "Bright Afternoon, Tatoosh Mountains," show this aspect. "Shadow Wall of Princess Louisa Inlet" and the "Dark Inlet" have something of the stark beauty of the flords of Norway.

Miss Riley's works are of landscapes and flowers, with here and there a street scene or an old house of France. In the latter she is happy in conveying the play of light on the surface of the stone. In "November" there is a land-scape of three trees which is excellent. "By the Santa Fe" is happy in an impression of blue and gold of the New Mexican territory, "Autumn Gold" also is very effective. Miss Riley is more skillful with her landscapes than with figures. The figures, while adding the human element, are not so good in drawing as are the elements of the landscapes. "The Bridge at Dinan" is an attractive bit of picturesque France. "Phiox and Lilacs" and "Autumn Flowers" are effective arrangements of flowers decoratively treated. The exhibition is decidedly attractive and conveys an impression of suave and pleasant scenes.

GLASS REPLIES TO CLAIM THAT HOUSE ORIGINATED RESERVE BANK SYSTEM

Col. Edward House, the enimated whispering gallery of the Wilson administration, and his erstwhile blographer and compiler of his "Intimate Papers." Prof. Seymour, of Yale, are given much to ponder in the book "An Adventure in Constructive Finance," by Carter Glass (Doubleday Page & Co., New York). In this volume Carter Glass, scholar, editor, statesman, former Secretary of the Treasury, and now senator from the Old Dominion, handles the pretensions of Col. House as "originator" of the Federal Reserve system without gloves and indulges in classic sarcasm and politic invective, seldom surpassed in the history of American politics.

Those who know Senator Glass, and his friends are legion, not only in his native State but elsewhere, realize that the spur to the writing of this book was not any credit which might have been taken from him personally for his share in founding the Federal Reserve system, but the indignation felt by many of President Wilson's friends in the various claims in the "Intimate Papers in The senator does not hesitate here and there in the first three chapters of his book to use the "short and ugly" term in describing some of the statements in "The Intimate Papers." In his introduction Senator Glass makes it plain that his book was inspired by the necessity he felt of refuting the "astounding pretension" of the "intimate Papers," in regard to the paternity of the Federal Reserve act and its particular management.

It is a proof of what the artistic viewpoint will do in the way of revelation of the beauty and charm of a city. Mr. Long has nothing commercial in his way of working. His lectures are given for love of Washington and pure patriotism. He seeks to merely cover the expense of transportation and that incidental to giving the lecture. He served in the war and has a record of effective service. He has given this lecture throughout the country and has received well deserved tribute. The lecture serves the double purpose of awakening the vision to the beauty of the city and to stimulate patriotic appreciation of our Capital.

QUIZ GAME BOOK MAKES MIND WORK

"Now, I'll ask one" has become the national pastime of the moment, with "Questions and Answers of 1927" the prevailing intellectual mode of the hour. The victorious in this new game of wits are those who have the good fortune to hold the book. How superior one can feel about the strange and fearful questions which are set down in the average book dealing with the new pursuit of America's restless intellectuals.

In "Answer This One." by Franklin P. Adams and Harry Hansen (Edward J. Clode, Inc., New York), is a very good type of the text book of the new fad, may we be permitted to state that in reading over the questions and answers we stumbled on at least one grave error on the part of the aforesaid editors. Attention, Mr. Adams and Mr. Hansen. Capt. John Smith did not marry the Indian Princess Pocahontas, who saved his life. In No. 7 of your quizzes the ninth question is "What English gentleman of Virginia married the Indian princess who saved his life?" On page 188, in the answers to question 9 of No. 7 of the series, you give the answer: "Capt John Smith." Wrong that time. Mr. Editors. Mr. John Rolfe, of Jamestown colony, would have been the first to correct you had your book been published in the seventeenth century instead of the twentieth.

Next to answering every single question in the book correctly, no reviewer can feel a keener joy than having discovered a mistake on the part of the compilers of a book of "Questions and Answers." It is a rare privilege to be able to criticise a criterion. So it is to be hoped that the editors will forgive this expose of another instance of the old truth that at times even "Jove can nod."

As the authors state, "it is a game," and when it is over you are either left.

It is full of romance and entertainment.

He experiences many adventures in this highly colored tale of the sorcery of the old French colony on the Isle of Bourbon.

This is a strong tale of primitive instincts, elemental passions of cruelty and ferocity waging continual war against the gentler, finer nature of Ulysse. Throughout the entire romantic tale there are descriptions of the hold the ancient tenets of sorcery have on these primitive believers.

The book is enriched with description of all French life and the languorous glamour of the Indian ocean. Not the least interesting portions of the book are the tales of welrd sorcerers' rites, of exotic jungles, of vibrant days and velvet tropic nights. Count Keyserling has become well known to the American reading public through his interesting book. "The Trave Diary of a Philosopher." The volume under consideration is a philosophical treatise on the social, economic and political world now in the making, as a result of the world war. In one place he says:

"I am concerned only with large relationships and with the aims of mankind as a whole. For this reason I treat the problem of the individual only in so far as the goal of regeneration of mankind can be reached only through the individual." In another place he says: "Man can today fulfil his task under the exclusive condition that he espouse his freedom completely and exclusively. The deepest understanding and the highest sense of responsibility can alone bring salvation today." All through the volume can be found sentences and paragraphs such as the two quoted, making clear to the reader the point of view of the author.

THE WORKER LOOKS AT GOVERN-MENT. By Arthur W. Calhoun. (In-ternational Publishers, New York). ternational Publishers, New York).

To those who are making a study of relations between the working people and the government this will prove to be an interesting volume. It is a study of the various functions of our government, especially as they have to do with the labor problem, and is, in truth a careful study. As might be expected from the title, and from the author, the remedy for existing conditions is in the formation of a labor party, and its becoming an active factor in elections. While this is true that author is not one of the radical kind but presents his argumenets in a fab manner. In every way it is much more commendable than the majority of laborations of a like character.

Oregon Shaft Exhales Air King Is Devotee of Wheel, as

Portland, Oreg., April 9 (By A. P.).

A well which provides an eastern Oregon ranch with excellent water and at the same time warns the family of the approach of a storm while the disturbance is yet distant, is being investigated by geologists.

The barometric well is situated near Maupin in a district where many varieties of geological formations, and phenomens have been discovered and which now is little less than a "happy hunting ground" for scientists.

This well, drilled 468 feet through a blanket of basalt, which overlays older formations, alternately blasts air from its depths and inhales air with remarkable velocity.

For a period of from 12 to 24 hours before the coming of a storm, and bedied weather change, a gentle draft in the said, begins to come from the well. As the storm nears, the draft increases in intensity until it becomes a whistling, waring jet. The well continues to "exhale," sometimes so violently that mist of water vapor is shot upward, until the weather disturbance passes over.

When the storm has subsided the intake commences. For 12 to 24 hours after the well stops "blowing" that mist of water vapor is shot upward, until the weather disturbance passes over.

When the storm has subsided the intake commences. For 12 to 24 hours at the continues apparently until an equilibrium has been reached.

One theory offered by geologists who have studied the well is that the shaft connects with several local pockets or can afford motorcars because of the high prices of locally-produced can ford motorcars because of the high prices of locally-produced can and the heavy import duties on foreign-made automobiles.

have studied the well is that the shaft connects with several local pockets or chambers containing air of a temperature and pressure approximately constant. This air, they hold, flows in or out of the well as the surface pressure becomes higher or lower than that in the underground passageways. The long periods of activity are accounted for by the throttling effect of the small orifice through which the air must pass

Now! Washington joins leading cities in adopting a definite plan for correct electrical wiring of homes.

This is the first announcement of a series that will convey to the people of this community all of the details of a nation-wide plan to eliminate the "hit or miss" methods of house wiring which have deprived the people of the convenient use of the great magic servant---Electricity.

The National Red Seal Plan

now becomes operative immediately in the city of Washington and its suburbs. Under this plan every home builder is assured, under contract, that his home will be correctly and adequately wired for the present and future use of electricity in a practical and convenient manner.

Look for this emblem on a home—it is the sign and symbol of a new day in electrical work-absolute assurance that what is done will be done right -a pledge backed at all times by the Electric League of Washington.

Communities everywhere are being organized under the Red Seal Plan. It is being applied and operated by the Electric League of Washington, with the support and cooperation of the Society for Electrical Development. Neither the society nor the local organization are operated for profit. Both are dedicated to the service of the public. The day is here when every man or woman can easily prescribe, define, recognize, appreciate an adequate wiring installation in the home, without the necessity of having expert technical knowledge on electrical matters.

> The next message on the Red Seal Plan will appear in this newspaper next Sunday

TITANIC DISASTER STARTED ORGANIZED ICE ZONE PATROLS

Two Coast Guard Cutters Are Sent to Warn Ships of Perils.

CATASTROPHE BROUGHT RADIO DISCIPLINE

Necessity of Preventing Air Confusion Realized After Sinking of Vessel.

A reminder of the fifteenth anniversar of the crashing of the Titanic into an iceberg April 14 is the fact that two of the latest type of coast guard cutters, the Tampa and the Modoc, have been detailed to the precarious task of patrolling that part of the trans-atlantic lane which from now until been detailed to the precarious task, of patrolling that part of the transatiantic lane which from now until early summer will be menaced by great icebergs drifting south from Greenland. A third coast guard ship, the Mojave, will be held in reserve at Boston.

The work of these ships, each of which carries a crew of 80 men, is to chart the location of the icebergs, calculate where they will be every few hours and broadcast warnings. Although the cutters carry mines of sufficient strength to blow up a battleship they often are able to do very little appreciable damage to the icebergs.

It took the shock the world received from the sinking of the Titanic and modern radio development to bring about this organized ice patrol, the expense of which is borne jointly by the principal maritime nations of the world.

Newness Brought Confusion.

Due to the newness of wireless, it was several days before the world could be made to realize that the Titanic, the world's largest, finest and newest steamship had sunk in water two miles deep with a loss of 1,517 lives, including Col. Jacob Astor, Maj. Archie Butt. President Taft's military aid, pedsonally known to many Washingtonians; Francis Milett. the Washingtonians; Francis Milett. the Washington artist; Mr. and Mrs. Isador Strauss, and others. A memorial fountain dedicated to Butt and Millett now stands directly back of the White House.

Jack Philips, chief radio operator, having sent out signals to bring relief, went down with the ship, sticking to his post until the last. Two years later a monument was erected at Goldaming in commemoration of his bravery, inasmuch as some 700 lives were saved. And so far as Philling, efforts were concerned, all Phillips' efforts were concerned, all might have been saved, since the ship about sixteen hours after being struck.

However, the ether was not then supervised as it is now at the time of such an emergency, and the ensuing confusion of different stations trying to reach ships at sea or to obtain further details from the Titanic so filled the air that the relief work was greatly retarded.

Messages Misleading.

The situation was referred to in an litorial of that date, which said:

All the efforts of Scotland Yard and Sherlock Holmes are eclipsed by radio when it comes to a matter of discovering missing friends or relations. The wireless penetrates every nook and corner of the globe and one short message for 3LO, Melbourne, Australia, has brought joy to people on the other side of the world.

The 3LO studio last week received a letter from London in this strain: "I can not thank you enough for your kindness in helping me to locate my brother, William Sherwood Clarke. It is a great relief to my mother and myself to know that he and his are well, and it seems wonderful that such a ready response should be given to an appeal for help from so many thousand miles away. It makes the great Dominion of Australia seem very near after all."

"It is believed this chaos caused by many stations broadcasting at once was responsible for the messages that the Titanic was en route for Halifax under her own steam the next night, when as a matter of fact the vessel had then been many hours at the bottom of the ocean. The same chaos was responsible for the reports that the passengers were being calmly taken off the ship in the afternoon, when the ship really went down at 2 o'clock in the morning of April 15."

The two great results of the terrible catastrophe were, first, establishment of a system of radio discipline and governmental control at the time of maritime disaster, and, second, the formation of the international ice patrol, guarding against the danger of floating ice along the great transatiantic lane.

of the United States Radio society, of Cincinnati, Paul A. Greene, executive manager of the organization, reports considerable opposition to direct advertising on the part of listeners.

"Through a recent questionnaire sent to listeners by the society," Mr. Greene said, "a bitter opposition was found against broadcasting stations engaged in direct advertising over the air. The United States Radio society immediately started a campaign against direct advertising over the air. Although complete plans have not been made to combat this evil, it is believed that through legitimate broadcasting stations, radio listeners in general and the press cooperating with the society, that this form of broadcasting will be exterminated. Although many radio enthusiasts do not believe this to be a serious problem, it is pointed out that the Federal radio commission does not have jurisdiction over this particular subject, and it must be solved by the listeners.

"Upon the belief that radio holds the greatest of possibilities for bringing inspiration, happiness, entertainment and education to humanity, to say nothing of the great public service which it may render in other directions, the United States Radio society came into existence.

Secretary, Chicago Federation of Labor.
Organized labor is unalterably opposed in principle and in practice to property rights on the air, maintaining that this new medium of communication and entertainment must be developed and utilized for the benefit of all the people and not as a source of profit for corporation, private or political interest. If the radio is left open to exploitation for profit, a chaos of discrimination and graft beyond the power of any individual or agency to control will be the result. should assume all rights and financial responsibility in broadcasting, and only those stations built and maintained by the listening public be entitled to the use of the air which Congress itself declares to be public property.

What right has an individual or corporation to use and exploit public property for profit? Organized labor believes that the extent and nature of broadcasting should be automatically limited by the numerical measures of the listening public sponsoring the program.

The âir is public property, not corporation property or private property. The air is the property of the public and must so remain unless the law is changed. The public has no right to give away or lease the air to private individuals or corporations and the government has also denied itself that right unless the denial of property rights on the air is a meaningless gesture.

Mr. Honegger, an admirer of jazz, says it was admirable in its first effects, but has become wearisome in its most extrawagant manifestations and must make way for something new. He finds little to charm him in the bolsterous bands of London which imitate the Paul Whiteman school.

The gypsy music, of which the Hungarians and Russians have long been fond, is what the Swiss composer expects to sweep over the world. It lends itself well to rollicking dances and can be played to advantage on many unusual musical instruments.

Technical objections were made to simultaneous broadcasting of network programs by chain stations using the same frequency by Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, of New York, addressing the Federal radio commission.

"There are not now available technical and practical means for simultaneous broadcasting by large networks of stations at the same frequency, and such networks should therefore not be required to operate on this plan," Dr. Goldsmith said. "But those stations which ask to broadcast identical programs on the same frequency should be permitted to do so.

"Simultaneous broadcasting on the same frequency by a network of stations would require a special type of transmitter, which is not in present use in broadcasting stations in the United States. PLANS OF CONTRACTORS ARE NOT EASY READING

Casual and Amateur Advice Almost Invariably Found Impracticable.

By far the greater number of those expecting to build homes are unmiliar with the information necessary to identify exactly that which they going to get in the way of plumbing and heating material. equally unfamiliar with the papers and drawings describing it, in connection with the architect's or general contractor's plans. In general, details of blue prints and specifications are things which it is hard for the average layman outside of the building trades to understand.

hter shelves books and articles on these subjects which will help the prospective home builder, to a great degree, to understand them.

The customer that the plumbing and heating contractor much prefers, is the owner who understands and can read plans; who knows how to read his specifications understandingly, and who, thereby, knows exactly what the builder or contractor has agreed to furnish him.

or intends to build is one to be feared by the plumbing and heating contractor. Amateur advice of this sort is almost invariably impractical, or presumes that the contractor will supply something which is not included in the contract as set forth by plans and specifications. If your architect or general contractor is worth having, his advice is worth following. If your plumbing and heating contractor is selected because you think he knows his business it is unfair to assume that he is trying to "do" you, because his methods seem to differ from those of the contractor who may be doing work for your friends. work for your friends.

It has been the intention of the Master Plumbers Association of Washington to protect the public against sharp practices and ignorance on the part of any contractor or builder. It is their sole purpose to give the very best of service to all those who are not familiar with the necessary preparatory conditions of building a home, including modern sanitary plumbing and hygienic heating. Such information is more than giadly given at all times by any of the reputable firms comprising the membership of this association.

Meet your plumber or heating con-tractor with confidence and good tem-per, and he will respond with a special effort to give you not only the value of your money, but a little more, for kindness in this direction you can capitalize confidence and courtesy, and you will enjoy it.

BUILDING PROGRESS AIDED SEWER SYSTEM

Legislation Was Necessary When Water Was Thrown From Second Floor.

A recent talk by Benjamin Kirk, be-

A recent talk by Benjamin Kirk, before the Association of Plumbing and Drainage Inspectors of Toronto, threw an interesting side light on the way sewage and waste was disposed of before modern drainage systems were devised. To sum up his talk, briefly, Mr. Kirk told how the disposal of waste water did not represent a serious problem when people lived in one-story houses. The methods used were crude and were hideously insanitary by today's standards.

There came a time when wealthier people began to build two-story houses, with ornate gables and latticed windows. In London conditions arose involving the rights of individuals to an extent that called for special legislation. The additional story on houses made it necessary to carry water upstairs. It naturally followed that, after being used, the dirty water had to be carried down. Housemaids took to avoiding this extra labor. They found it was a simple thing to raise a window and filing water out of it—to the great avoiding this extra labor. They found it was a simple thing to raise a window and filing water out of it—to the great indignation and discomfort of passers-by, who had to duck for safety. It took legislation to stop this practice. From that time on every city has had to regulate the disposal of all waste matter and sewage. The result is that great improvements have been made in house drainage. Today the building of 20 stories presents no particular difficulties in that way. But think of the modern community deprived of the means of sanitation designed, installed and maintained by the plumber.

Temple Church Roof Ruined by Beetles

London, April 9 (By A. P.). Depredations of the death watch beetle, damp and decay have about ruined the 700-year-old roof of Temple church. The old church, familiar to all American visitors to London, is to be practically reroofed, as the ancient oak roof of the early English addition to the round church is now deemed unsafe.

The timbers affected are old oak and some yellow deal supports that were worked into the roof 200 years ago when there was a falling on one side. The church, consecrated in 1183, was originally a monastery of the Knights Templars.

FRENCH CARRIAGES ARE PUT IN MUSEUMS

Paris, April 9 (By A. P.)-The passing of the horse-drawn carriage in France is likely to be linked in history with the opening of two carriage seums this year.

but it seems likely that American methods will be adopted.

One critic laments that speed in funerals will mark the farewell of one of the most beautiful sentiments in France—respect for the dead. He foresees the end of the solemnity in French death ceremonials.

There are twelve classes of funerals in France, and even the poorest, with one shabby paid mourner, has the right of way everywhere. French law requires men to remove their hats as it passes. Relatives march uncovered behind the hearse, regardless of weather, and remain uncovered throughout long graveside services.

A permanent display is ready at the Complegae palace, and a smaller one is being installed at the palace of Fontainebleau, the only royal residence that has not had such an exhibition.

Carriages have been in use in this part of the continent just four centuries. In the reign of Francois the Flist there were three carriages in Paris. There probably are not many more than that in use here now, although many of the old nobility still have their stables and coach houses, with a carriage of two still kept polished, but with automobiles in adjoining stalls.

Masked Man Routed By Small Fox Terrier

St. Louis, April 9 (By A. P.)—The courage of "Mike," a small fox terrier with the heart of a battler, prevented the robbery of his master, Thomas F. James, vice president of the Brown Shoe Co., who was held up in the rear of his home.

A masked man who had drawn a revolver and ordered James to put up his hands, fled when the dog kept leaping at him and snapping at his legs, even after a bullet fired by the would-be robber had grazed his forepaw.

Owner of first American bathtub almost jailed

The first American bathtub on record was used in Cincinnati 80 years ago. Adam Thompson, the owner, brought back the idea from England, where on a visit he met Lord John Russell, inventor of the bathtub.

Thompson had a bathtub made of mahogany, lined with sheet lead. It weighed nearly a ton. A tank in the attic supplied water to the tub. One pipe, coiled down inside a chimney, supplied warm water.

Thompson was so proud of his bathtub that he gave a party, inviting his guests to bathe. Newspapers decried it; politicians thundered against it; even doctors predicted dire consequences to bathers—and Thompson was almost sent to jail! Philadelphia wanted to ban the bathtub, and Boston actually passed an ordinance that made bathing unlawful except upon medical prescription!

Today! There are still too many homes with a lack of facilities for bathing! These make Thompson's bathtub of the 1842 vintage seem luxurious, There's no excuse for this at today's low cost of modern plumbing fixtures.

No home may justly be called modern unless it has sanitary, up-to-date bathing and toilet equipment. Personal hygiene depends largely upon frequent bathing. Bathe frequently—daily if possible—and you'll enjoy life more! The bath-a-day habit is a health habit-increases the pleasure of living,

"During long trips undertaken in the touring season now approaching it is easy to overheat the battery, pargives a motor car a severe test and precautions are recommended by experts in preparation for the summer souring season.

"If you have not already done so," asys H. N. Davock, service manager of the Packard Motor Car Co., "be sure to remove the antifreeze solution from your radiator. At the same time see that the whole cooling system is flushed out. It is a good plan to dissolve a half pound of common baking seds in four gallons of warm water and run this solution through the radiator. This helps eliminate scale. "Motor car manufacturers have spent much time and vast sums of money for the safety and peace of mind of car "owners in four-wheel brake equipment." But all this can be negatived if the owner neglects his brakes. Winter is hard on brakes. Now is a good time to check them for wear or adjustment.

SMOOTH AS EVER"

"After driving my Willys-Knight 43,000 miles, the motor ran as smoothly as when I bought it." This from one of thousands of enthusiastic owners.

The Willys-Knight engine is the only type of engine that improves with use-constantly gaining in smoothness, power, economy. From 118 to 158 less moving parts than any poppet-valve engine. No carbon-cleaning, no valve-grinding. Up-keep costs radically reduced.

In addition, the Willys-Knight offers these other important advantages:

Belflex shackles for chassis silence · Positive, mechanical 4-wheel brakes · Skinner oil rectifier prevents crankcase dilution · 7-bearing crankshaft · Narrow front posts for greater vision · Light control at steering wheel · Adjustable front seat · 8 Timken bearings in front axle. New-type air cleaner · Thermostatic temperature control of cooling system.

Autoists Tempted to Become Satisfied With Existing Hard-Surfaced Roads.

TIME TO REST IS FAR IN FUTURE, SAYS HENRY

Must Make Even More Progress in Construction, Declares A. A. A. Head.

Requires Constant Alertness.

Bringing the world has even known, embracing more than 500,000 miles of surfaced roads threading their way with imposing effect into all parts of the country. Marvelous as this achievement is, it embraces a subtle danger that motorists and others should be warned against, according, a statement issued yesterday by national headquarters of the American Automobile association.

That danger, the statement says, is the temptation to become satisfied with the present situation, to regard the present hard-surfaced highway mileage as sufficient for the nation's needs.

"The public and the public official whose automobile travel still is confined largely to muddy, rutty, almost whose automobile travel still is confined largely to muddy, rutty, almost many and the public official and public off urpasses anything the world has even

"The public and the public official must realize constantly that the time when it may rest upon its oars in the matter of highway building is far, far in the future," the statement quotes Thomas P. Henry, president of the national motorit agency. "Cur progress in road building has been remarkable. But, if the fine promise of the automobile rapidly outgrows what may conclude the property of the contiguous territory that the automobile rapidly outgrows what may "Thus, there is no dearth of data to prove the necessity for constant exmobile for even further strengthening the conomic fabric of America is to be realized fully, we must make even more remarkable progress."

degree, a vast majority of merica's 22,000,000 motor car owners go in for touring. This driving, in the main, is confined to the best mileage of the more than 3,000,000 miles of highway that exist in the United States. Because of this fact, the motorist is likely to judge the whole highway system by that part of it over which he travels. "It is the old story of judging the box of strawberries by the large, luscious fruit on the top. Just as the berry buyer regrets his purchase when his error is discovered, so the motor car owner eventually will bemoan his bad judgment if he assumes the national highway system to be perfect because his touring has been confined to the best of roads. It is a mental trap into which one easily may fall unless one is wary of the danger of its presence." America has enormous space and tremendous resources in the important matters of finance and genius and the automobile needs increasingly more room in which to fulfill its premise, the statement continues. Thus, it says, while the need is prescuit, the moans

And when Flying Cloud brakes say, "Stop," they mean it-all the time, at any speed, forward or going back under any and all conditions of road and weather.

Why We Hope It Rains and Rains

We hope it pours so that you can try Flying Cloud brakes after driving through miles of mud and water.

They are sealed so that dirt and water don't get into the drums. That means that they "stop" when other brakes most often fail because of dirt and water in them.

They work as well in hot weather as in cold-as well at the bottom of a long, long grade as at the top. They give equal pressure on all four wheels, whether the car is going forward or going backward. They will stop a Flying Cloud in its own length from a speed that you'll think is too fast to allow it.

And you'll stop in a straight line.

There will be a Flying Cloud ready for you during National Braking Demonstration Week.

New Style Ignition Lock Is Introduced; Camshaft Is Redesigned.

Addition of numerous improv and refinements to its eight-cylinder acceptance among all fine automobiles in 1927, is announced by the Hupp Motor Car Corporation.

Changes in the eight include refinements to each of its ten standard body designs, addition of three custom bodies by Dietrich to its list of models, together with engine and chassis betterments resulting in an even greater efficiency of operation power at every speed range, even faster

The body interior discloses several other improvements. Perhaps the first to catch the eye will be the new instrument panel, of most imposing and costly construction, with its indirect lighting and grouping of all gauges under one glass. These include clock, speedometer, ammeter, oil pressure and gasoline gauge. Adjacent to them are the buttons and controls for ignition choke.

No fubt the vicinity of Seventh and Florida avenue will be core of very thoroughly on and after next Tuesday by automobile salesmen. Before the summer is over some one may be fortunate enough to dig up a prospect between innings.

Side Remarks

Fred Haller, who claims to have qualified as an expert on the manly art of self defense, states that in his opinion it is the greatest form of sport there is.

Having won everything at White Sulphur last week, Lou Julien hied for other golf fields to conquer and set out for Cincinnati, Chicago and a few other points further West. Keep on, Lou, and you will find someone that will make you explain why you did not bring the prize back.

Joe Trew has taken up the long lost art of walking. He admits that any morning you can catch him hikting from his home to his office, but admits that not every morning does he "hoof it" all the way. We fee that you are truth/ul, Joe, but being from Missouri, "must be shown."

Virginians by now no doubt know all bout the Flying Cloud. Charley rooks has been in the Old Dominion tate for the past week explaining the ifference between jib and starboard to ome prospective buyers.

They tell you that it has no fascination for them and they may be honest in the conviction, but yet we have to see the individual who, once golf puts its mark on him, could ever entirely get away from the game. Ray Semmes said a year ago he had given up the sport, but whether on doctors' orders as an excuse or because he likes it, we understand that he is again back chasing the little white rubber pill.

With the spring weather on us, the salesman who has used the alibi all winter as to why he could not bring in the orders on account of the overcast skies must now go to work.

"The obvious method to achieve such results is simply to increase bore or engine size, with consequent lessened economy of operation. But the Hupmobile method, like the fine racing cars, is to refine to the utmost every minute detail and obtain even greater efficiency and greater economy.

New Cylinder Head.

"Chassis refinements, in conformance with Mr. Watts' researches, include a redesigned camshaft, new type cylinde ammeter, oil pressure and gasoline gauge. Adjacent to them are the buttons and controls for ignition, cloke, manifold heat control, windshield wiper and ignition locks. This last is a new automotive design, superseding the former transmission and ignition locks. Merely by pushing the lock button, the motor is stopped, and the entire ignition system is both grounded and disconnected, making it inoperative and impossible to drive it away.

Chassis Improvements.

New light controls are located atop the steering wheel. The filament bulbs insure adequate light, when tilted, without showing a glare to the driver of an approaching car.

In pointing to the chassis improvements, in conformance with Mr. Watts' researches, include a redesigned camshaft, new type cylinder had, stronger and stiffer connecting the most popular musical functions in most cloving Berlin, April 9 (By A. The Grapevine telegraph of the automobile industry is clogged with rumors these days. In the far distant background there may be some elements of truth in what is being reported as will happen through consolidations, price cuts etc., but the individual who waits for these things to come about, we fear is going to become about, we fear is going to become very impatient.

Washington's greatest conversa-tion fisherman is busy getting his tackle together. Fred Harvey-cutter, if one would place perfect confidence in what he has to say about his ability as a disciple of Izak Walton has so completely fished out the Patuxent river that the government is considering re-stocking these waters.

Lou Laudick has returned from White Sulphur, a well tamed young golfer. His long drives availed him nothing for it was proved to him that it takes more than a long drive to make a golf course in par.

"Bob" Worthington has a dog that he is sending to one of our eastern universities. He hopes to have the wisest dog in town.

Spring fever has gotten Walter Lambert, for though he does not plan to move to the country for some time yet, he is already availing himself of all the old alibis to get away for the effection.

Joe McReynolds is the latest to move to Connecticut avenue, hav-ing opened a branch on this famous thoroughfare last week.

CHRYSLER

Now 4th of World's Great Companies

Swept past all but three in dollar volume by public endorsement

MOTOR car figures for the last six months of last year and the first few months of this, register an amazing reversal of public opinion.

After three years Chrysler has been swept by popular approval from 27th to 4th place—led only by one great independent manufacturer and by two units of a corporate group.

The Chrysler watchword from the very first has been emphasis upon quality rather than quantity—but quantity has rolled up in ever increasing volume as a result of this outstanding Chrysler quality.

In the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, after only three years of public history, Chrysler has been swept in recent months past all but two individual cars which are units in a corporate group of seven cars.

No such realignment has taken place since automobiles were first built; and yet the process is strictly in line with the public disposition to approve and admire individual initiative, to recognize and reward engineering progressiveness and valorous disregard for out-worn traditions.

Because nothing like it has ever happened before in the history of motor cars, the moral is so plain that there is nothing left for the discriminating buyer to do but learn through actual riding and personal experience why Chrysler has registered this amazing advance.

The four great Chrysler cars are themselves the strongest evidence of the new standards and new qualities of performance and long life which have brought about such an amazing readjustment in America's greatest manufacturing industry.

FIVE BODY STYLES;

50 miles and more per hour

In the Chrysler "50", Walter P. Chrysler and his corps of engineers, studying the field of fine and low-priced six-cylinder cars, strove to produce a four-cylinder car which would unmistakably advertise its greater value by its greater performance, greater sturdiness and greater long life.

In its 50-miles-plus per hour, 5 to 25 miles in 8 seconds, 25 miles to the gallon, they gave the public something immediate, something convincing, something final and conclusive with which to measure Chrysler "50" against and above anything around its class either in six or four cylinders.

Chrysler "50" has been overwhelmingly accepted by the public for what it was designed and built to be—the giant of its class in Standardized Quality, outstanding performance, full family size, complete appointment and every essential that makes for outstanding and indisputable value.

All prices f.o. b. Detroit, subject to current Pederal excess tax.

Chrysler "60" SIX BODY STYLES $1075 to $1245 60 miles plus—with ease

Mr. Chrysler and his engineers, in designing and developing the six-cylinder Chrysler "60", set their hearts on a car which would in large measure advertise and sell itself.

They strove for a type and quality of roadease and road-readiness and supreme comfort which would do its own talking—so that any man, woman or child could swiftly see that the "60" was a car among cars, unprecedented at its price and in its class.

They wanted the Chrysler "60" to settle all arguments by demonstration and by difference—and the extent to which it is dominating its own six field is an ambition splendidly fulfilled.

With such outstanding excellence in every phase of performance plus typically Chrysler smart appearance and complete equipment, it is surely not surprising that Chrysler "60" should be recognized as a value utterly unapproached by any other six of medium price.

All prices f.o. b. Detroit, subject to current Federal excite term

Chrysler "70" BIGHT BODY STYLES $1495 to $1795 70 miles plus—

Chrysler "70" seized and held first place in its dashing class from the first month of its appearance more than three years ago.

Mr. Chrysler and his engineers conceived a smart, swift, fashionable car which would be to the public a refreshing departure from previous conventional design.

It was the car conception on which they builded the Chrysler business, and not a day has since ensued that they have not striven to clinch its magnetic appeal to discriminating men and women.

Chrysler "70" is as new and as advanced over the ordinary car of today as it was three years ago—Standardized Quality reflects itself in every phase of "70" construction and "70" performance.

It is still pre-eminently the 70-mile-plus quality car of its class—vogue-established and value-established as unique, alone, and literally above competition.

All prices f. o. b. Detroit, subject to merrous Pederal media tam.

$2495 to $3995 80miles plus—92 horsepower

The Imperial "80" is the fruit of Mr. Chrysler's conviction that the last word had not been spoken in fine car manufacture.

The American public has long since discovered that no matter how large a sum they may be prepared to invest, it is impossible to find elsewhere all that the Chrysler Imperial "80" offers in motoring luxury.

For the Imperial "80"—the supreme expressions of the Imperial "80"—the supreme expressions.

For the Imperial "80"—the supreme expression of Chrysler Standardized Quality—was designed and built for that market which sets no limit on price. It is all that the genius of Chrysler engineers could conceive to make a car as fine as money can build.

80 miles and more an hour, 92 horse power rendered fluid and flexible in a responsiveness signifying perfect mastery of both; an ease of riding that makes motoring comfort take on a new meaning—these are but symbols of the kind of luxury which Chrysler engineers have built into the Imperial "80".

Hills that have been the traditional test for motordom's most powerful cars are topped by the Hudson Super-Six on a rising speedometer.

Alertness and immediate response to the throttle account for the way the New Hudson Super-Six takes advantage of every driving opportunity.

There is no motor labor. There is no sense of the mechanical. All feeling that there is a motor and complicated mechanism is absent.

And whether in city driving or in high sustained speed over country roads the action and comfort of your Hudson is the very luxury of motion.

America's Fastest Stock Car

Breaks Official A. A. A. 1000-Mile Stock Car Record

Average 68.37 miles per hour

Times 1000-mile stock car Cup.

Entrant—A strictly STOCK Auburn Straight Eight.

Distance—One thousand miles. (twice as long as the Indianapolis Motor Speedway race).

Former Record-59.54 miles per hour. Held by Chrysler. Auburn's nevy record—68.37 miles per hour.

Elapsed time—14 hours, 37 minutes, 32.8 seconds.

Driver-Wade Morton

Certified—By the American Automobile Association.

Note—The A. A. A. officials tear down the Auburn that made the record, and also get another Auburn stock car and tear it down, and make comparisons to prove that the car used was a

Because so many companies are "making" 75 and 80 miles an hour speed in their advertisements...

Because it is so difficult for even special racing cars to make that speed . . .

And because Auburn knows how rare such speed is in stock cars, we decided to break the 1000 mile stock car record and give the public definite proof of Auburn's honest speed and durability in an official test, sanctioned by the A. A., where speedometer readings are ignored.

This record was held by a Chrysler with the very creditable speed of 59.54 miles per hour ... a truly remarkable performance.

Auburn breaks this record... breaks it by the liberal margin of 8½ miles per hour... or, with an average of 68.37 M.P.H. beating the former record by two hours, ten minutes and twenty-two seconds.

The average man can not, in the wildest flight of fancy, imagine what 1000 miles of continuous, sustained speed really means. That is farther than from Chicago to New York City. The fastest train requires 20 hours for that trip and must change engines several times to do it.

BUT, one Auburn stock car DID it in six hours LESS time, including the time required for 7 stops for fuel, tires and driver relief. Not only that, but the Auburn made this record run during one of the worst sand storms ever known in California. Sand was flying so thick that you could hardly see the car, it blinded the driver.

Before the storm became so severe the driver had averaged 71.85 miles per hour for the first 300 miles. Then he was signalled to SLOW DOWN. All we wanted was to abundantly BREAK THE RECORD and not test the Auburn to ITS limit at the risk of endangering human life.

But, What Of It?

Great and unparalleled, as this performance is, it is ONLY INCIDENTAL with us. Conclusive proof though it is, of one of Auburn's superiorities, yet it is only fragmentary evidence of Auburn's VALUE.

There are about 7000 parts to an automobile. To achieve this record EVERY ONE of these parts in the Auburn had to be of EQUAL quality; had to function with equal efficiency and stand up with equal endurance. THAT is significant. THAT is what underwrites your investment in a car.

We made this speed test not only to establish Auburn's superiority beyond question, but also to PROTECT THE PUBLIC by stopping the wild performance claims being made by some competitors who furnish no proof except of their ability to spend fabulous sums in advertising.

They "dared" others to t-run, out-perform, and out-endure them. We would have ignored it, except that because of the established reputations of their name-plates, the public was being misled.

Not only have we settled the performance question with finality, but we confidently believe that Auburn is easily capable of doing the same thing at 85 miles per hour.

It was a SIMPLE matter for Auburn to make this speed record. In fact a ridiculously easy thing to do, even though spectacular. The important thing is that people will be attracted to the Auburn car, they will compare it point by point; they will DRIVE it and LEARN that Auburn is a BETTER automobile in EVERY respect.

Maybe you do not want to break speed records, but you DO want the built-in stamina; the inherent efficiency that makes such superiority possible. You want the most modernized car; the one that runs smoother; handles easier; rides more comfortably; gives greater VALUE in every way and remains a stranger to the repair shops. You want the most for your money now and the highest resale value later.

Drive the Auburn. it does not give you ALL that you want better than any other car, you will not be asked to buy.

The WASHINGTON REALTOR

VOL. 1.

THE WASHINGTON REALTOR Published Every Sunday by the Washington Real Estate Board James P. Schick, Executive Secretary Editor

Know Washington.

Almost every person has a pride in the city in which he dwells, and there is a prevailing tendency on the part of nearly every one to expound ne beauties and attractions of the community in which he resides. This feeling of pride and this tendency is particularly intensified in persons engaged in the real estate business, but it is by no means confined to them. In our day all lines of business recognize that it is quite as important to broadcast facts regarding their communities as it is to extol the virtues of the products which they offer to the public. In order to enlarge the field of consumers the city itself must be sold.

There is a keen competition among cities and to sell a city it is neces sary to give to the public information concerning its merits.

The National Capital has much to offer in the way of beauty, refine ment and culture, and all of these things are so well known that they require comparatively little publicity. In addition to these attractive features, however, Washington has many features not so well known but at the same time quite as important and with which the public should be acquainted. Are you familiar with these features? Are you acquainted with these facts?

We are happy to begin in this issue a series of articles on "Your City." which have been prepared by men who speak with authority and which will contain facts which should be known by all who are interested in the development and in the welfare of the nation's Capital.

We commend these articles to you and suggest a careful and thoughtful perusal of them. The more familiar you are with the facts concerning your city and the more intimately you know of its advantages, the more useful citizen you will be and the better enabled to render a Worthington & Son, George Y.

A taxpayer who in 1916 sold lots on an installment basis with only 10 per cent being initially paid, and who computed his income on that basis, may not change the basis to that of not declaring any income until the installments equal the cost of the lot sold. This is the decision just handed down by the board of tax appeals in the case of Lee Doc. 1408.

Having made his election to make his return on an installment basis, the taxpayer may not change because subsequent legislation makes it to his interest to do so, the board ruled.

United States and Canada, who will be on their way to Seattle, Wash., in midaugust via the eight or ten special trains already planned for bringing delegates there to the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, are already being urgently invited by their fellow realtors in cities along the route to "See America First" by the way. The Los Angeles Realty board, for example, has appointed a committee of 35, with Mason Case as chairman, to arrange entertainment for realtors using the Los Angeles gateway in going to the coming annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, to be inclusive. Wash., August 10-13,
The Great Falls (Mont.) Real Estate board, and the Great Falls Chamber of Commerce, in behalf of Great Falls generally, have united in invitting realtors from the South and East to break their journey either coming or going by a day's stopover at Great Falls. Great Falls, Great Falls, the invitations point out, lies in a direct line between Yei "stone and Glacter National parks. The two organizations plan to spare no effort to make the visit worth while.

And to frequent gratified acknowledgments that our own nation is signally favored in its material possessions, the President takes pains often to remind his countrymen that for a well-rounded citizenship of a republic where each member has a potent voice in government, intelligence with practical idealism is essential. It is with this dominant thought that the President concludes his latest message on the opening of Congress when, after a reference to the artistic laemorial bridge which will extend to the nation's shrine at Arlington, he says:

"We are embarking on an antitious."

Aithough for the last two weeks there has been no doubt concerning the Grady's team champlonship in the Realtors Bowling league, competition is keen for second place. Much of the advance in cost is due to salary increases, and elementary teacher's basic salary in 1907 being $500; the same in 1926 was $1,400. When an eight-room addition to this school, alike in design and size and material to the original, was contracted for in 1922, the cost was $114,169. These figures are typical of the recent trend upward of the cost of permanent school equipment.

Aid in Junior Highs.

Another notable development in public school education has been the introduction of the junior high schools. There has long been a growing conviction among educators that the traditional system of eight years of eletional system of eight years of ele-mentary study and four years of high school was too inelastic. Hence the recent division of public school in-struction is changing from the old "8-4" plan to the new "6-3-3" plan: six years for elementary, three for jun-ior high, three for senior high. My paramount interest is also the proper education of the children and youth of the District. All other subjects sink into insignificance when compared with the importance of education not only to this generation, but particularly to the citizenship of tomorrow. Constitutionality of municipal restriction of land uses under the police power through the enactment of zoning ordinances has been upheld for the second time by the Supreme Court in the case of Beery V. Houghton, handed down March 21. The court here upheld the constitutionality of the zoning ordinance of Minneapolis, in a case involving the right to build an apartment building in a neighborhood that had been restricted to single family residences.

The plaintiff in the case had argued that the ordinance violated articles 5 and 14 of the Constitution of the United States.

No written opinion was handed down in the case. The judgment given is in accord with the recent clear-cut decision of the court in the case of the village of Euclid, Ohio vs Ambler Realty Co.

Setback in Louisiana.

Louisiana State and New Orleans municipal codes under which negroes are barred from residence in predom-inantly white communities where a majority of the white residents have not given their consent in writing have been held unconstitutional by a de-cision of the United States Supreme Court handed down March 14. The Supreme Court's ruling reverses a de-cision of the Louisiana State Supreme court.

The New Orleans ordinance forbids the public authorities "from issuing a building permit for the construction of a residence for negro occupancy in a white community," or for a white person in a 'negro community, without the written consent of a majority of the persons of the opposite race inhabiting persons of the opposite race inhabiting that community."

The Supreme court of Maryland has held the previous zoning ordinance of the city unconstitutional.

Real estate men have been unusually pleased by President Coolidge's appointment of Mr. Nichols to the National Capital park and planning commission beby President Coolinges appointment of Mr. Nichols to the National Capital park and planning commission because of the fact that he is not only an expert city planner with views in accord with the other members of the commission, but also because his wide experience as a real estate developer has acquainted him with the manifold problems confronting real estate men and a thorough appreciation of the practical side of city planning, as well as the esthetic development.

Mr. Nichols will give an illustrated lecture, and his talks have always drawn a considerable number of experts. It is expected that a large attendance will be had at the April meeting to hear Mr. Nichols and to transact business which will come before the board. John F. Maury, president of the board, will preside, and following the meeting a buffet supper will be served.

DECLARED HELPFUL IN VALUING PROPERTY

Would Eliminate Bias in Witnesses Summoned; Text of Proposed Law.

A bill which would give the judge in any civil action the right to appoint one or more disinterested qualified experts to give testimony on the matter involved in the litigation has passed the lower house of the Ohio legislature and is now before the senate.

The provision would create a machinery for setting up expert testimony in such matters as valuation of real property in such a way as to eliminate bias in the witnesses summoned. Need for such machinery has been pointed out emphatically by the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

tional Association of Real Estate Boards.

While the proposed measure would cover every type of expert testimony involved in civil actions, the text follows very closely the model bill recommended by the National Association of Real Estate Boards at its last annual meeting for insuring the calling of disinterested qualified witnesses and for eliminating abuses in regard to expert testimony upon real estate valuations.

COOPERATIVE PLAN APARTMENT CALLED WASTE ELIMINATOR

Comfort and Economy Held Best Reasons for Buying in Building.

JANITOR SERVICE COSTS ONLY $1.20 PER MONTH

Location and Construction Should Be Studied Before Making Purchase.

The cooperative ownership of apartment buildings is based upon the fundamental economic principle of eliminating waste, together with the elimination of the entire landlord's profit. Every dollar of this waste is paid by the renter and all of it can readily be saved by organizing effort and combining capital in such manner as to place the ownership and operation of the building in the hands of those who live in it.

There are many reasons in favor of the purchase of a cooperative apartment home, most of them having been given to the public through the press and otherwise in this city during the last few years. However, the writer feels that they may all be reduced to these two simple facts, namely, comfort and economy. These two "virtues" are the real cause for the purchase of a cooperative apartment home rather than an individual home.

The apartment home is most economical because in the beginning, there Comfort Big Feature.

The second outstanding feature, that of physical comfort, is to be found in the cooperative apartment home, where sail drudgery and care of home maintenance is not required of the owner. The walks, steps, lobby, halls are kept clean at all times. You have hot water and heat with never a thought about the furnace, shoveling coal, cleaning out ashes, and without even having to order the coal. Your taxes, insurance, water rent, are all taken care of for you, the putting up and taking down of screens and awnings, all accomplished without even a mental accomplished without even a mental mote on your part. Thus the entire task together with the accompanying worry of home maintenance is eliminated.

In selecting a cooperative apartment

In selecting a cooperative apartment home there are several vital considera-tions that should be observed, if one is to get the best in this type of home is to get the best in this type of home ownership.

(1) Location: The location of any home is of course most important, and a point that should be considered carefully. The building should be situated in a strictly residential neighborled in a strictly residential neighborled in the strictly strictly strictly as the strictly strictly strictly as the strictly strictly strictly neighbors. (2) Construction of building: The building should unquestionably be a fireproof structure. The better type is of reinforced concrete, with slab floors.

of reinforced concrete, with slab floors, and with every partition of hollow tile or gypsum block. This is not only fire-proof, but adds greatly to the sound-proofing of the walls and floors. Select your apartment home in a building that is at least five stories in height.

Should Study Occupants. 3. Selection of occupants: A careful discrimination in the selection of a congenial group of owner-occupants is most imperative in a successful cooperative building. Make sure the firm or individual in charge of the sale of the building is qualified by experience and is thoroughly impressed with a sense of responsibility toward the purchasers, whether the building is sold rapidly or not.

4. Price and terms: The price of the apartment home, while an item to consider in comparison, should not be the main issue by any means.

The terms, on the other hand, are most important, for therein lies the vital safety factor of the transaction. For example: If one of the owner-occupants should be unable to pay his monthly payment after the building was in operation, the possession of his apartment would be temporarily taken away from him by the corporation and board, the District commissioners, the bureau of the budget, the Congress, the President and the people are in practical accord, and all are deeply concerned in making the public schools a model for the nation."

The memorable tribute to Mark Hopkins, former president of Williams college, a guide and exemplar of youth, has doubtless been proclaimed from a thousand platforms on graduation exercises and like occasions; namely, that a log with Mark Hopkins at one end and a student at the other is a university! This is but a trenchant way of saying that the basis of all real instruction resides in the individual. The teacher's personality, zeal, adaptability and vision measure the degree of success in imparting knowledge, developing ambition and molding character. Instruction by the true teacher is not limited to the subjects listed in the printed curriculum. Through his contacts with plastic, young life there are formed habits of thrift, industry and true sportsmanship; conditions are created that develop the personal virtues of courtesy, loyalty, reverence and patriotism—the necessary ingredients to make a good citizen.

Schools Rank High.

In this respect, the Washington WASHINGTON

a good citizen.

Schools Rank High.

In this respect the Washington schools take high rank. The professional and scholastic tone of its teachers is constantly rising. The standard of its normal schools is set upward for the teachers of the future. Those in the service now more than ever before, augment their usefulness by courses in college and university, in travel and specialized study. The interest in the public school system by a watchful public stimulates a wholesome arraisement of its merits and its weakness to the ultimate advantage of the community. The organized groups of citizens' associations, civic and trade groups and various clubs whose definite purpose is to render service to the community, have generously and their aid and this helpfulness, coming from the public, has found expression chiefly in cooperating with the school administration in outlining the school needs of the District, which shall be enumerated in the annual estimates and find enactment in adequate laws and appropriations.

The census reports tell us of gratifying decreases in illiteracy here in Washington; from 8.6 per cent in 1900, to 4.9 per cent in 1910 and to 2.3 per cent in 1920. This steadily improving trend places us in an enviable position with respect to many other municipalities. But the ideal community is without illiteracy.

If the definite aim of the public schools were to be couched in one word, the slogan might well be "progressive-

The S. F. T. P. O. C. P. C. P. G. By JOHN J. DALY

EY! George!
Hardly any one ever enters a Pullman car in these United States without thus signaling the porter; though, of course, the porter's name usually is not George.

As a matter of fact, of all the Nubian Knights of the Whisk-Broom traveling back and forth, across, up, down and athwart this country, day after day, night upon night, week in and week out, only so many are named George.

Chances are 100-to-1 the average porter's name is not George.

porter's name is not George.

Silly, then, to call a man George when he may be William, or Roger, or Sylvester, or even Llewelyn; is it not? Forsooth, there is no sense in the custom and millions of Georges throughout America resent the practice. So much do they take it to heart, this habit of bandying their name about, that they are determined to put an end to it. They have, in truth, organized.

Henceforth, any thoughtless man or woman who starts running up and down the aisle of a Pullman car shouting "George!" is liable to hear from the S. F. T. P. O. C. P. C. P. G. As any one familiar with initials knows at a glance, this is "The Society for the Prevention of Calling Pullman Car Porters "Coverse"."

While it may be news to the average reader of the daily press that there is such an organization as the S. F. T. P. O. C. P. C. P. G., the fact is, this organization has been at work for seven years or more; operating, so to speak, under cover.

Georges are by nature sensitive. Men of that name do not want the populace to think them up-stage or that they believe themselves better than other men. So they, naturally, refrain from making public their complaint against the public. Rather embarrassing it was, and is, at times, for the average man named George to be anywhere near a railroad station, and especially near a Pullman car. Invariably, such a man, when he hears a bevy of voices around and about him, all shouting and calling the same name, George, he becomes confused. In a similar situation, any one would be justified in placing the case before a lawyer. How on earth can a man named George know, in a union station, or even in a nonunion station, if some one wants him, personally, or whether this mad pandemonium is merely the regular order of the day, or the night, as the case may be; the Pullman populace calling for its help-mates?

ONCE, on a train headed for Washington, the Nation's Capital, four gentlemen were seated in the smoking car. They were unknown to each other, paying no attention whatsoever the one to the other, this man reading his newspaper, that man a magazine, the other fellow a letter from his wife, and the fourth complacently smoking a cigar.

Of a sudden, from recesses outside the smoking room appeared a mammoth sized man who, sticking his head through the portiered door of the compartment, bellowed like a bull: "George!"

A newspaper, a magazine, a letter, and a cigar dropped to the floor. Four men leaped to their feet as one. They were all named George.

When the loud-speaker had disappeared, on his quest for the porter, the four gentlemen named George, introduced themselves all round, and thus was the beginning of a society that has for its sole object the accomplishment of only one great boon to America—the calling of Pullman car porters by their right, and lawful, and baptismal names; and not by the name of George unless George be their collective name.

Some years have gone by since there was organized by these four gentlemen whose Christian names happened to be the same as that of their country's father — George Washington. Some years have gone by and still the natives call Pullman car porters "George." This, however, will be remedied, as time goes on, and on, and on; or wherever it is time goes. From that small beginning, in the smoking car of a Pullman, a great end is in sight. Every day in every way, the N. S. F. T. P. O. C. P. C. P. G. gets bigger and bigger. The foundation was laid firmly and solidly.

Arrived in Washington, the Four Georges of the Pullman sensed their new mission. They knew in their heart of hearts that on that day they had organized what undoubtedly would turn out to be the greatest society of its kind in the history of America. They wanted to get the proper atmosphere, so they hopped in a taxi and drove over the old M street bridge into the oldest part of the city, Georgetown, and there pledged their purpose. Came then to life an organization that silently and surely went out to enlist the services of every man in the nation who sports the name of George, to rally them around the cause, to pledge them to the purpose proposed—modern St. Georges slaying the dragon.

Since that day, the men named George have, through the good offices of their society, won the sympathy of the greatest minds in the nation—and there was a time when the national legislature was about to consider a bill which, if passed, would have made it a statutory offense to call a Pullman car porter George if his name happened to be Henry, say, or Richard. Wiser heads came to the rescue, however, and it was decided not to importune Congress but to carry the fight right on down into the ranks of the people. Members of the S. F. T. P. O. C. P. C. P. G. were quick to see that compulsory respect for the name George would be in a manner of speaking no respect at all-and so they wanted the American people, in their own good way and time, to come to the abolition of an evil practice gradually. Some of the members, of course, are convinced that the work before them, educating the American public, will keep them busy the rest of their

There will always be men, travel-salesmen and the like, who fall into the natural and easy habit of addressing the major-domo of a sleeping or Pullman car as "George." In fact, according to the officers of this society, it was some thoughtless traveling salesman who started to call sleeping car porters "George" years and years ago, and the custom has grown until it has now become virtually a national habit. Just so soon as a man or a woman becomes settled in a Pullman car, needs some attention or other, some service, a window lifted, or the back of a chair adjusted, and therefore must seek service of the porter, out comes the natural nomination: "George!"

THE Georges do not like this. They are travelers—and many a man by the name of George has been peremptorily startled out of his wits, on a Pullman, by hearing the lady next to him shout at the top of her voice, "George!" thereby making him believe he still has with him the wife he thought he had left behind.

Occurrences such as this are encouraging to the Society for the Prevention of Calling Sleeping Car Porters "George" and conducive to membership growth. In fact, the easiest thing in the world, provided, of course, a man's name is George, is to become a member in this society. There is no initiation fee. There are no annual dues; no expenses of any sort. Everybody in the society works for the joy of working—the object being near and dear to the hearts of Georgeans.

While national headquarters are maintained in Washington, office rent costs nothing. It is donated by one of the Georges. Secretarial work is done as a labor of love; by another one of the Georges. Stamps for letters are furnished by the combined Georges. Everything, everything in the way of service is free. There is only one thing that worries the Georges and that is the length of their society's name. In a land where the slogan, if any, is "Make it Snappy," sponsors of the S. F. T. P. O. C. P. C. P. G., have decided to abbreviate the abbreviation; to cut it down to a simple six-some; down to S. P. C. P. P. G.

Even that is too long—say some of the members; soon to be in the market for a set of buttons, somewhat like the Pickwick club used years and years ago—big brass buttons, with the initials S. P. C. P. P. G. George McManus, the cartoonist, will be asked to submit the design for the button and it has been suggested that it bear no resemblance whatsoever to a Pullman car.

Given to abbreviation, and easily recognizing the significance of initials, fellow Americans will soon learn to know what S. P. C. P. P. G. means when the buttons are broadcast; when they adorn the lapels of all men named "George;" men who would give their good right arms rather than have Pullman car porters called out of turn.

The Society for the Prevention of Calling Pullman Car Porters "George' took lessons from others that had gone before it. To begin with, it placed its national headquarters in the natural and logical place for national headquarters the nation's capital. In Washington there is said to be a society, or lobby, or organization of some kind, for every three persons in the city. All have some fixed purpose; as, for instance, the increase of human happiness, the reduction of taxes, cancellation of war debts, promotion of peace on earth and good will towards men, and women, the frustration of fratricide, the eradication of the boll weevil and the corn borer, and other purposes that range all the way from the sublime to the ridiculous.

A few of the societies that maintain national headquarters in Washington accomplish their ends, forthwith, and go out of business, automatically. Others, never quite realizing the dreams of their founders and fathers carry-on, and on, and on, and so will be doing business at the old stand when the Union Jack is furled for the last time and set down in the dust of ages.

WHILE office space is to be rented, secretaries paid, presidents and other officers of the societies to be housed, fed and clothed, Washington, as a city, is reluctant to see any of these, its guests, accomplish too soon what they purpose to do. They seldom disappoint. As sung in the old song, "It may be for days, and it may be forever" before the vast majority of these societies get through with their self-appointed tasks; whatever those tasks may be.

In all the history of Washington, only one society lost no time in getting down to business, and doing this without the usual hubbub—further, without issuing statements to the press. Despite a silent campaign for members, the S. P. C. P. C. P. G. now boasts of a roster approaching 140,000—according to the records of its national secretary, George H. O'Connor. Aside from his official capacity as secretary of the S. P. C. P. C. P. G., Mr. O'Connor is one of the best known amateur singers in all the land, certainly the most popular in the city of Washington, where he is known as the entertainer of Presidents, having appeared before every President of the United States since the days of Mc-Kinley.

Kinley.

"If there is one thing I would rather do than anything else in life," says Mr. O'Connor, "it is get rid of this practice of calling Pullman car porters 'George'."

It begins to look now as if the patient labor of these men who belong to the S. P. C. P. C. P. G. is about to bear Though there was a tin members thought seriously of having enacted a general law which would forbid any person, under penalty of $500 fine and a year in jail, calling a Pullman car porter by a name other than his own they finally reconsidered the matter and went about it in another way. What they did amounts to a stroke of genius. Instead of antagonizing their fellow citizens they enlisted the support of the Pullman Car Co. itself. And today, as a result of this bit of diplomacy, there is displayed on all sleeping cars certain signs inscribed with the proper names of the porters. Once, but only once in a while, is the name of a porter seen to be George.

to be George.

With George Washington as its patron, the S. P. C. P. C. P. G. now belongs to the thriving institutions of the country. It is always on the up and up—always going forward, never lagging backward. Its present president is one of the most popular men in the United States Senate—the Hon. George H. Moses, of New Hampshire.

There are only two vice presidents—George M. Cohan, of New York, "The Yankee Doodle Boy," and Gov. George Silzer of New Jersey.

Though there are no dues to collect, or bank, the S. P. C. P. C. P. G. follows tradition and elects a treasurer each year. The man holding down the post at present is George Hoffman, of Pennsylvania.

George Cardinal Mundelein, of Illinois, is chaplain. George Ade occupies the post of poet laureate.

H. M. George V (England), has been chosen by his American compatriots as their English representative. The general counsel for the soceity is Judge

George Olvany, of New York, and the sergeant-at-arms is none other than George Herman (Babe) Ruth.

M EMBERS of the S. P. C. P. C. P. G. are scattered all over the land—in every village, hamlet and city necessary. Plans are now being formulated in Washington to hold the first great national convention next year or the year after—probably at Lake George. There is also being considered a proposal that the entire membership of the society meet in the city of Washington during the World Fair planned for 1932, an event to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the birth of Washington.

If the Georges ever get together there will certainly be a goodly gathering; either in Georgetown, D. C., or Lake George, N. Y. On the roster of the society are such names as George Bersociety are such names as George Bernard Shaw, the English press representative; Georges Carpentier, the French fisticuffer; George W. Dulaney, jr., the well-known Chicagoan; Georges Clemenceau, another French representative, and Gen. George Dumont, military attache of the French embassy in Washington. After that the Georges are mostly Americans. There is Senator George of Georgia, and Senator George B. McLean, of Connecticut. That makes three Senators, with Senator Moses, president, taking care of the upper house for the Georges. The lower house is stronger in its numerical representation. It contributes George F. Brumm, representative from Pennsylvania; George W. Lindsay, a Republican from New York; George Huddleson, a Democrat from Alabama; but, then, it is not right to mention politics in con-nection with the S. P. C. P. C. P. G. It puts its foot down on such matters. Democrat or Republican, members of the House of Representatives or the Senate, any man whose name is George -regardless of his political affiliations —can be and generally is a member of this society. Political and religious lines are not drawn within this group of Georges. A man's name is his bond. Thus, side by side, fighting for the same thing are Monsignor George Daugherty, vice rector of the Catholic University of America, and Rabbi George Silverman, along with the Rev. George Middle-mass, a Methodist preacher, who holds to the belief that the time has come to call all good men and true to the aid of the cause; to stamp out the pernicious practice of calling sleeping car porters "George" when their names might be John, Joseph, Jehosophat, Jezebel, or even Jacob.

The practice has got to stop. Strong men are behind the movement, and mighty men in their walks of life. When such fellows as George Carter, the public printer, and George R. Wales, of the civil service commission, along with George McGinty of the Interstate Commerce Commission, start out to get something done they usually succeed. They have with them, in their battle against the public, the people who manhandle the good old-fashioned name of George, such men as these, representatives all, and in high standing in Congress: George C. Peery, of Virginia; George Schneider, of Wisconsin; George N. Segar, of New Jersey, and George R. Stobbs, of Massachusetts. These Georges are out to do battle.

Georges are out to do battle.

That well-known traveler, explorer, and hunter, the Hon. George H. Tinkham, of Massachusetts, is one of the most prominent members of the S. P. C. P. C. P. G., and has set out to make the world safe for Georgian Democracy by getting rid of this habit of calling Pullman car porters "George." He has with him, in the fight, George R. James of the Federal Reserve Board and George B. Lynde, secretary of the War Finance Corporation.

First Meeting Is Held at Georgetown and Annual Convention Will Probably Be Held at Lake George---Prominent "Georges."

The press of the nation is well and

The press of the nation is well and ably represented in the ranks of the S. P. C. P. C. P. G. Some of the outstanding Washington correspondents named George are, ipso facto, members of the society.

As an observer of public affairs, George Authier, former president of the National Press club, and Washington correspondent for the New York World, recently remarked: "One of the troubles with President Coolidge's cabinet—if I may say so—is that there is no one in it by the name of George. As a paid-up member of the S. P. C. P. C. P. G. I resent this. It gives us no representation in the executive branch of the government and means that we will have quite a time getting any support from this outfit for our campaign to eliminate the revered name of George from Pullman car environs."

George Barthelme, representative in America of the Cologne Gazette, is an enthusiastic member of the S. P. C. P. C. P. G., as are: George W. H. Britt, of the Newspaper Enterprise association; George Rothwell Brown, celebrated column conductor of The Washington Post; George W. Combs, of the Lynchburg, Va., News; George Durno, who represents the International News Service at the White House; George H. Manning, representative in Washington of the New Britain (Conn.) Herald; George W. Summers, of the Wheeling Register and the Buffalo Courier, and George P. Torbett, who writes for the Porta Rican press.

Newspaper men, lawyers, artists, playwrights, sculptors, authors, zoologists, chemists, psychologists, scientists of all sorts, the highly and the low, all, all, by name George, are interested in this great movement sponsored and spurred by the S. P. C. P. C. P. G.

SOME of the notable Georges who, naturally, hate to hear the revered name carelessly shouted in railroad stations and sleeping cars are: George Weston, the author, who leads a peaceful life on his country estate, Morningside Farm, Packer Conn.; George Seay Wheat, of Stamford, Conn., the man who writes little pieces about airplanes and airports and all such things; George Frank Worts, an authority on poker, coauthor of Webster's poker book; George Hand Wright, artist, of Westport, Conn., a member of the celebrated Salmagundi club in New York and of the Society of Illustrators; George Carter, editor-in-chief and managing editor of the Wilmington Evening Journal; George Norlin, president of the University of Colorado; George Jean Nathan, the dramatic critic; the Hon. George Wakeman Wheeler, chief justice of the State of Connecticut; George Lang, president of the Alabama Presbyterian college; George Edward Cryer, mayor of Los Angeles; George Donaghy, former governor of Arkansas; George Washington Hays, also a former governor of Arkansas: George Alexander Parks, governor of Alaska; George Hunt, the first governor of Arizona, former Minister to Siam and now back again in the governor's chair; George Kelly, the playwright, author of "The Torch-Bearers," "The Show-Off," "Craig's Wife," &c.; George Marye, a former Ambassador to Russia; George Young, the Canadian who swam the Catalina channel: George Lincoln Burr, of Ithaca, N. Y., former president of the American Historical association; George White and his "Scandals"; George Arliss, the actor; George Ellery Hale, astronomer, of the celebrated Mount Wilson observatory, Pasadena, Calif.; George Sterling, the poet, of Sar Francisco; George Wharton Edwards, the artist, Greenwich, Conn.; George Kirby Holmes, eminent governmental statistician in Washington; George Julian Zolnay, the sculptor; Giorgio Palacco, conductor of the Chicago Civic Opera; George Hodges, former gover-nor of Kansas, and Miss George Elliston,

Eminent psychologists, members of the S. P. C. P. C. P. G., have been asked by the officers to analyze the situation and discover, if possible, the mental kink that causes people to call almost all public characters "George." There

Wants Husband for Holland's Fair Princess

Crown Princess Juliana of Holland thus far more interested in law and other studies than in thoughts of love and marriage

R OYAL matchmakers are having their troubles finding a suitable hunt Princess Juliana of Holland, the plump and pleasant young woman who will some day be Queen of the Netherlands.

Strange as it may seem in America, land of the free-and-easy marriage, there is a dire lack of eligible suitors for the little Dutch maiden's hand.

For some time now dispatches from The Hague have been guardedly mentioning the fact that Juliana will soon be 18 years old, and intimating that it's about time she was keeping company with some nice young man.

But so far no candidate of proper birth, breeding and just the right degree of royalty has shown a disposition to batter down the dikes to lay himself at her feet.

It is no reflection on the royal maid to divulge that those who want to "marry her off" are beginning to get worried. It is rather a commentary upon the curious customs and traditions of European courts; a reflection on the unhappy straits in which so many once eligible young men found themselves when monarchies tumbled in the wake of the world

There are at least half a dozen good reasons why it should be as it is, and the first of these is the fact that she will one day be Queen of the Netherlands. Only daughter of Queen burg, she is the sole heir to the Dutch throne, and so she can not go gallivanting off to some foreign capital with a foreign husband.

That immediately disqualifies all reigning kings who might like to marry her, as well as foreign princes who might ever be called to thrones. In the list of those so disqualified are the Prince of Wales and King Boris of Bulgarla, Crown Prince Umberto of Italy and Crown Prince Olaf of Norway, and the Prince of the Asturias, who will one day wear the

Were it not for the taboo, the Prince of the Asturias would be an ideal match for the buxom Dutch girl. The prince is as active and gay and cosmopolitan in manner as the princess is studious and serious and unmistakably Dutch.

To date he has shown a decided preference for beautiful and vivacious young women who can dance and talk and perhaps flirt a little, whether they be blonde or brunette. And even the most loyal resident of The Hague will admit that Juliana is no Follies beauty—albeit a wholesome, winsome girl, and intellectually worthy of any prince or king on earth.

Another innuence that has done much to feter young men of royal blood who might in other circumstances be her wooers is the

A German prince of higher rating was invited to share her heart, if not her throne, but he was a stiff-necked young junker and preferred to be a princeling in his own country rather than a prince consort at The Hague. So he said "No, thank you," not too gallantly, and now his name is never mentioned at the court of Wilhelmina. The queen was sworn in and inaugurated at a joint meeting of the states-general on September 6, 1898, and has been a popular sovereign from the start. It is easy for youth to gain popularity, particularly when the charm of girlhood is enhanced by its pathetic contrast with the forbidding task for which it is destined. But to retain that popularity undiminished when youth is gone, and with it the people's readiness to forgive and condone, is the true test of character. That test the reigning Queen of the Netherlands has withstood triumphantly. She has withstood it, too, despite her inability to understand certain of the modernistic tendencies of her people.

Wilhelmina's greatest claim upon the affection of her people is her upstanding pride in her own country and her unflinching opposition to any attempt to foreignize it.

She has been just as hostile toward attempts of the French to "penetrate" the country as she was toward the Germans in Speaking four languages fluently, she still maintains that Dutch is the official language of the court as well as of the A bungling minister once waited upon

Joy in Marriage.

In the face of alarming increases in the divorce statistics the American people are rapidly solving the problem of how to be happy though married, in the opinion of Booth Tarkington, the Hoosier author and philosopher. This developing solution of the marriage problem, Mr. Tarkington thinks, may prove to be America's greatest contri-

Skirts to Be No Longer, Paris Designers Say---Slight Changes in Detail Comprising Most of Fashion's Changes.

Paris, April 9.

→ IRO'S as a center of Parisian "chic," is well known to all who frequent the fash-ionable life of the French capital. The evening gowns seen there are as gorgeous and varied as one ever sees under one roof at the same time, unless a gala night at the opera constitutes the exception. So in this cable, I shall give you the tendencies of the mode as they are revealed by the smartest women of Europe who dine at Ciro's. Evening gowns of solid colors are becoming more popular, and a great deal of white is being worn in the evening. Much embroidery is being seen; the gowns are more "travaillee" than before, with all manner of delicate stitches, pleats, tucks and nervures. The skirts are still fuller, which makes them more comfortable and practical for dancing, although the lines remain unchanged and the fullness is concealed by some artistic device of the couturiers. The bottoms of the skirts are even more irregular. Half of the women at Ciro's last night wore evening gowns with uneven hems.

The buyers have gone, and the collections are now undergoing the most interesting phase of their brief life. Now that spring is breaking in Paris, smart Parisians are returning from their winter holidays in warmer climates. and their selections indicate more clearly than anything else what the mode will be next season. For the mode follows the dictates of the smart Parisian. Mr. Jean-Charles Worth, paraphrasing Voltaire in a recent article, aptly remarked: "We (the couturiers) propose, and the women dispose." By "women" he meant the smart women of Paris, who are now returning by the hundreds every day, and establishing by their favorite regard what shall endure among the fashion offerings of the present season. It is certain that the range of blues never enjoyed wider popularity, so far as daytime garments are concerned. Beige is almost as good as it ever was, and gray, contrary to general expectations, continues to gain in favor. The chief objection to gray was that it was not generally becom-But the couturiers contemplated this difficulty and overcame it. By using certain proportions and certain flattering combinations with other colors, especially blue, they have rendered gray a generally becoming color. One sees more and more straight coats of solid blue or solid black, worn with delicate printed crepe de chine dresses, the coat lined with the same material as the dress.

Impressive Gown

But to return to Ciro's-I saw no gown that impressed me more pleasantly and lastingly than a characteristic Louise Boulanger creation of silk mousseline, printed green and black. It had no trimming, but the skirt was draped in the Boulanger way, with an irregular hem line and a piece of the material hanging from the draped side to the floor in a sort of train. Another striking gown-a Doeuillet creation-was of black mousseline de soie and black lace, cire, trimmed with beads of many colors. I saw this dress at Doeuillet's opening, where Boni de Castellane, the Duke and Duchess de Brissaci and other notable personages, commented upon it with manifest enthusiasm as the mannequins walked by in their gorgeous evening gowns. A coat from Jenny was of changeable green and gold moire, its sleeves, wide at the ends and loose, were of gold spangled embroidery as was the border. The collar was of beige fox. The only gown I saw with much fringe was a Drecoll model of white crepe de chine, trimmed with white silk fringe in abundance. This was worn with a shawl of white crepe de chine also, and black velvet flowers, made especially to go with the gown. Shadows of the same flowers were delicately painted in the fringe at the bottom of the skirt. Mademoiselle Madeleine's grand manner was easily recognizable by the crowd in general, for the guests at Ciro's consist largely of people who are very much au courrant regarding styles, and among them I noticed hundreds of faces that I had seen in the great salons during the first presentation of the collections. Coats of gold lame are still seen in fairly large numbers, and other coats of colored metal effects are equally popular.

By JEAN-CHARLES WORTH.

PEAKING of the mode is almost like writing a new book or presenting a new drama to the public. The creator of these ephemeral things must have as much imagination as a writer or dramatist to merit the success which will make his name uni-

How often have I been asked: "How do you create? What inspires you? Do all of you make the mode come to an understanding as to what will be worn?" No; the mode, the creation of a model, is a thing of intuition, of fantasy. It may be inspired by pictures, statues, drawings, but is often the expression of a number of things gathered from day to day, depending on the imagination and reactions of a creator.

What will be worn tomorrow?

A question, I will not say agonizing, but preoccupying for the woman whose role in faction, for our pleasure. To be well dressed, becomingly and appropriately, is half, if not all, of a woman's life. If we succeed in offering what she demands, what a success for us--and, I must say, what self-satisfaction, for if there is some anxiety in doing a thing, there is, on the other hand, the pleasure of having brought to a successful finish the task which is imposed on us at least once a been to reject it, but, little by little, some audacious ones have risked it and the others have followed. The new mode is created. How often have I heard this phrase: "Yes, it is pretty, but I will wear it when I see it on other people."

The mode of today, as in the past, submits to the influence of its century; it is the expression of the life of the modern woman who searches to further emancipate herself and wishes the same prerogatives of liberty as her companions.

Has she not scoffed at and rejected the corset that imprisoned her? She wishes a free body, supple, to lend itself to her favorite pleasures-to sports-which will hold henceforth an all-important place in her life. Did not the riding habit of other days have more grace than the tight-fitting breeches of today? In my opinion, yes, if one takes an esthetic point of view, but it is certain that the mannish riding habit gives a woman more security and more power over her animal. Must one conclude that a woman should under all circumstances adopt a costume quasi-masculine? I say, frankly, no, for a woman needs things envelop her, that let her supple and graceful lines be divined. Also, a woman's figure will remain always the same.

Details Change Each Season.

Under these conditions, why speak of the mode of a year, because each year, each season, there are little details which change, making the dress of one season out of fashion in the next.

In what way are these variations made? In the height of the waistline, in the length and width of the skirts, in the shape of the sleeves, in the necklines of the waists. Coats, even while appearing the same, may have godets, be more or less fur trimmed,

The Lines for 1927.

And so, what will be the mode in 1927? According to what I have said above, it will be adapted to the synchronism of the activities of a woman in her daily life. Thus the skirt will remain short, but perhaps less tight than in former years. While hanging quite straight, it should be cut to give more room to the legs and permit greater freedom in walking.

How can one reconcile this idea with the masculine inspiration which at present influences the mode? In reality it is in the former masculine fashions that we find an answer to our wishes. The costumes of Roman soldiers give us models for the most becoming skirts.

The pleated sash of the Egyptian, draped and with the fullness in front, will make perfectly exquisite sport skirts. These styles permit the fullness for which we are all searching at present.

Skirts Are at Short Limit.

Will the skirt be shorter? No. for it would become ugly and even indecent. The skirt has arrived at the limit of its short-

The waist will naturally remain straight: it must remain youthful in neckline. It should be closer fitting in imitation of those antique breastplates that appeared to outline every muscle of the body.

But my readers need not be frightened: nothing will bind them, nothing will strangle them; they will not have tight waists.

The waistline will remain about in its present place—a little below the natural line, with a tendency to rise in front to allow the fullness to be placed there, as is smart at present.

Will the afternoon and evening dresses be very different? For girls and very young women the lines will be, approximately, identical. For older women evening dresses should be of a little more severe type, while always keeping the line young. Drapery is becoming characteristic for older women, while for young women one must keep the straight line which allows them to perform all the eccentricities the new dances demand. I do not wish to imply that these pleasures should be denied to those more advanced in life, but there should certainly be a differ ence between a young girl and her mother.

As to the real sport costume-and by that mean those that are really appropriate for doing sports, costumes made for women who do not let inclement weather interfere with their daily walk or their game of golf-these clothes will remain practically the same in line. It is only in color, material, the stitch of a sweater, that one can give a little diversity and novelty.

As to three-piece costumes, what will be most in favor-a coat which covers the dress entirely or a short jacket? Personally I am a little in favor of the latter. Certainly, for sports where one may be cold, such as golf, tennis, motoring, the long coat will always be favored because of its practicality; but for warm and sunnier days I believe the short jacket will be generally adopted, for the same reason that men prefer to walk in a short coat rather than wear a heavy and cumbersome overcoat.

Evening coats should be thought of as very luxurious. In wrapping herself in her cloak a woman can in the evening give the most lure to her silhouette. Can one not judge the character of a woman simply by the way in which she drapes her evening coat? If she is clever at sliding back the collar of fur or feathers with which evening coats are usually trimmed, does one not perceive in her a person who knows her power and can rule? If, on the contrary, she wears her collar tightly about her neck, one can recognize a timid woman who is afraid to show herself and tries to escape from every look.

As long as the weather is not warm, as long as one remains in town for dinner, rich and heavy materials even furs, ermine and

The Bathing Suit.

A stay by the sea is nowadays a necessity in the life of a woman. For several years it has become a habit, when one goes to the seashore, to spend a good part of the day on the beach and become sunburned. This custom, which owes its origin chiefly to the Lide, is becoming more general, not only to cure illness, as is the case at the Lido, but for pleasure, and to have a beautifully bronzed and evenly burned skin.

One can judge from this how important the bathing suit is becoming today. I know a young woman who was proud to boast that she had as many bathing suits as evening dresses. It will be necessary henceforth to give as much thought to one's peignor for the beach as to one's traveling or motoring wrap. Any sort of fantasy is permissible, from the most beautiful kimono to a simple peignor of wool.

What color should one adopt? Up to the present black and navy blue have been smartest, but now one's bathing suit is of the sam colors as one's dresses for golf, tennis or the garden. A light blue with a hit of yellow or a pale rose, gives a graceful effect. When the skin becomes browner and darker one may use white, but carefully choosing a rather heavy weave or a beige with lines or a border in color. In this field individual idiosyncrasy may have full rein. As to the choice of a tie which should harmonize with the costume, it may be of a complementary color. The bathing suit which is shown in this article is of pale rose jersey with turquoise blue stripes. The sleeveless peignor, which allows the arms to be sunburned, is of the same material. It is rose outside and lined with blue, matching the stripes of the suit. We are far from the peignor of white flannel or homespun that we used to know and which we threw hastily over our shoulders when we came out

To conclude, let us speak a little of perfume, which is as important in the dress of a woman today as her jewels, her hair, well cut and waved. This is what has led us to create perfumes which are somewhat adaptable to the present modes. Their composition is the object of special research, as we seek a new line or an unknown detail. At the same time, we create a certain atmosphere among our clients which causes them to think of us as we think of them when we create. For there is still another care for the creator. He must unceasingly, in making his collection, create special models-I will not say for each client, which ould be impossible - but even so, he must think of those whom he will be called upon to dress. (Copyright, 1927, Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.)

SOFT BED SAVES TIME

Scientific tests just completed at Colgate university prove, it is declared, that six hours a soft, comfortable bed are equivalent to eight hours in a hard, uncomfortable bed. A good deal of the time spent in sleeping is wasted, according to the Woman's Home Companion, which predicts that science, through investigation of sleep, soon will effect a great saving in "the most valuable of all human possessions, which is time."

Studies have now been initiated to determine whether mankind sleeps longer than necessary, and these studies are said to indicate that sleep to a considerable extent is merely an inherited habit.

"A change in diet or other routine will often reduce the amount of sleep needed," says the magazine editor, "and certainly a part of the time we are sleeping we are not so much resting as throwing off poisons caused by eating the wrong food."

The Colgate experiments were made with brain workers and might not apply to those doing hard physical labor, it is pointed out. Only normal conditions were observed, and answers the State of New Jersey, following the example of its sister State by enacting similar legislation.

"Most emphatically yes," answers the motor vision commission of the American Optometric association, of which Dr. Edwin H. Silver, president of the Columbia Optical Co here is chairman. The motor vision commission is now planning a campaign for the inclusion of the eyesight test in the examination of prospective automobile drivers in every State in the Union

The proposed campaign will occupy the principal place on the program of the meeting of the commission, which will be held in Washington in June during the annual convention of the American Optometric association here. At that time, according to Dr. Silver, traffic authorities, motor club officials and others interested in accident pre-vention and legislation to that end will be invited to sit in with the optometrists and advise regarding details of the plan to have motorists undergo a test of the eyes as well as an examination for other physical defects which might make the operation of an automobile by that particular person dangerous to the rest of the community. OPTOMETRISTS/connected with the District of Columbia Optometric association, through the motor vision chairman, have already offered their services to the local traffic bureau without charge, and this example, according to Dr. Silver, has been followed up in many other States. drivers, it is pointed out, is generally a picked man, and by simple tests, easily learned, it is possible for him to determine whether the prospective driver has anything serious the matter with his eyes. In case of a defect, under the plan worked out by the local optometrists, the applicant is given his choice of examiners, or can consult his family physician if he thinks best, the object being to keep the examinations on an altruistic basis, the same manner in which they are worked out in New York and New Jersey, the two States that have adopted com-

Jersey, the two States that have adopted compulsory eyesight examination in connection with their driving tests.

"One of the chief causes of automobile accidents is defective vision," Dr. Silver declared yesterday. "In most cases the driver is unaware of any defect in his vision and is unable to understand why he was unable to avoid an accident which he had appeared so clearly (to himself) to have avoided. clearly (to himself) to have avoided.

MODERN trend of times has a great deal to do with this. We have reached a state of mind where we take the radio, telephone, airplane and other scientific advancements of this century in a casual manner. The great changes that have been made since the days of our forefathers have come about in such a manner that we take them for granted.

"The eyesight of the average man of today "The eyesight of the average man of today is much improved over that of our forefathers. We hear a great deal about the keep eyesight of the pioneer and the Indian. Novelists love to picture the Indian, in particular, as gazing out across a prairie for an incredible distance and being able to discern objects at that range. As a matter of fact the Indian did not have as good eyesight as we do today, but he was unhampered by streets, trains, buildings, motor cars and other modern things and was able to concentrate more thoroughly on a distant object than we are. He learned, by years of practice, to associate certain colors and appearances with certain objects and could apparently see them where the average man of today would behold only a blur. But given the same training, we of today would see just as well or better than the Indian.

"On the other hand we do more to cripple our vision than the people of olden times. We read at night under bright lights. We strain our eyes every day in our business lives. We are quickened, more active and more nervous as a result of modern living, and all this takes a certain toll from our eyesight,

"The result is that we do not really see things as our defective visions cause us to think that we see them. A wrong message is conveyed from the eye to the brain and this is the big cause of accidents. Many of the defects are slight, but they are sufficient to make a difference of a few feet or inches in the judgment of a driver in regard to an approaching vehicle or pedestrian and a crash follows.

"The American people are not of a character that would knowingly injure another, but we are inclined to be careless. Poor vision is one of the last defects that most of us would observe in ourselves, and it is one of the most insidious ills that afflict humanity because it has caused its trouble in most instances before being discovered. All this could be avoided by proper inspection, first by the traffic officer who tests the driver, and later by a competent evesight specialist the applicant, and woe to the man or woman who seeks a driver's permit without being physically fit. While we do not advocate any-thing as stern as the German system, there are some points about it that could well be adapted to American ideas.

11 THE motor vision commission of the American Optometric association believes that it is too easy to get a permit to drive an automobile in most of our States. An engineer who handles a steam-driven engine on two steel rails, where he has the right of way and everything made clear for him, is required to serve a long time as fireman and has to undergo the most rigid tests as to character, ability and physique. He must pass a color test and other tests to determine his fitness for the post to which he aspires. The modern automobile weighs close to two tons, and this power, for good or evil, is turned loose on our roads in the hands of any one who can learn a few rules and to with gears and steer at the proper time.

"The whole driving business constitutes a proposition that will have to be the subject of grave deliberation sooner or later, as the number of automobiles in this country is increasing vastly every year. And every piece of proposed legislation must inevitably turn to the question of the driver's ability to see.

"An automobile has no eyes. There are two lamps on the front of every car to illuminate the dark places at night and afford the driver a clear view of the road, but that illumination is valueless to the driver if his eyesight is defective. As a matter of fact the driver with defective vision suffers because of the lights of approaching vehicles. and would be better off if he were allowed to drive without lights, or at least with those of a very dim character.

"All these problems will be taken up at our June meeting," Dr. Silver concluded, "and we shall endeavor, so far as is possible for our association to act, to start a campaign looking toward an everything these for every approximation." looking toward an eyesight test for every ap-plicant who seeks to drive a motor vehicle." The American Optometric association has perfected a novel plan for reports on motor accidents at the June meeting. A large caravan will motor from a meeting in Dayton, Ohio, which will be held a few days in ad-vance of the meeting here, and it is planned to have each member of the caravan make notes along the way.

In case of an accident to any optometrist en route here, the victim will be forced to undergo a public test of his eyesight and will also be given a driving test by his brother optometrists, under the supervision of the motor vision commission. By this means, it is explained, the commission hopes to have a large number of reports on accident possibilities under normal traveling conditions.

Telephone Operators Converse in Code

By EDWIN F. HILL. ODE telegrams and cables-even code letters-are part of the everyday system of business communication. Few people consider it necessary, however, to speak in code—they probably feel that they can talk in the ordinary way faster than they could think of the necessary code words. One use of code in conversation, however, is in the long-distance offices of the telephone company where the operators actually "talk

When the Washington long-distance operator is completing one's call to an out-of-town point she uses codes with her sister operators here, there and everywhere. These codes are made necessary in the interest of speeding up

Suppose one were making a person-to-person call for Juan Ponce de Leon, at St. Augustine 1512. If Mr. Ponce de Leon is not in gustine 1912. If Mr. Ponce de Leon is not in at the number given, but some one at that place says that he can be reached at another telephone, the operator will note on the back of the ticket "FC," which indicates that he can be found at another telephone.

Suppose by chance some one has left the receiver off the hook of the telephone, the St. Augustine operator will say "LF," indicating that the telephone wanted can not be rung for the reason just explained. The Washington operator would then leave an order with the distant operator instructing her to call back when she is able to obtain the number Suppose the call was for Mr. Peregrine White at 1620 Plymouth, Mass., and the party who answered the telephone stated that Mr. White is out, but is expected in a few minutes, and may be reached at 1234, the operator will note on the ticket "U-FEW-FC-1234," which conveys this meaning. "UX" indicates that called party is not expected today. "UD" means that the called party may be in today, but they do not know. In this case the operator will keep trying to complete the call until a more definite report is obtained.

"Un" is an indication that the called party is not known at the address and telephone number given. Can the subscriber give further directions for reaching him?

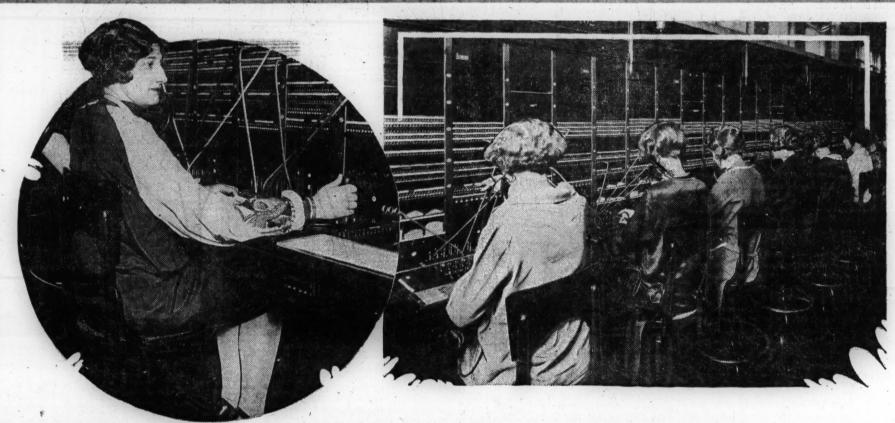

Another step in the speeding up of telephone service from Washington has been the adoption of the "combined line and recording" method of handling out-of-town toll calls, which has been put into effect at many important offices in the country. This new operating practice has been in use in Washington for several months with distinct success, this city having been one of the first.

There is nothing mysterious about the combined line and recording method, which is merely a simplification of the handling of an out-of-town call to make it more like a local call.

local call.

Most people are more or less familiar with the old way of handling a toll call. The subscriber desiring a distant telephone asked for "Long Distance," a recording operator wrote the details of the call on a toll ticket, the subscriber hung up and waited while the dicket was forwarded to an operator at the

The telephone company has been striving constantly to give the public the quickest kind of toll service, for it is realized that the subscriber who placed a call for a distant party wants to converse with him at once, is, in truth, a companionableness in the name not exuded by any other; as, for instance, Michael or Stanislaus.

Unless the American people amend their ways and stop calling sleeping car "George," the grand old name is liable to die out—eventually. Men by the name of George are not naming their sons George. They call them "Junior" now. Mothers are becoming sensitive. They resent their sons being shouted at, say officials of the S. P. C. C. P. G., as usually happens when the boys go near the railway stations or travel on Pullman cars. So baptismal records show a falling-off in the number of babies being named George. 'Tis, indeed, a sad state of affairs.

"To think," mourns Mr. O'Connor, secretary, "that we have come to such a where we are unable to leave our hearth-stones without hearing our names shouted in public. Far worse, the spirit of the age is against us. The doctrine, 'Let George do it!' is putting our country in wrong with the Georges. Our wives and fellow citizens are beginning to look upon us merely as a lot of handy men. Well, we admit being great; but we know our limitations. We can't do everything, but there is one thing we intend to do and that is, inculcate a higher respect in the hearts of our fellow citizens for a revered name—and stop our brother Americans from calling our name out of turn."

Here is spring again, and again the argument about the English sparrow. More than any other feathered creature, the sparrow takes advantage of the conditions of civilization. In spreading across the country it depended not only on its own wings, but was not backward in "bumming" a ride in box not backward in "bymming" a ride in box cars, particularly those loaded with grain, upon which it fed en route.

The sparrow seeks sheltered places for roosting quarters, especially crannies about buildings, and takes advantage of warm nooks near heating pipes, says Nature Magazine of Washington. By thus obtaining shelter from severe weather it gains a decided advantage over other birds.

Sparrows are alert to tap every source of food, and, in recent years, have shown their Sparrows are alert to tap every source of food, and, in recent years, have shown their adaptability by picking from the radiators of automobiles insects that have been caught there during rapid motion of the machines. Choice of food by a bird usually is the most important factor in its relation to man. One of the reasons for importing the sparrow was to have it eat dropworm, a shade-tree pest which spun down on silken threads among pedestrians. The dropworm is no longer a pest in cities and entomologists give sparrows the credit. Not only this pest, but almost every injurious insect we have is eaten at times by this ubiquitous alies.

On the other hand, buds of trees are torn to pieces, tender garden growths are nipped and grains of all sorts are laid under tribute.

Those who wish to reduce their numbers can utilize methods which are described in bulletins from the United States Department of Agriculture. Those who wish to protect sparrows probably feel no need of justification of their stand, but may take additional comfort from knowledge that the object of their care is the only species besides the blue rock pigeon that will live in treeless districts of cities and, therefore, is the only small bird friend of thousands of city shut-ins.

unless it is specifically stated otherwise, as in an appointment call. Especially is this true in business, and business calls make up the larger part of toll calls during the customary working hours. In their efforts to increase the speed of toll calls, telephone engineers generally had reached the point where little more could be done under the existing operating methods, except to cut a few seconds here and there in the routine of handling the calls. It was inevitable that there should be a period of several minutes required in passing through the proper channels until a call reached the operator at the line board.

Elimination of the necessity for passing the ticket from one operator to another was naturally one method for decreasing further the time required to handle a call. At the toll switchboards, the positions were so arranged that the same girls could handle calls to the same places every day, enabling an operator to become familiar with the peculi-

Under the present operating methods the time represented by the period necessary to transfer tickets from recording to line operators has been wiped out altogether. If the calling party can furnish the number of the telephone wanted, and the latter can be reached at once, the subscriber stays on the line until the party called is reached, or a definite reason is given for not completing the call, such as a busy line or failure to an-swer, just as is the case with local calls in is the confident belief of Dr. Fritz Kahn, an eminent German biologist.

Science's Very Plausible Theory That the Average

He bases it on the fact that, so far as science has been able to discover, all the lower animals have a life span approximately six times as long as the length of time required by them to reach full maturity. The longer the period of growth the longer the average expectation of life, seems to be a biological law, and Dr. Kahn thinks it was intended to apply to man just as much as to all other forms of animal life.

Even such a low order of life as the sea urchin obeys this law. This very simply constituted little creature grows for seven months and lives on the average just six times as long, or three and one-half years.

With the striking exception of man, science has yet to find a form of animal life whose longevity is not regulated according to this six-to-one ratio. It takes two years for the puppy to become a full grown dog and the average canine's length of life is about twelve

The same rule holds true with the cow, taking four and one-half years, the horse requiring five years and the camel taking eight years to reach maturity. Each of these species lives on an average just six times as long as the period of growth.

As is well known, it takes the human being approximately twenty years to attain full growth. And so, according to what Dr. Fritz Kahn and other scientists believe to be a biological law for all forms of animal life. he should expect to live six times as long. In other words, 120 years would intervene between the average human being's cradle and his grave, and centenarians would be the rule instead of the exception.

What are the chances of increasing the average life span to a length more than twice what it is today in the United States and other progressive countries? Very good, indeed, the statisticians tell us as they ponder the figures showing what education, better living conditions and the progress of medical science have done in the last 50 years or so to lengthen human life.

In 1855 the average length of life in the United States was slightly less than 40 years. Since then it has been steadily increased until today the average American may look forward to about 58 years of life.

In the 71 years since 1855 the life span

Englishman lived nearly 40 years, and he now lives about 18 years longer than that. Sweden, famous as a country of vigorous, long-lived people, had an average life span that in this country and in the British Isles. India, on the other hand, is a land of shortlived people, for as late as 1911 the average citizen of that country lived only about twenty-three and a half years. This low figure is not hard to understand when one remembers that India's teeming millions have given little thought to sanitation and that pestilence and famine frequently make deep inroads in the population.

New Zealand has a different story to tell, for in 1911 the average citizen of that English colony in the Pacific lived to the age of 61 years and a little more—even better than we do in America today. This remarkable life span can not be explained as easily as India's exceedingly low figure. Some think it due to favorable climatic conditions, but this has

If Dr. Kahn's theory is right, why is it that so few people of the present time live to be even 100 years old, to say nothing of staying on two decades beyond that age?

France," who won undying fame as his country's wartime premier, is the same age as Mr. Holmes and has already retired from active participation in the tangled affairs of the French republic. His increasing infirmities moved him to seek seclusion for the rest of his days and he seldom sees anyone but his daughter, who keeps his modest cottage.

What might it not mean to France in her after-the-war difficulties if "Le Tigre" had many more years of the extraordinary mental and physical vigor that proved so valuable during his country's greatest crisis?

Dr. Serge Voronoff, the famous surgeon, goes Dr. Kahn one better by predicting that human life can be extended to 125 years. with only three months of senility between vigorous health and death.

Voronoff's method of adding to our years is the replacing of our worn-out glands with similar glands taken from the bodies of young and healthy monkeys. He has performed this gland substitution on more than a thousand persons and on many animals and declares that his statement that people can live 125 years has been proved by his work, The doctor is said to have prolonged the lives of sheep from fourteen to twenty years. During this six years of extra life the animals enjoyed the full vigor, then the glands that were put in their bodies gave out and death came in six days.

He is quoted as saying that twenty years for a sheep corresponds to 125 years for a human being, and that six days for a sheep is three months in our lives. That's how he reached the conclusion that men and women can live 25 years more than a century and keep active, except for three months of decline that ends in death.

The organs of the human body, Voronoff points out, are good for more than a century in healthy persons, but that the glands necessary to the functioning of these organs wear out more quickly. Replace these devitalized glands with similar glands from young, healthy monkeys and the miracle of new years of life is achieved.

In order to continue his work of extending life by the use of monkey glands, the surgeon has established a monkey farm in France, where he plans to breed the man-like animals in great numbers.

It will take this baby hippopotamus five years to grow up to its mamma's size, and it will live on the average just six times that long.

Under present conditions, he points out, the man or woman joys about 30 years of adult life, during which time the body restores itself as fast as it is torn down in the business of living. Some people, it is true, maintain vigorous health beyond the half century mark, but the aver-

Science has already shown us how to do several years "stretching" in the past 70 years, and discoveries yet to be made are expected to

Jacob attained the age of 174, and Joseph died comparatively young, at 110, the same age at which Joshua passed on. Moses, according to the Bible, lived exactly as long as Dr. Kahn says man was intended to live-120 years.

Science can not believe that any of these men actually lived as long as the Scriptures say they did. Probably, they explain, the method of reckoning time in those days of Methuselah was different, and also the ages of ancient religious leaders doubtless grew amazingly by tradition before they were set down in written records.

Two of the oldest men on record since Bible times were Henry Jenkins and John Parr, both Englishmen. Jenkins died December 8, 1670, and claimed that he was a boy of 12 when the battle of Flodden Field was fought in the fall of 1513. If this was true, Jenkins was indeed 169 years old when he died, but there was much doubt surrounding the date of his birth.

Parr, who died in 1635, was the subject of learned pamphlet written by John Taylor, the poet, who asserted that Parr reached the age of 152, after having married his second wife when he was 120. The written "record" even credited the aged Englishman with being the father of a child by this second wife.

It is probable that both these men lived to the century mark, and perhaps a few years more, but few historians believe that they

Farmers who used to get out with horses and shovels. contributing time and effort to open a path. now contribute taxes, and the county snow plow does the work.

Some of the most advanced methods of rural snow fighting are found in the northern counties of Michigan, says the New York Times. One county in northern Michigan has eight miles of snow fence, of the picket and wire description, put up in dangerous places, and, in addition, advocates the planting of timber trees as means for preventing drifting. The snow plows used are five-ton trucks with V-shaped blades which push the snow out of the roadway while it is still falling.

The action of such a truck leaves a bank on the shoulder of the road which, unless removed, would grow into a fifteen or twenty foot wall before the winter was over, leaving only a narrow tunnel for traffic. But after the storm a tractor carrying a rotary plow is kept going until the accumulated banks have all been thrown off the roadbed.

RAW PORK UNSAFE

The danger of eating raw pork in any form is repeated by the United States Department of Agriculture, though frequent similar warnings have already been issued. Without reflecting in the least on the high quality of well-cooked and well-cured pork and pork products as food, department officials reiterate the danger of the painful and frequently fatal disease, trichinosis, that is invited by the eating of raw pork.

Trichinosis is caused by a parasite of microscopic size that sometimes occurs in the flesh of swine. This minute parasite is not very harmful to swine, and even when present in large numbers may have no visible effect on the health or thriftiness of the animals. According to reports reaching the department, trichinosis is usually due to eating uncooked or improperly cooked sausage, and this sausage is usually homemade. especially in rural districts, or made on a small scale in meat shops. One farm woman was made dangerously ill in a recent outbreak by infection from the mere tasting of sausage during its preparation, a not uncommon occurrence. In the same outbreak several students who had eaten the raw sausage contracted trichinosis, death oc-

The disease somewhat resembles typhoid fever, with which it is often confused. Federal officials who have endeavored to warn the public against the dangerous practice of consuming pork not thoroughly cooked say the deliberate consumption of raw pork or pork products may be equivalent to suicide. The warning can scarcely be made strong enough. Federally inspected meats that are intended to be eaten raw are prepared in a safe manner and the proper Federal stamp is assurance of such inspection. But there is great danger from trichinosis in uninspected pork products intended for consumption without cooking. In all cases this rule should be followed with regard to pork: Always cook it well. "Had a contract, didn't you?" demanded Warren, offering him a cigar.
"Not in writing. Thanks! Martin, the editor, wanted a series on Paris—popular, chatty stuff. We agreed on the price—and I came over. Now he writes they've changed their policy—can't use any more foreign stories."

"But that was a verbal contract. Don't see how he can get out of it. What did he write? Got his letter?"

"Have it somewhere," taking out a bulky wallet. "Everything in here," laying some letters on the arm of the couch.

Passing the couch, Helen brushed some of the letters to the floor.

"Oh. I'm sorry!"

"Oh, I'm sorry!"
"My fault," he gathered them up. "I carry too much junk. No I haven't that letter. But I can't hold him. He didn't actually send me over—just asked if I was coming. I was keen to do the series—grabbed at the chance."

"That's tough," frowned Warren. "Can't you sell the stuff to some other magazine?"

NOT by letter. That's the point. I've four stories outlined—all corkers. Easy to place them when I get back. To be frank, that's why I wanted to see you. You don't know how I hate to ask this, Curtis. But if you'll advance me the price of a second-class passage—I can pay it back soon as I strike New York."

A disconcerting silence. Helen flushed and embarrassed, twisting her amber beads. What would Warren say? She felt him

"Steerage. Willing to rough it?"

"Anything to get over. I've room rent and a few things here to clear up. But I can manage with a hundred and fity. Curtis, it you'll stake me to that—"

"Weil, I haven't it here," scowling at his unlighted cigar. "Have to draw on my letter of credit. The banks aren't open yet—you meet me at the Credit Lyonnais at 10:30. I'll see what I can do."

"I can't tell you. Curtis, what this means

"I see what I can do."

"I can't tell you, Curtis, what this means to me," he rose to go. "If there's ever anything I can do for you—"

"That's all right," Warren cut him short.
"Hard lines—bein' strapped over here. Well, see you at 10:30."

An embarrased "contained by the see you at 10:30."

"And you said you wouldn't!" she dropped

"Eh? What in blazes you know about it?"
"Something furtive in his eyes— And he was just pretending to look for that letter—I don't think he ever had it."
"Huh, better give your imagination a rest."

"I WAS right about the borrowing-you must admit that. Now I feel there's something wrong about his story. I can't prove it, but I just know it!" "More of your suspicious hunches, eh? And you're hard as nails. Jove, I'm sorry for any one that's out of luck and comes to

"Dear, I'm not hard—you know I'm not!

I'm always giving-but not to people who don't deserve it."

"Well, hand me my shoes there-and quit chewin' the rag."

Radio Nature League

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

To preserve and conserve all desirable American wild life, including birds, animals, trees, flowers and other living things; also the natural beauty spots and scenic wonders of all America.

Meetings every Wednesday night through Station WBZ at 7:30, Eastern Standard Time

The Despoilers Are Abroad. As early as the third week in March my attention was drawn to bunches of trailing arbutus on display in the windows of a florist in one of our larger Eastern cities. Of course they were for sale. Time was when I would have rejoiced to see them and would willingly have parted with the price for a bunch. But now the sight of them on sale, whether in the store of the fashionable florist or hawked on the streets, brings only distress and sadness. The appearance of these dainty blossoms on city streets is mute evidence that the despoiler stalks abroad through the land.

of all the flowers of early spring none has quite the appeal of this dainty, exquisitely tinted, fragrant blossom of the woodlands. I know of no blossom that gives greater joy in the finding than does the trailing arbutus, the Mayflower of New England. Though its distribution is very wide, from Newfoundland to Saskatchewan in Canada, and south to Florida and Kentucky, and Wisconsin to the west, it is still very local in its habitat. You may find it growing in snowy or pink clusters all along the south side of a mountain and not a single plant on the next mountain. You may find it trailing amid the brown fallen needles of a pine grove, and in vain search for it under neighboring pines growing under precisely the same conditions. You may find it buried in the dead grass of an old pasture and no trace of it in the adjoining pasture. the finding than does the trailing arbutus, the

and no trace of it in the adjoining pasture.
Its beauty is fatal to it. Perhaps I should say its beauty and its method of growth are fatal to it. While it is a perennial, and thus tatal to it. While it is a perennial, and thus might be expected to glorify the land of its birth for all time, its method of growth is such that the careless vandal is almost sure in gathering it to tear up roots, as well as the woody stem. So has it vanished from countless hillsides and so will it continue to vanish from all save those remote places where the vandal can not easily get. No true flower lover will ever buy arbutus. There is no surer way of contributing toward its extinction.

The various societies for the preservation of desirable wild flowers and plants have come into being none toe soon. Not only the arbutus, but many of our most beautiful flowers are the state of the Pacific are ers from the Atlantic to the Pacific are loomed, unless better and more stringent laws for their protection are put on the statute ks and enforced.

Connecticut's Admirable Law.

Connecticut put into force in 1923 a law which it would be well for other States in which arbutus grows to adopt. This law was fathered by Senator W. R. Pierson and is as

Every person who shall wilfully destroy, "Every person who shall wilfully destroy, pull, tear, or dig up any trailing arbutus from land of another, or who shall sell or purchase, or have in his possession any trailing arbutus with the roots or underground stems attached, or who shall sell or purchase for the purpose of resale, or expose for sale in any commercial establishment any trailing arbutus taken from land not owned or occupied by him, shall be fined not more than $20."

A similar law broadened to include not only the trailing arbutus, but the various orchids—particularly the several species of lady's slippers, mountain laurel, dogwood.

fringed and closed gentians, and some of our other rare flowers, should be enacted by the other rare nowers, should be enacted by the legislature of every State; and then public opinion should get behind the legislation and see to the enforcement of the laws. Never has wayside beauty meant so much to America as it does in this day of the automobile. Yet it is the automobile carrying abroad throughout the land the deliberate vandal and thoughtless vandal, which is responsible the destruction of this same wayside Back Yard Neighbors,

It is not too late to become landlord to the birds. I know of no greater pleasure than is to be derived from having a few tenants in your back yard. The bluebirds have, in most places, already selected their apartments for the early season nesting. But the tree or white-breasted swallows are still to be taken care of in this respect. And Jenny Wren is not through house hunting. Fur thermore, Winsome Bluebird is almost sure to raise a second family and will not of neges-sity use the house occupied by the first fam-ily. One year bluebirds took a house on a post in my clothes yard and moved over to a house on the corner of the garage for their second family. Meanwhile, a pair of tree swallows occupied a house on the other corner of the garage and a pair of wrens were in a house on a third corner.

In a house on a third corner.

I know of no greater joy than the presence of these feathered neighbors, who are neighbors in every true meaning of the word. The swallows would come and go when I was not more than 3 feet distant. The bluebirds were alwester friendly.

almost as friendly.

While house wrens are delightful little busybodies and most entertaining, and while the soft, plaintive whistle of the bluebird charms the ear as his exquisite coat delights. Their beautiful steel-blue backs, their spoties underparts, their companionable twittering, and the joy of their flight combine to make them delightful companions. Put out a house for the swallows. An inch and a half opening will be sufficient for the enterpresent Shadow the Weasel.

Of all the smaller mammals none is more unfamiliar to the average person than the weasel. This is largely because of this little animal's quickness of movement. Unless you are patient and have the ability to remain notionless, you seldom have an opportunity o watch a weasel for any length of time.

with this predatory little beastie. His ability to vanish, seemingly into thin air, is astonishing. It is so astonishing that one wants to keep trying it over and over. But in this, Shadow is seldom accommodating. Of all hot-blooded animals, the various memthe weasel family are the hottest.

It is Nature's blessing that the larger predatory animals are not as predatory as the weasel. Few, if any, of the larger predatory creatures kill for the lust of kill-ing. They kill for food and, having obtained food, are content. The weasel, on the other hand, apparently sees red and kills for the sheer joy of killing, as many a poultry raiser knows to his sorrow. It is no unusual oc-currence for a weasel to kill from a dozen to twenty chickens in a night. If the blood-thirsty little animal gets into a chipmunk's home he destroys the entire family and then will hurry on to search for another.

will hurry on to search for another. He is at once fearless, wary, bold, and active in pursuit of his prey.

The weasel is found from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Whatever the species, the general habits are the same. The smallest of the family is the lecst weasel; it is only about six inches in length. In the East the most familiar are the common or brown veasel, which in winter in its coat of white weasel. Which is the ermine, and the New York weasel. Frew people have ever seen an infant weasel. But then, as I said at the beginning, comparatively few have seen a weasel alive.

A Naturalist's Question Box.

Rose Zabek sent me a little box containing four small snakes, one all brown, one with light stripes, and two mottled, and wanted what kind they were.

The first was a DeKay snake, the second was a young garter snake, and the other two were young milk snakes. All these are harmless. The interesting thing in connection with the finding of these little snakes was that Rose dug them up. Apparently they had hibernated together.

W. H. S. of Pennsylvania wants to know

W. H. S., of Pennsylvania, wants to know the name of the bird that never builds a nest, but lays its eggs in the nest of other birds, usually one in each nest and usually in the nests of smaller birds.

It is the cowbird, sometimes called cowbunting. A very common name for it is lazybird. This is the only American bird with this parasitic habit. In Europe the cuckoo has the same habit. However, the American cuckoos do not.

Tales of Real Dogs By Albert Payson Terhune MATHE, THE "DESERTER"

From a sense of fairness I am including this story in my series of tales of real dogs; though it is a story I always have detested. I wish it were not a true tale. But, unluckily,

It is attested by Froissart and by many another medieval authority, and its truth can not be doubted. I am going to tell it because, having written so many narratives of dogs that were heroes, it is but right I should tell the other side of the story.

Richard II was king of England; a pretty one friend that thus far never had failed him was his great hound, Mathe. The king and his dog were stanch comrades for years. In 1399, Richard's cousin, Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster, headed a rebellion against the king. After a practically blood-less revolution, King Richard was deposed The king was at Flint castle at the time where he and the hound, Mathe, hunted together and where the dog was his close at-tendant everywhere.

Indeed, Mathe was a one-man dog. He would not pay the slightest attention to any of Richard's servants and few remaining courtiers. The king was the only person who could claim his obedience and affection; a fact of which Richard was openly proud.

Then in August of that year, Henry of Bolingbroke rode to Flint castle with a great fol-lowing of men-at-arms, to take formal au-thority as king and to arrest the dethroned

He announced that he was going to carry Richard back to London with him, and he bade the unfortunate king to make ready to accompany him. Though he treated Richard with outward civility, he made no secret of his contempt for him.

There was no hope of resistance. Richard's adherents had fied at the approach of Bolingbroke's army. Mathe alone had not left the discrowned sovereign at news that Bolingbroke's army.

Mathe was in another room, out of sight and sound of the newcomer, during Bolingbroke's interview with the captive king. But, as the conference ended, the big dog came as the conference ended, the big dog came galloping into the ball where sat Richard and Bolingbroke.

Richard chirped to the dog, as this last and dearest friend of his came bounding forward. The heartsick prisoner must have felt a thrill of consolation at thought that at least one creature in the world has not turned against him in his hour of black adversity.

He called Mathe to him. But the hound paid no heed at all to his once-adored master. Instead, he trotted past Richard, without so much as a glance at the unhappy king.

Bolingbroke stooped to pet the handsome creature

Straight up to Bolingbroke trotted Mathe, licking the newcomer's feet and hands and fawning upon him, and in every way showing the most effusive affection for this stranger, Bolingbroke had never before seen Mathe.

me."
It was an age when omens and portents were gravely believed in, by high anl low alike. Thus, instead of laughing, Bolingbroke demanded to know what Richard meant by his peculiar words. Richard made answer:
"This once dear hound of mine cheers you today as King of England. That signifies that you shall reign as king and that my power is forever gone. Mathe knows this, by some mystic instinct."

"Therefore take him with you, and keep him for your own. He has forsaken me. He will serve and follow you, so long as he lives." The superstitious Bolingbroke accepted the gift. When he left the castle, Mathe followed slavishly at his heels. The story spread swiftly, and all folk took it as an omen from on high that Mathe for the first time in his life fawned on any one but Richard, and in-deed deserted Richard completely for the From then on, until Mathe's death, Boling-

By F. BRITTEN AUSTIN

R. GILCHRIST was fidgety. He was alone, not merely in the dining room where he sat, but in the house; and solitude at night to a man accustomed to and distraction in the presence of others is a black desert where one starts at one's own footsteps Sitting in the dining room of the suburban villa he had had built 20 miles from town, the objects which surrounded him seemed to have grown remote, unfamiliar. Smoking his pipe, newspaper on his knee, his ear was worried by the ticking of the clock, and this ticking seemed a novel, almost uncanny phenomenon. He could not remember having heard a sound from that timeplece before. There were features about the sideboard, too, as he gazed at it fixedly, that appeared strange to him. Certain details of inlay work on the Sheraton-pattern legs he perceived now for the first time. These little unfamiliarities observed with his mind on the stretch—that latent primitive man in him acenting danger in solitude—added to villa he had had built 20 miles from town, him scenting danger in solitude—added to the loneliness. He felt himself exposed, in a desolation haunted by invisible malevo-lences. Of course, the feeling was absurd. He shook himself and tried to summon up a little of the bravura with which he had dis-missed his wife and daughter to the dance at the village a mile away, making light of their protests that it was the one servant's evening out. His friend Williamson might drop in, too—anyway, he would be all right.

His friend Williamson had not dropped in,
and with every slow minute ticked out by that confounded clock he had found himself

The 7:30 express from town rushed by on the railway line which ran, 50 yards distant, parallel with the road; and the sound of it heartened him for a minute or two. Then as the poise of it died away into a silence yet more profound than before, the primitive in him again peeped out through his civiliza tion, panicky, ear at stretch for stealthy danger. A weird, mournful cry outside, breaking suddenly on that stillness, pulled him erect on his feet, listening, trembling. The cry was repeated, and he sat down again telling himself that it was an owl, as doubtless it was; but his hand shook as he picked up his newspaper again and tried to read.

Suddenly, with soul-shaking unexpectedness, there was a violent, rapid knocking at

He was on his feet in an instant, shaking in every limb, panic stricken as an Indian in a place of spirits A primitive vague dread of the supernatural held him motionless, obsessed by a formless horror.

The knocking at the door renewed itself, a frantic hammering. The repetition lightened him, redeemed it from the vague purposelessness of the ghostly, suggested human anxiety at fever pitch. His imagination, relieved from the spell, flew to work, building catastrophes after familiar models. His wife and daughter? The disasters of fire, vehicular collision or heart failure presented themselves in confused and fragmentary pic ures. The door now resounded under a cascless rain of blows, and, trembling so vio-ently as to feel almost ill, he ran to open it. On the threshold stood a little, stout, beard-

"Come inside," said Mr. Gilchrist, and he led the way into the dining room, the stranger following. "Bless my soul! What is it?" An accident?" He spoke nervously, more to him self than to his guest, who replied nothing but stood swaying on his legs and kept from failing only by the clutched—at support of the table. "One moment—I have some brandy here. Here you are. Steady, man, steady Sit down."

The stranger drank off the brandy and took a deep breath, passing his hand over his brow like one recovering from a swoon. In the moment or two of silence Mr. Gilchrist had leisure to scruttinize him. He was without a hat, and his head shope in the lamplight, polished dome rising from a narrow fore-ead and a halfring of grey wisps over his ars. His eyes protruded, globularly, but it could be guessed that they carried impressions to an active brain. His gray beard converged irresolutely to a point in front of his chin. His clothes were respectable but not well cut, and they were now soiled with earth, One trouser-leg, Mr. Gilchrist noticed, was badly torn. Althogether his appearance suggested a benevolent old gentleman, connected possibly with some dissenting religious pody. who had been badly mauled in conflict with

The strauger sighed again, and his countenance settled into a resigned melancholy. "You make me curious," said Mr. Gilchrist, f course, I don't wish to intrude—"

The old gentleman raised his eyebrows and made a protesting movement with his hand. "In all probability, sir, you will soon be made acquainted with a garbled newspaper version of the calamity which has befallen Its dreadful nature is bound to flare nto publicity. It is useless, therefore, for me to attempt to conceal it. If you care to hear he true version of a tragedy which every newsboy will be shouting tomorrow morning —a version stranger than the one counsel for efense and prosecution will adopt as a battle round for their wits—I will do my best to ratify your curiosity. I may say that it will e some comfort to me to know that one sllow human being—especially so kind-earted a one as yourself—is acquainted with hearted a one as yourself—is acquainted with

"I do not look like a murderer," said the old gentleman. "Nevertheless, I am one. A nurderer trapped into crime by that chain of freumstances I spoke of. And I am a man

"But—my dear sir!" Mr. Gilchrist halfrose from his chair. His guest waved him

"I am speaking the sober truth. You think "I am speaking the sober fruth. You think that you are harboring a madman. I am as sane as you. If you care to listen, I will relate the story, and when I have finished, if you desire to call in the local police, you are at liberty to do so."

Mr. Gilchrist sat back in his chair, halffascinated, half-frightened

"Go on," he said briefly.
"I am a man in business for myself, in a small way. It might have been a larger way had not my intellectual activities been em-ployed on subjects which I regard as of graver and deeper import than the purchase and sale of ephemeral commodities. For many years my mind has been more familiar with that region known briefly as the occult than with the intricacies of terrestrial markets. I have striven to penetrate to those secrets which throb behind this earthly veil—with what success I need not specify. Suffice it that a small society of fellow seekers after the truth chose me as their president, a position I still hold.
"However small your acquaintance with this difficult subject, sir, you are probably aware—from hearsay, at least—that it has two great aspects, good and evil. The pure in heart may achieve a certain mastery over forces hidden from the multitude and use them for innocent or praiseworthy ends, such, for example, as establishing communication between our loved ones who have crossed the threshold and those who remain here. is known vulgarly as white magic. But there is a black magic. It is known to every adept that it is possible—difficult, perhaps, but possible—for self-seeking men who have, per-chance before they became perverted, had the key to these vast mysteries put in their hands, to control the mighty forces of which I have spoken and turn them, regardless of the suffering they inflict, to their personal advantage.

"It is possible, I say, though exceedingly ire. Few men, good or evil, are so fortuately endowed as to acquire a mastery over those forces for any purpose, and of those who have acquired it the majority are good. In any case, they are rare. For myself, de-spite years of study and anxious striving, d have utterly failed to grasp those forces, save in one or two triffing instances. This, by the way. For some time past I have been con-scious—I cannot now tell you by what agency I became aware of it—that a group of men, greater adepts than any I have ever known, had in fact subjected forces terrible in their power and were using them to the danger of the world.

"You know, I have no doubt, that in the past—in the middle ages, for example—certain secret societies existed for purposes partly occult. I use occult as a synonym for such, I may remark, were the Rosicrucians. Others are known to every student of the subject. One might almost class it as com mon historical knowledge. Few, however, suspect that today such a society, immeas-urably more powerful than the ordinary man considers possible, exists. It exists, and by some means it has penetrated to the very arcans of the spiritual world. It wields a power, by its control over forces that to call cosmic is to minimize, quite beyond ordinary resistance. And it wields that power for evil. I could point out several frightful disasters of recent times directly traceable to that so-ciety. It is a menace to the world! "In one way only can it be overthrown— and it must be overthrown if our civilization is to continue. A group of men—equally adept but pure in soul—must meet and check each of their schemes and finally turn the immense forces, too great for ordinary comprehension, with which they work, against them, wiping them out of existence. Where that group of men is to be found, sir. I do not know; but if the disease is to find a remedy it must first be diagnosed. It was my duty, then, having discovered this monstrous danger, to proclaim it to the world. And, knowing full well the awful risks I ran, I did so. I contributed a long article to a periodical which exists for the diffusion of spiritual truth, and, so far as my knowledge permitted me, exposed the terrible enemy. "I knew I invited disaster. Immediately I was warned that the gravest perils threatened me. You, an ordinary man, whose most terrible engine of destruction possible to the imagination is a monster-gun battleship, can have no conception of the powers unchained against me. I can not tell you with what fervour I strove to acquire control over forces that might befriend me, but in vain. Ever I was thwarted and baffled. I lost what little powers I had. Stripped of every means of defense. I waited in anguish for the blow to fall. What kind of blow it would be and whence it would come I could not tell. I knew only that it was inevitable. An undying enuity was all around me,

"I expected something cataclysmic, world whether whence it would be the state of the s shaking. Fool that I was, I might have known better. 'They' are far too cunning thus to advertise their power needlessly. Day after day I dwelt in a world of terror, and nothing happened, save the complete interruption of any intercourse with the spiritual world. Malevolent forces had closed that door. I waited, each moment expecting dis-aster, I knew not from what quarter, as a man waits in a dark wood for the lurking dangers to spring at him. Suddenly—a week ago today—they commenced to act.

"I was walking, about 6 o'clock in the afternoon, along Piccadilly. My mind was for the moment distracted from its ever present anxiety, and I had almost forgotten my danger. Suddenly a man jostled against me and thrust a piece of paper into my hand.

He took a piece of paper from his pocket and handed it to Mr. Gilchrist. It bore the and handed it to Mr. Gilchrist. It bore the words: "Prepare to meet thy Judge."

"But," said his host, "this is merely a leaflet circulated by some religious body."
"I know," said the stranger. "That is their cunning. It conveys little or nothing to an outsider. But they knew I would know. I looked around for the man. He had disappeared. The blood surged to my head; I reeled against a lamp-post and for a moment reeled against a lamp-post and for a moment reeled against a lamp-post and for a moment or two knew nothing. My giddiness seem-ingly had not been noticed. The street looked normal. I shook myself and prepared to continue on my way. At that moment 1 happened to look around and saw a large white buildog sitting on the pavement and regarding me fixedly. Even then—I knew. But I affected to take no notice of it and commenced to walk onward. The dog got up and followed me. I walked faster, but the dog was always a couple of feet behind my heels. I stopped. The dog stopped. I went on again. The dog went on again also. There was no doubt of its connection with me.

"A wild rage seized me. I rushed at the dog, kicking at him furiously. The animal dodged me with ease. I could not touch him.

walking with the slow deliberation of settled despair. I continued on my way, and always the dog followed. My one leading idea wan knew that, whatever stratagems I tried, the dog was not to be shaken from his trail,

"I can not make you realize, sir, the awful fear that surged up in me, mastering me, throttling me. I almost choked. The lights, the houses, the people swam in my vision. I trust that I am not a coward, that ordinary danger would find me ready to meet it with some calmness of mind, but in contrast now with the peril I had dreaded, such firmness as I have gave way. The seeming innocence of the manner in which my death-sentence was conveyed, the apparently innocuous character of the messenger they had sent, accentuated my terror. I felt that it was useless to appeal to my fellow-creatures for help. The certain really would have been an Immediate The certain reply would have been an imputation of madness. Above all, the purpose of the dog baffled me. It seemed impossible that my enemies, with all the vast forces at their command, should use so petty an instru-ment to strike at me. I could not even imagine in what manner the dog was to bring about my annihilation. The disparity of means to the end seemed grotesque.

"So strongly did I feel this that I halfpersuaded myself that I was under an illusion, that the dog was merely a stray that had followed me for a few yards in the hope had followed me for a few yards in the hope of finding a new home. Walking along, looking straight in front of me, for I dared not turn my head, I was almost comforted by a semibelief that the dog was no longer in pursuit. Presently, with an effort of will, I looked back—to find, as reason told me I should, the animal still at my heels, padding along with its nose to the ground. along with its nose to the ground.

perately out by the common exit from such embarrassments, and tipped the policeman with the only coin I happened to have in my pocket. It was a half-crown. He smiled as I made off quickly, my ears burning.

"Thank God, at any rate I was freed from my enemy. I was supremely happy. I remember smiling round at the garish lights, at the thronging people, at the poor, at the wealthy, at the flower girls, at the vicious. I was glad, unutterably glad, like a prisoner just reprieved, to be among my kind, of whatever sort.

"I was somewhere in the Strand when sud-

"I was somewhere in the Strand when sud-denly I heard a girl who passed me say to her companion: 'Oh, what an ugly beast!' I turned sharply, and saw to my horror the white dog again at my heels. He looked up at me, and I fied down the side street. The dog followed easily. followed easily.

"In wild terror I ran as fast as my strength would permit. It was useless, of course. The dog found no difficulty in keeping up with me. I stopped at last from sheer exhaustion, and the creature seemed to grin at my distress. Had a policeman been visible, I would have tried again to hand it over to him, convinced though I was that the attempt would be in vain.

"I was almost demented with terror when unexpectedly salvation showed itself. My station was not many hundred yards distant-I was in Broad street, I think—when sud-denly there was a snarl and a furious bark-ing behind me. A large dog, belonging to some passer-by had sprung at my enemy, tion after a week of absence, I decided to go to town.

"I left the house with the feeling of a man who goes out to execution. In my pocket was a revolver which had belonged to my father. He had fought in the Indian mutiny. I was born in India myself. Some of his fighting instincts arose in me as I walked down to the station fingering the weapon in Dread oppressed me as I entered the train and journeyed cityward. I felt that I was going to meet my fate. None the less I went about my business. I made up my mind to return by a midday train—though perhaps it would have made no difference. So great a press of work awaited me, however, that it was impossible. One hindrance after another was impossible. One hindrance after another stood in my way, and with rapidly: ising fears I was forced to remain and see the time slip away until the only train that remained to me was the 7:30.

"My office is a little room at the top of a large building. I keep no clerk. Most or all of the other workers in the building had left while I was still writing letters, and the solitude which broods over the city in the evening weighed more and more oppressively on me every minute. My nerves were already at stretch when I heard something thrust into the letter-box. I jumped to my feet trembling with premonitions. I heard my feet, trembling with premonitions. I heard no footfall along the passage. After a moment, when my heart seemed to stop, I went to the box, and to my horror-drew out a carriage splashed with blood, its floor heaped with the large body of the man I had killed. The train was racing along at top speed. In five or ten minutes more we should stop and the crime would be discovered. Mad with horror, I rushed to the door, opened it, flung myself into the black night. I remember the roar of the train passing me as I rolled down the embankment, have an impression of a bright light whisked away, and then I lost consciousness.

When my senses returned, I saw the light "When my senses returned, I saw the light in your house, I made my way to it, fainting, but frantic, it seems to me, for help. For the moment I have respite, but "they" have triumphed. I have been tricked into murdering one who to all outward semblance was an innocent man. In a day or two I shall be standing in the dock, and finally my iffe will be violently cut short by my fellow men, accompanied by every circumstance of ignominy. Fully, indeed, are they revenged! "Now, sir, you know my story, and if, after hearing it, you care to call in the local po-

At that moment there was a sound of carriage wheels on the road. They stopped just in front of the house. The stranger sprans to his feet. His eyes swept round the room in a swift panic-stricken quest for concealment. Then, crying: No! They shall not take e! They shall not take me!" he rushed om the room. Mr. Gilchrist, still spellbound by the story-to which he had been so intently listening, stood for a moment as though paralyzed staring at the open door. A familiar whistle from outside, a cheery call—"Gilchrist! Gilchrist!" -gave him back his faculties. It was Willmson—thank God!

Mr. Gilchrist ran out into the hall, found the front door still open from the stranger's abrupt departure, peered out into the dark night intensified by the two staring eyes of Williamson's gig lamps.

"Come in, Williamson!" he called. His voice was joyous with relief. The words had barely left his mouth when a violent collision knocked him breathless against the doorpost. It was the stranger, back again. The white dog! The white dog!" he gasped

"But, my dear sir-" he began irritably. This was absurd! Of course there was dog—the harmless old white bull which was Williamson's invariable companion. He tried to explain but the stranger, tugging frantical ly to get free, would listen to nothing. With the strength of a madman he wrenched himself from Gilchrist's detaining grasp and fled into the house.

Villiamson, preceded by his dog, came up the gravel path.
"All alone?" he asked cheerily.

Mr. Gilchrist, obeying an obscure impulse, lled. "Er-yes," he replied. "Come in."

He waved his friend to a chair 'Sit down," he said, with an assumption of normality.

"What's the news?" "There's news, right enough," said Williamson, dropping into the proffered seat.
"Terrible business on the seven-thirty tonight.
Poor old Hepplewhite—shot dead—he and Poor old Hepplewhite—shot dead—he and his dog. Ghastly struggle, evidently—blood over everything!"

"Good God!" ejaculated Gilchrist, chilled with a sudden horror. He had given no real credence to his visitor's fantastic story. This brutal contact with the reality paralyzed nim in an awful terror at his own talse position. What was to be done? He strove to think—played for time. "And the murderer?" he saked thickly.

played for time. "And the murderer?" he asked thickly.

"Escaped for the moment," replied Williamson in a tone that suggested confidence in the police. "Here, Tiger! Come here!" He addressed the dog, which was snifing uneasily about the room.

The dog came up to him obediently, wagging his stump of tail. He carried in his mouth a piece of folded paper which he had picked up and now presented to his master. Gilchrist recognized it with a little shock as his friend opened it.

which had printed the leaner.
Williamson smiled down into the intelligent eyes of his old dog.
"Tiger, old fellow," he said jocularly, "you're made a mistake—you've brought this message to the wrong man. It is evidently meant for the person who shot poor old Hepplewhite. Here"—he held it out to the dog—"take it to him. Find him!"

The dog took the paper in his jaws, wagged his tail with a comprehending look up at his master and ran, following the scent which was on the paper, across the room. He stopped, pawing at the bulged curtain. Williamson stared after him in amuse-

"I understand—perfectly," he said, with a griff appreciation of some subtlety which eluded them. "In a better cause, I should admire the ingenuity with which you have utilized means which are apparently of the simplest. I do homage to your powers, gentlemen. Or perhaps you yourselves are only half-conscious tools of that occult force which has with such simular completeness, worked has, with such singular completeness, worked my ruin." There was a sneer in his voice. He turned to Glichrist. "As for you, sir, I congratulate you on your faculty of dissimulation. You guiled me excellently well. I can only bow in acknowledgment of the supreme irony with which you beguiled me into telling you the miserable story which, of course, you already knew far better than I. I do not grudge you your triumph. It was superbly well planned. You held me without suspicion whilst you awaited the arrival—for the last time—of the symbol of my doom—the white dog!" "But now, face to face at last with you whose monstrous plot I was at least able to detect, if I could not baffle it—I yet cheat you!" he cried. "I cheat you of your complete vengeance! You thought to condemn me to the ignominy of a murderer's trial!" He laughed again. "I elude you—thus!" With a quick movement he raised the revolver and fired.

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture explains that the common characteristic of all types of gingham is that the yarns are dyed before weaving, or the cotton is dyed before the yarns are spun. This helps to insure fastness of color and produce a fiber dyed throughout. Ginghams come in plain colors, in plaids, checks, stripes and with novelty figures, and range in width

CHINA SHOULD BE SENDING MISSIONARIES TO AMERICA By WILL ROGERS

F you was a native of a country and history absolutely proved that this country of yours had the oldest Civilization in the World, that half the things the rest of the world was practicing under the heading of progress had been originated by your Ancestors, that you and your people had lived for hundreds and hundreds of years pretty much the same as you were living to-day and you were satisfied with that way of living, that it had existed so long showed that the system must have some merit. If you had gone along and never bothered anybody else, owned the biggest Country, manipulated it in such an economical way that you raised and fed without outside aid a population of over four hundred and fifty millions of people. After having so arranged your needs and desires so that you did'nt have to ask a favor, a crumb, or a stitch from any one, and you still had time for your Arts and Sciences, and practiced and believed a religion according to the dictates of your heart and what you knew had been good for your country not for years but for Centuries. Suppose you had been bred and raised for generations that Material things, Commerce and money and Luxury were not the things for you to look forward too. But the thing that counted was the character of the life you had lived, and its value to your family and friends. Suppose in your family life you had always been taught to stick together, no matter how old, to keep the family ties, to worship and honor your parents and ancestors.

Not be turned out to go your own way the minute you are of age, but to be always kept at home, remain in the surroundings in which you had been born, and be happy and contented. Not forever trying to push your way to what you think is UP, and trying to crowd some one else out. Not leave your parents and go out and make what you might think was a success, but which in reality was a sacrifice to your parents in love and affection. Think of the elimination of heartaches to parents if they knew the families would always be together! The land is tended as it has been by your same families for generations.

NOW, you say, how is a fellow going to progress? Happiness and contentment is progress. In fact, that's all progress is. If you are hurrying and worried to death you ain't progressing. How much better does an automobile seat feel to you than a buggy seat, if you had never seen the Auto seat?

China can't get rich like a few in other places and on the other hand they haven't got that fear of poverty that is such a common fear in other countries, Now, as I say, suppose you belonged to a people that looked at things in that light. Didn't bother nobody and didn't want to be bothered. And then let a lot of little upstart Nations that haven't existed long enough to have taken out their citizenship papers in a country like yours, let them come along call you "Heathen" and take over the best Ports in your Country. How did they take em over? Why, by England wanting to smuggle in Opium. China knew it was bad and legislated against it. and captured all the supply of it. That brought on war and England appropriated the Island of Hong Kong. That was the first Christian act done to the heathen. Had another dispute over a flag incident and that gave excuse for not only England but France and all the rest of them dipping in and grabbing off a little more.

And they submitted. Why? Because they are not a Military Power. Now we are having Disarmament Conferences to persuade Nations to disarm. Then they pick on the only big one that is disarmed. Why didn't England tell us we couldn't pass a Prohobition law? It would have been the same as them telling China they couldn't prohibit Opium.

England made 'em mad enough, but when we started in with our Missionaries, that was the last straw. Imagine with all of our crime and all of our immorality in the papers, and our small amount of attendance in our Churches. Imagine their reaction to us going over there and telling them how they should live. Here we are, a Nation that no one person in it ever did any job a month that he wasn't trying to get out of it and into something else. About as much contentment and repose as a fresh caked Hyena. Then we go to tell some calm, contented people how to live.

WHY don't we go out here and tell everybody they got to smoke cigarettes and do the "Black Bottom." Lots of us don't like those things because we have never tried 'em and we don't care too. That's China. They have never tried our so called progress, they like their way, it may not be the best way. But it's their way. Here is the difference between China and these other countries like us and France and England. China knows that their government will be existing, that they will be living the same one thousand years from now as they are today. There is not a person in Europe or America that knows or even has any idea what us or our chil-dren or our nation will be 25 years from Then we call them heathens.

Why, they forget more about living than we will ever know. I suppose Aimee McPherson's new religion will be sending missionaries over to teach them how to live. She will be showing Confucious up next to us, progress is to work our way up to a Buick car, have a dinner jacket, belong to six luncheon clubs, and wear knee breeches on Sunday. Then go out and tell the world how the standard of living has raised. And start in telling the whole world, 'We are the only one with the right idea.

Us and England are going to get a kick in the pants some day if we don't come home and start tending to our own business and let other people live as they want too.

What degree of egotism is it that makes a nation or a religious organization think theirs is the very thing for the Chinese or the Zulu's? Why we can't even Christianize our legislators. If the churches want to do something worth while with their missionaries, bring them home and put them to work among poor renters or "share crop workers" in the cotton or wheat belt. Some of them have a dozen children and never had $20 in the family of their own in their lives. Let 'em work among them, and help 'em and teach 'em. This country is not prosperous. We got poor people in this country, only they are not the kind that asks for anything, and they are not on the streets where you can see 'em.

Never mind reading bank deposits. We got a million poor people that live in the country that never saw a bank. The rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer. That's what we better regulate instead of Nicaragua, Tacna Arica, Mexico and China.

Never mind trying to take his chop sticks away from him and try to learn him to eat with a fork. He always has a piece of land, and he can raise some-thing. Why can he raise more on it than you can? Because he has got more sense. Must have, or he couldn't raise

What we ought to do is import some Chinese missionaries from over there to come and show us, not how to be saved but how to raise something every year on our land. We just got the missionary business turned around. We are the ones that need converting more than they do. (Copyright, 1927, The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Monument for Tree.

Because it is the parent tree of a variety and, although 63 years old, is still producing fruit, an apple tree at Peru, Iowa, has been honored by a monument. Last year the tree yielded more than five bushels of sound apples, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Tree surgeons are credited with keeping it alive. Periodically, the decayed wood of its trunk is removed and concrete filling applied, while most of the lower part has been rebuilt with steel members. The branches are kept pruned so that the roots will not become exhausted in supplying nourishment to useless twigs and leaves. A pioneer orchardist is said to have set out a tree of Bellflower variety in his gar-den in 1864.

THE MAN WITH THE HOE By FRANK SULLIVAN

Continuing our hints on gardening, let us assume that the gardener has wheedled his seeds out of his congressman as directed in last Sunday's article. We are now ready to proceed with the planning of the informal

Together with the store of seeds obtained from the congressman, the gardener has, during the winter, set aside another little store of seeds in case of emergency. One can never tell, and it is always best to be prepar-ed. There have been instances of the sud-den disability or death of a congressman which has left hundreds of poor constituents which has set fulfineeds of poor constituents absolutely seedless for months at a time. Therefore, during the winter the prudent gardener has saved all the seeds left after squeezing oranges for cocktails, or he has carefully stripped the covering of seeds from the seed rolls furnished by the baker. This is his reserve hoard in case of emergency. He now mixes these seeds with the seeds he has obtained from the congressman and

Then he goes about selecting the weeds for his garden. This problem is a bit more difficult. Weed seeds must be obtained directly from Secretary Hoover, for absolute control of all American weeds is vested in him exofficio. If he refuses to give you weed seeds you may appeal directly to the President, but this course is rarely taken, as in less than one case out of a thousand will a President reverse Hoover on a weed decision.

reverse Hoover on a weed decision.

Let us assume you have succeeded in getting enough weed seeds for your garden. You then take the weed seeds and mix them with the flower seeds. You are now ready to use

The dibble is a very important tool. Gardeners use it to make the holes in the ground wherein the seeds are dropped.

Do not use the finger as a dibble. Many gardeners carelessly poke an index finger into the ground to make the hole for the seed.

This is undignified and an unjust usurpation of the function of the dibble. Fingers were made before dibbles, 'tis true, but we must think of the dibble manufacturers. Anyhow. the practice is a dangerous one. The gardener can never tell when some worm, infuriated at the disturbance of his domain and scut-tering through the subsoil in search of some object on which to wreak his vengeance, may come upon the recklessly exposed finger and Dibbles come in sets, designed to make holes of different sizes. The gardener carries his dibbles in a sort of golf bag; or rather a sort of caddy carries it for him. So when the gardener wants to make a hole for a seed he first visualizes the seed in question, estimates the size hole it will take, and then selects the proper dibble and makes the

This is the acid test of your true gardener for this is exactly where confusion is likely to come in. Because the seed must fit the hole, and he is indeed a skillful gardener who noie, and he is indeed a skiffful gardener who can go through an entire planting without having a single misfit seed.

If the seed does not fit the hole it then has to be sent back to the home nursery at Rochester to be altered, and this process often takes days, especially in the spring season, which is the busy season for seeds. At which is the busy season for seeds. At this time every seed alterer in Rochester is working eighteen hours a day. It happens also that in the confusion the wrong seeds are often sent back from Rochester, and this only adds to the gardener's plight. The thing to do is to exercise scrupulous care and realize that in the dibble nature has placed in man's hands a powerful weapon whose misuse may easily lead to garden chaos.

Care must also be exercised in making the holes for seed planting. It naturally follows that the gardener can, by indulging in a mad orgy of hole-making, practically wipe out his garden. That is to say, if a gardener makes enough holes he will have no garden left—just one enormous hole. Thus, to use a phrase from the vulgate, the gardener will find himself "in a hole." Too many holes also cause self "in a hole." Too many holes also cause the garden to spread to the neighbor's ter-ritory, thus making the neighbor very angry. The McCoy-Hatfield feud in Kentucky was started when one of the McCoys made this mistake. The consequence was that the Mc-Coys and the Hatfields went around with guns for years making too many holes in

Now, we assume, the gardener has planted his weeds and his flowers. Soon the little shoots will be above ground and we shall decide whether we want to weed up the weeds and save the flowers or weed up the flowers and save the weeds.

FIRST PHYSICIAN WORSHIPED AS DEMIGOD has any record was a man named Im-hotep, who lived and practiced his profession in the Valley of the Nile in the dim dawn of Egyptian history.

And a very remarkable physician he seems to have been, according to discoveries Egyptologists have recently been making about him. He had such amazing success in curing all sorts of human ills that when he died there was nation-wide mourning, and the people promptly raised him to the dignity of a demigod.

Temples in his honor were reared all over Egypt, and to these invalids flocked just as they had to the physician's office when he was alive. It was believed that if the spirit of the delty which Imhotep had become was properly invoked he could still effect marvelous cures.

An old papyrus records how a man by the name of Nechantis took his very sick mother to one of these temples and prayed to the spirit of the great doctor to relieve her suffering and restore her to health. The deity is said to have appeared to the stricken woman in dreams and to have cured her while she slept.

The same record tells how Nechantis later fell ill with violent pains, a high fever, loss of breath and fits of coughing. His mother hurried him to the shrine at which she had found relief and, as her son fell into a halfunconscious sleep, she had a vision of a being of superhuman size, clothed in shining raiment and holding a book. This being, which she took to be the spirit of Imhoten looked at her son intently for a moment and then vanished.

Presently Nechantis awoke to tell how he had seen the same vision. His pain had ceased and he returned to his home a well

In times of epidemic or plague it is likely that thousands of people rushed to these shrines built to honor the life works and the mysterious curative power of the spirit of the world's earliest known physician.

Where and how he got his training does not seem to be recorded, but that he became eminently successful as a practitioner among the ancient citizens of Egypt is not to be doubted.

According to tradition, he was a direct descendant of the great architect, Kanopher, and besides his accomplishments as a physician he seems to have become an architect of renown. He was probably the man who drew the plans for the step pyramid of Sakkarah, the earliest large stone structure known to the historians, which later became the tomb of King Zoser, his royal

His name is also associated with the first temple of Edfu, for it has been written that "the master craftsman was Imhotep, son of Ptah, the great god of Memphis."

It is believed that he began his medical practice in a modest way and that his success as an obscure "family physician" steadily swelled the number of patients who came to his office until word of his healing powers reached the courts of King Zoser.

He was summoned before the monarch, who elevated him to the position of personal physician, or vizier-physician. In this position he enjoyed great power and was regarded by the subjects of Zoser as virtually a prince of the royal blood.

In those days medicine was pretty much a matter of magic, and magic was curiously interwoven in the religious life of the Egyptians. So the king, being pleased with the physician's success in keeping the royal family and the intimate members of the court healthy, and being more than a little awed by Imhotep's mysterious power, made him "Kheri-heb her tep" as well as vizier physician

The Kheri-heb, as the position is often called, was really Egypt's lector-priest of the highest rank, whose duties it was to read from the holy books. The books, the religious texts of the time, were supposed to hold almost unlimited magical powers to assuage the ills of body, mind and spirit, and the lector-priest who read them was looked upon as a great magician to which miracles were

Many students of the life and customs of ancient peoples believe that the practice of medicine sprung from magic, and it is likely that much of Imhotep's success as a healer came not through the giving of such drugs as he may have prescribed for his patients, but because the people thoroughly believed in his power to banish their ills.

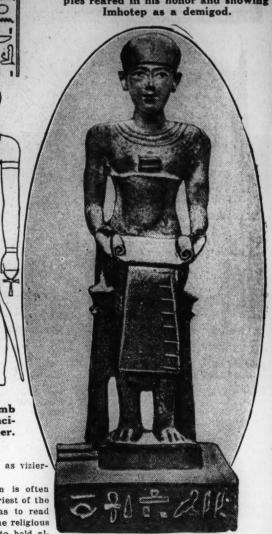

Imhotep seems to have built up his fame during the so-called third dynasty (2980-2900 B. C.) and, long before his death, he was thought to possess supernatural powers. By King Zoser, the court and the populace he was held in the highest esteem.

And about 525 B. C .- some 2,300 years later-tradition had so amplified his achievements that he was made one of the gods of the nation and was included in the great triad of deities of Memphis. The other two gods were Ptah and Sekhmet.

Many temples were built to him, and the master sculptors and carvers of Egypt modeled his likeness in bronze and stone, and etched the story of his achievements on sacred temple walls.

The representations of the great physician that have recently been discovered consist mostly of small statuettes of bronze, marble, steatite, electron and faience. These vary from four inches to eight inches in height and are executed in the same beautiful and ornate manner as the statues of the Pharaohs. Imhotep is generally depicted as a demigod, seated on a throne or chair with a roll of papyrus on his knees. His head is either smooth-shaven or covered with a closely fitting cap. The great size of his head and the expression of the features indicates that he was a man of unusual intelligence.

In almost every one of the statuettes that have been found he is dressed in the robes of a priest and wears around his neck four or five rows of beads, a badge of his high office. Several of these likenesses in bronze and stone bear this inscription on their bases: "He who cometh in peace."

A few figures of the great physician in a standing position have been found, but these are rare and usually show him with a roll of papyrus under one arm.

Likenesses of Imhotep inscribed on the walls of temples often depict him holding an anhk-that key-like cross that only the kings and the gods of the ancient Egyptians could carry-in one hand. The inscriptions on these carvings always refer to his skill and renown as a healer.

The Greco-Egyptians worshipped him, too, calling him Imouthes and making him the equal of Asklepios, the Greek god of medi-

The worship of Imhotep as a demigod probably began at his tomb, which was outside the city of Memphis on the edge of the desert, but as time went on it spread to every part of the country and eventually into the neighboring land of Nubia.

BEAUTY AND YOU

BEAUTY IN BUSINESS.

By Viola Paris

Beauty is a most important asset for the girl in business—as it is everywhere else. But beauty that is too obviously self-conscious becomes a positive liability. The girl's employer is hiring, first of all, a competent secployer is hiring, first of all, a competent secretary, file clerk, saleswoman, or whatever she may be; he is not hiring, he does not wish to hire, a future "Miss America," who thinks more of her appearance than she thinks of his work. Wherefore, while the girl of little beauty must play up her appearance, the girl who possesses a great deal of beauty must play hers down. However, it is to the girl of average beauty that this article is addressed—the thousands in every city and dressed—the thousands in every city and town the country over.

The Important First Impression. If two girls, equally competent, apply for a position, the girl who gives the best impres-sion of smartness, neatness and grace will undoubtedly not be turned away. But smartundoubtedly not be turned away. But smartness must be the daytime or the semisports smartness appropriate to business, rather than the smartness of a filmy frock or the frock of pastel coloring that looks well in the country. Little dresses of crepe de chine, jersey, wool crepe, kasha, or any of the other street fabrics, developed in street colors, are the dresses that any woman of the world would wear in the morning, and these are the same dresses that the well-dressed girl the same dresses that the well-dressed girl in business will choose.

Little Points on Neatness.

One should hardly need to stress neatness, and yet, too often, a girl otherwise neatwill overlook such details as the immaculate care of her hands—just as important to the saleswoman handling beautiful things for fastidious customers, or the stenographer taking notes, as it is for the woman whose hands are in the limelight while she plays bridge or pours tea. Another little matter often overlooked is that stockings should never be worn more than a day without being washed; there is nothing more distillusioning than black marks at the ankle bone, worst of all when they appear on the outside, showing that the wearer has reversed her stocking for a second wearing. Runover heels are even worse—yet how many of them we see, even on Fifth avenue. Unpolished shoes fall in the same category. category.

What About the Hair?

What About the Hair?

Neatness is a much more frequently met characteristic of coiffures now that the bob is almost universal, but, sad to say, there are whole sections of the country where the chrysanthemum effect never seems to have gone out of favor and this is far from neat, to say nothing of being unfashionable, The small head is the smart head, and the girl who neglects to keep her hair cut neatly is making a noticeable mistake.

Another thing that many of us are not particular enough about is the hairline at the back of the neck. To have this trimmed with clippers is—of course—the last word in what not to do, and to allow little "duck tails" to appear because we have postponed the semimonthly hair cut is, to say the least, regrettable. The fashion for straight hair, worn straight, is a most economical one for those of us not blessed with a natural wave; those of us not blessed with a natural wave; but, if we feel we must be curled, we should never neglect to visit the halrdresser with regularity. Hair worn in a marcel for five days—with the wave gradually growing weaker—followed by hair worn droopingly straight for one or two days—is the height of carelessness. Far better for the straight-haired business girl to adopt an uncompromisingly straight coiffure, brushed till it shines. If she does this, she will be much more in line with New York and Paris, in addition to saving herself the price of a wave. The Importance of Accessories.

Many girls who can not spend much on their clothes seem to be able to treat them-selves to cheap jeweiry with alarming frequency and this is a thing that men never Jangling bracelets are out of place against the keys of a typewriter; long chains of so-called "costume" type are not in the mode—they are in the way. Dangling earrings are never worn any more in the day-time by those whose eyes are on Paris. And the same thing applies to big floppy flowers that have no relation to the dress they attempt to adorn-to noticeable shoe buckles to fancy but inexpensive handkerchiefs-to cheap belt buckles, hat ornaments, pins and all the rest of the things that so many girls add to costumes which would have been quite all right if they had been left without ornamentation. A single good string of small pearls is of more value than all the ten-cent store jewelry in the world, and some girls will never create the right impression until they learn this fact once and for all.

A Word About Perfume.

Perfume comes rather in the same category. It is one of the things that should be left severely alone unless one can afford to get a really good kind. A little good per-fume, used discreetly, is something to which no one can object. If good perfume is be-yond one's means, eau de Cologne is inexpensive and thoroughly in good taste.

The Question of Make-Up.

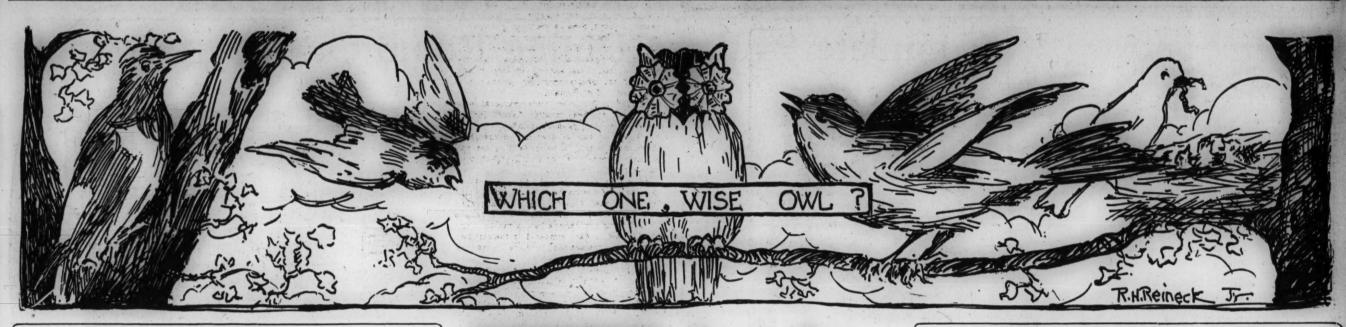

Make-up for business should be just what the smart woman of the world would use for any daytime occasion—a very little rouge, or none at all if one's skin is good—a powder that matches and is not noticeable—a smooth lip-rouge, applied with care. To be continually pulling out a vanity-case and looking in the mirror is distracting; moreover, it proves that one has not used the best method of make-up, or the result would not need of make-up, or the result would not need to be touched up so frequently. A powdery lotion is satisfactory for the irregular skin that is not too dry; a jelly or a cream of very light texture may be better for some of us. Experiment alone can prove how one's powder should be applied in order to adhere est and longest.

Some Don'ts for the Office

In addition to general rules, a few "don'ts" might be laid down as follows: Don't forget that a pleasing telephone voice is a great as-set. Don't carry on personal conversations set. Don't carry on personal conversations on the telephone. Don't forget that many men still hate to see a girl "lounge," so sit up straight at your work. Don't discuss your employer's affairs with people who are waiting to see him. Don't use cheap slang, Don't "make-up" in the office if you can help it, and, in any case never comb your hair there; don't—don't chew gum!

EGG ROLLING SURE AT WHITE HOUSE

Dear Post Boys and Girls:

Hurrah! There is good news. President and Mrs. Coolidge have extended an invitation to the boys and girls to attend an Easter egg rolling party on Easter Monday on the White House grounds. This is all the more delightful because it was first thought that on account of the repairs going on at the executive mansion the Easter egg rolling

Now we must all try to be as careful as possible and obey the rules strictly about possible and obey the rules strictly about the part of the grounds into which you may go. I hope no boy or girl who reads this page will scatter paper, bits of food or other debris on the ground during the party. Think how rude you would consider a guest at one of your parties who would throw trash around your yard. summer a real time of pleasure.

On one of the dingy side streets of New York lived Rosalie Putnam. All day she worked in the small rooms of a broken down apartment house which she called "home." Rosalie took care of her two sisters and kept the house tidy while her mother worked as a seamstress in a large factory. From her mother she learned how to play on a violin which was the only remembrance they had of her father. Rosalie's father, when he was living, was a very accomplished musician who had given many private concerts in the houses of wealthy people. From him Rosalie had acquired a very fine sense of music. When she had finished the housework and did some minor sewing on her mother's work she would take her father's violin and practice diligently on it until she had to put it away and fix dinner for the small family.

One day while Rosalie was looking over one of the stacks of music her father had composed she found a letter that was sent him about five years ago. The portion of the letter which interested her most was:

"And so, John, if you will give me the privilege of giving your oldest daughter a musical education, I will indeed be grate-ARTHUR.

Rosalie was full of thoughts all day. She did not see the torn clothes of his sisters or the dreariness of the room; instead she saw in the areariness of the room; instead she saw in the far distance her goal—success as a musician. She could hardly wait until her mother came home and to her the hours dragged slowly. At length when her mother returned from the day's work Rosalle waited impatiently for her mother to settle down for the evening. While Rosalle was preparing dinner she related to her mother of her great fortune.

Mr. Putnam at first was undecided about her daughter's brilliantly painted plans. Sup-pose Arthur, who was her dead husband's brother, had forgotten his agreement? After a great deal of persuasion, Mrs. Putnam gave Rosalie her consent to go to see her uncle and talk to him. The next day with a little change in her tightly closed hand and an ad-dress in her pocket she set out on a journey which would mean a great deal to her in the future. Rosalie finally arrived at her uncle's home and she saw that he must be a rich man. Fearlessly she mounted the steps, rang the bell, and waited for the door to rang the bell, and waited for the door to open. The butler, after she told him who she wanted to see, took her to the library where a middle aged man sat. "Well, girlle," he asked pleasantly, "what can I do for you?" Rosalie told him her story and the man said he was glad she had come to see him, but before he could answer her he would have to see her mother.

LACK HARRY'S THRIFT.

Sir William Carruthers recently told a story about Harry Lauder's last visit to New Zealand. A class at school was asked who was the richest man in the world, and one boy shouted, "Sir Harry Lauder."

"But," said the teacher, "Vanderbilt and other Americans are much richer."

"Ay," said the youngster, "but they spend some of theirs."

It is great fun to prepare for the summertime. Make kites with your own hands, or plant a garden or plan your vacation days. Boys, learn to use your penknives. Your father and your uncle could fashion lovely little things with their knives. Boys nowadays, except the Boy Scouts, do not seem to ciate what a penknife can do if one is skillful.

Another real preparation for summer is in study of the secrets of flowers, trees, birds, and other live things. Your school books and libraries will furnish information and textbooks for this study. It is much more fun in summer roaming to know the names and habits of animals and birds and to be able to identify the wild flowers and even the blossoming weeds which beautify our countryside. countryside.

Of course, no/one likes weeds in their own yards. Do not forget that weeds so called are some of the most interesting of the growing things in the fields and woods.

What could be more beautiful than a green field full of different kinds of glossy green leaves and grasses studied with frosty effect with the most beautiful of all weeds, the flowering "Queen Anne's Lace" or what is fancifully called sometimes the "Queen's Lace Handkerchief.'

Buttercups and daisies against the back-ground of the green fields are the most ef-fective perhaps of the wild flowers. Unless you have a nice place to keep them fresh, please, oh, please, let them alone to decorate the scenery and to make joy for hundreds of people rather than to wilt unnoticed by the side of the road. THE HOUR OF RECKONING

It was Friday afternoon. No more school 'till Monday! The world outside was beautiful and carefree. Outside there was "Spring," clad in robes of green and pink and white. The birds singing seemed to lure my eyes from the Caesar book, which lay opened on my desk. The warm sunshine seemed to beckon me to come out and rest myself in Nature's lovely world. My eyes strayed from the book again. How dull it was inside. I thought, when all the world outside was one joyous spring day! I did outside was one joyous spring day! I did not hear the voice of my Latin instructor as she gave out the assignment for Monday. I was as one in a dream.

All the week-end the beautiful spring lingered and I fear her charms made me forget my friend Caesar. But everything, the birds, the flowers, the trees, the buds, the tiny, new blades of grass, the very air was calling to me and I do so love to roam unmolested in Nature's bright world. The Chicago Fire.

In 1871 a terrible fire swept the greater part of Chicago from the earth. This fire was started by a cow, being milked by a woman in a shed, kicking over a lamp which was on the floor.

An area of 2,024 acres was burned. The value of the property burned was over $187, the ecstasy of delight which filled my soul. Indeed, I forgot friend Caesar!

But Monday came and with the daily routine and last of all. Caesar. My teacher's face was already clouded and when everything got very still she said: "You may translate the first paragraph, Ruth." My heart sank. I could not do it for I had not looked at the book since that last Thursday night when I had prepared my lesson for that fatal Friday. My voice quavered as I stumbled out the words: "I haven't prepared my lesson for today, Miss Turner." The terrible voice which answered, boomed out: "You may remain after school then and do it."

Everything is very still. Everyone has long since gone and my dear Latin teacher has gone, too. But she has left her sentence behind—two long paragraphs of Caesar to translate before I may go home. I'wonder what time it is? The hour of reckoning has come.

called "Little Orphan Annie."

She was very industrious, but she was greatly imposed upon by her wicked step-One day her stepmother told her that she would give her three tasks to perform and if she did not complete them to satisfaction she would be beaten. The next day the old woman gave her an old broken basket and told her to bring it home full of grass by sundown.

On the way to the field she cried bitterly On the way to the field she cried bitteriy but while laying on the ground she felt something on her hands. To her surprise she found that it was a little spider who told her to fear not but to go for a long walk. Annie did so and while she was gone he called a group of his fastest workers to weave a web over the basket.

When Annie returned from her walk she was surprised to see her basket so strongly was surprised to see her basket so strongly fixed. She filled it with fresh grass and ran home to her stepmother. "On tomovrow," said the old woman, "you are to find a man who can drink a bucket of water at once." Annie became so frightened until she could not cry, but early the next morning she start ed out to seek for a person who could drink a bucket of water. She walked so far until she had to stop to rest. As she did so she saw a man with a bucket. He told her that he was "Jack the Drinker."

On hearing his name Annie asked him how much water he could drink at a time and he

When spring again comes smiling With enticement in her air, My wayward heart plays truant And I know will lead me where A little path runs piling Among the salt-kissed rocks, For the wanderlust is in my blood, And at dull duty mocks.

There is the sea before my eyes, The restless, booming surf and foam That has a voice which calls to me, Oh, have awhile the weary crowds Who, over hill and prairie roam, Come, follow gulls and drifting clouds, Follow my boundless open road That leads to lands unknown.

Historical Events in April. (Honorable Mention.) April has had a large share in forming American history. Since the beginning of the nation, and down to the present time, many important events have occurred during this pleasant spring month.

The famous ride of Paul Revere telling the colonists the English were coming, made famous in the poem by Longfellow, occurred April 18, 1775, the year before America, through the Declaration of Independence, made herself free from British rule. The following day, at Lexington and Concord, Mass., the minute men had their first fight with the English.

On the 24th of April, 1846, during the Mexican war, the advance toward Mexico City

Mexican war, the advance toward Mexico City was begun.

The first shot in the civil war was fired at Fort Sumter April 12, 1861. The fort was captured by the South April 14. The first bloodshed in this year was on April 19. This occurred on the anniversary of the battles of Lexington and Concord, when Massachusetts troops were attacked in Baltimone.

On April 6 and 7, 1862, the Union forces were victorious in the battle of Shiloh, Tenn. During this same year, on April 25, New Orleans was captured by the Federal fleet. Richmond, the capital of the Confederacy, was captured April 2, 1865. The same day Lee was forced to vacate Petersburg.

Lee was forced to vacate Petersburg.

Gen. Lee surrendered April 9, 1865, at Appomattox courthouse. President Lincoln was the victim of a bullet fired by Wilkes Booth, an actor, April 14, 1865, in Ford's theater in Workington.

an actor, April 14, 1865, in Ford's theater in Washington. He was carried to a residence across the street in which he died the following day. The assassin was shot to death April 26 by Sergt. Boston Corbett near Fredericksburg, Va.

To free Cuba from oppression, America declared war on Spain April 21, 1898. This war ended April 11, 1899.

Congess, at the request of Woodrow Wilson, our President, declared war on Germany April 6, 1917.

Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, was born April 13, 1743, at Shadwell, Va. James Monroe, who formulated the Monroe doctrine, was born April 28, 1758, in Westmoreland county, Va. James Buchanan, the bachelor President, was born April 23, 1791, near Mercersburg, Pa., and Ulysses S. Grant, American President and leader of the Union forces during the civil war, was born April 27, 1822, at Point Pleasant, Ohio.

It is interesting to observe that all of the great wars, with the exception of the War of great wars, with the exception of the War of 1812, have been declared in April. FRANCIS W. KERWIN (age 14).

"Well," said the old lady, "you haven't done your hardest task yet. That is to guess the name of my great-grandmother by three days' time. If in that time you haven't guessed it you will be killed immediately."

So Annie began to think of all of the queer names of which she knew.

But it happened that Annie met an old man who told her that her stepmother was having a fit. She became alarmed and asked him what she was doing. "She was standing on one leg singing a queer song," said he. "Sing one leg singing a queer song," said he. "Sing it," said Annie.

It was:
"Hey! Hey! Hoh! Hoh! My grandmother's name she doesn't know. Hey! Hey! Hoh! Hoh!

Her name is Ism Kism Ko." She became so happy until she ran home without thanking the old man. On that evening she appeared to be very worried and likewise on the second and third days.

She was given only two chances to guess he name. So Annie asked, "Is it Hobokum?"
"No," said the old woman. Then Annie stood on one leg and pointed her finger at the old lady and with a loud clear voice she sang: Hey! Hey! Hoh! Hoh!

Your grandmother's name I really know. Hey! Hey! Hoh! Hoh! Her name is Ism Kism Ko!"
At this the old woman and her house vanished and Annie found herself in the arms

Dick Gets Paid for His Honesty.

Dick Garrison, whose mother and father had died leaving him yet a boy to take care of himself, was out looking for a job, for he had lost his.

It was Christmas eve and he wanted to celebrate Christmas like every one else. But celebrate Christmas like every one else. But how could he without any money and a job? He started to go home, when he saw at his feet a man's pocketbook. When he opened it he found about a dollar in change and a hundred dollars in bills, and a card which had the man's name and address on it. He read the address and started at once for the plaza where the man lived. After walking five blocks he came to the house. A middleaged woman answered the bell. Later Dick learned she was the man's wife.

"Is Mr. Hannard home," Dick asked.
"Mr. Hannard is not at home, but if you

"Mr. Hannard is not at home, but if you will wait he will be back in a few minutes," the woman replied.

After waiting about ten minutes Dick heard some one come in, and Mr. Hannard entered the room.

"I found your pocketbook," stated Dick.
"How can I ever repay you," Mr. Hannard said.

Dick told him he was out of a job. The next day Dick was working as a clerk in a bank. He ate his Christmas dinner at the Hannard home.

"It is with great pleasure that I express my admiration for 'MAYBELLINE' which I have used for some time with most gratifying results. It is truly an indispensable beauty aid to the woman who would look her best."

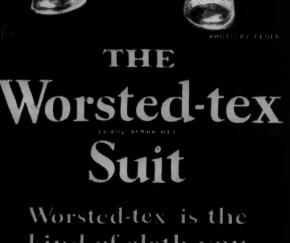

June Rich

"MAYBELLINE"—as though by magic, would make a wonder-ful difference in your attractiveness. Try it and see! Instantly, your lashes will ap-pear naturally long, dark and luxuriant. And your eyes will become expressive deep shadowy pools of enchanting loveliness. Nothing else gives quite the same effect as "MAYBELLINE" because the formula of this wondrous beauty aid is secret.

Moreover, "MAYBELLINE" is perfectly harmless, having been used for many years by millions of beautiful women in all parts of the world. Obtain it in either the solid form or the waterproof liquid Black or Brown - 75c at all toilet goods counters.
